Corr Acts to Hurry Mayor's Election

LEAVES TO SPUR COUNCIL GROUP AT HOT SPRINGS

Acting Mayor Frank J. Corr departed for Hot Springs, Ark., last night to confer with and bring back to Chicago the five members of an aldermanic committee who are there planning the organization of the new city council. Mr. Corr expects to bring them back several days earlier than their intended return, so that a new mayor can be selected promptly—perhaps this week.

Acting Mayor Corr lacks authority to sign tax warrants through which city and school employés are paid. He was named to fill the chair temporarily and before the general assembly acted to authorize the city council to name a mayor for the rest of Anton J. Cermak's term. Hence Mr. Corr's anxiety to have action by the council under the new state law.

Teachers Parade Again.

As an incident in the situation, several hundred school teachers and others yesterday participated in a parade and in one of their demonstrations interfered with A Century of Progress flag raising in Michigan avenue. Before that outbreak, however, the acting mayor had decided to go to Hot Springs to hasten the aldermanic committee's deliberations.

Mr. Corr explained the urgency before leaving for the Arkansas resort. It was indicated that he would not take much of a hand in organizing the new city council, but that he would try to speed the process and bring the committee to Chicago Wednesday morning. Should the committee return at that time it seemed probable a council meeting to elect Mayor Cermak's successor would be held Thursday or Friday.

Await Signing of Warrants.

At the city hall it was tacitly admitted that of the many problems awaiting the election of a permanent mayor the teachers' demands are among the most pressing. Actual money is available to pay the teachers a week's salary and other employés for two weeks if auth rity existed for signing the warrants.

The day's demonstrating by the teachers began in midmorning when they flocked into the mayor's office in the city hall and asked an audience with Mr. Corr. He granted their request and was met by hoots and shouts when he spoke to them. They left the office, however, after accepting his suggestion that a committee of five of their number meet with him on Wednesday at 10 a. m. to discuss the pay prospects.

March Through Bank Lobby.

Then many of the group marched to the First National bank and paraded through the lobby, carrying their pay signs. The next stop was at Congress street and Michigan avenue at 1 p. m., where their presence all but halted the first raising of A Century of Progress flag, for which ceremonies had been planned.

Shouting and waving their banners, the teachers milled before the platform and neither Acting Mayor Corr, Rufus C. Dawes, president of the World's Fair, nor Edward J. Kelly, president of the south park board, made their speeches. John Pane-Gasser, operatic tenor, was to have sung "The Star Spangled Banner," but he did not attempt it because of the crowd. Some order was restored, however, when the band of the Board of Trade post of the American Legion played the anthem.

Tie Up Loop Traffic.

That was the only scheduled part of the ceremonies to be completed. When officials had left the teachers remained for a time, making speeches to themselves.

Later they marched back to State and Madison streets and congregated in the center of the intersection. Traffic was snarled for blocks while the teachers sang and shouted their demands. Street car motormen clanged their gongs, auto horns blared and pedestrians jammed into a tangle.

At length the teachers gave up this position and marched back to Michigan avenue and south to the Art Institute, where they had hardly resumed their speeches and songs when a sudden, driving rain forced them to break up. Before they straggled away, however, the group agreed to meet Tuesday at 4 p. m. at city hall.

THE AGE OF ROMANCE

JUDGE UPHOLDS WRIT AGAINST SALES TAX; KERNER WILL APPEAL

Edwardsville, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—The Illinois 3 per cent sales tax was held unconstitutional by Circuit Judge Jesse R. Brown today. He overruled the state's demurrer to a temporary injunction he issued March 29 restraining collection of the tax.

Judge Brown spoke of the tax as class legislation contrary to public policy, and in the case of small sales amounting to confiscation.

His ruling followed a hearing in which the tax law, effective April 1, was attacked by five attorneys for Irving Winter of Alton, president of the Council of Illinois Merchants, and defended by counsel for the state, headed by Assistant Attorney General M. S. Winning.

Winning said an immediate appeal would be taken to the Supreme court. He hoped for a decision before May 15 when merchants are due to make their first payments of the tax. Meanwhile, merchants will continue to collect it, as advised by state authorities.

In giving his oral decision Judge Brown said the provisions of the sales tax law are unconstitutional in some respects in that they specify that in Chicago the proceeds of the tax should first go to the emergency relief fund, but that if at any time there is no further need for relief, the proceeds shall revert to the elementary schools. The constitution, Judge Brown said, prohibits transferring money from one fund to another.

BREWERS TAKE BITTER REVENGE ON OPPOSITION

Los Angeles, Cal., April 8.—[Special.]—Sometimes, remarkable as it may seem, a newspaper reporter—even a flock of them—may know more than is told. So the Tragedy of Thursday Night just became public today.

The Los Angeles Brewing company entertained as Friday morning came on. It was open house for actors and newspaper men, complimentary to Jean Harlow.

They came by battalions and squadrons; by regiments and small armies. Came the boys from the Times, a strong "dry" paper. Husky guards met them at the gates.

"Outside! you!" said the guards—"out! Your paper has always fought beer. You did not like us and we don't like you."

Thirsty reporters and copy readers wept as they watched the luckier opposition workers and the movie people march in to foaming steins.

Life in Camp Cheers Rookies of Work Army

Fort Washington, Md., April 8.—[U.P.]—Blistered hands and sunburned necks brought paradoxical pleasure today to the first members of President Roosevelt's army of 250,000 amateur woodsmen.

It has been so long since any of them had any work they enjoyed the blisters rake handles raised on their palms. They rubbed their reddened necks gleefully.

They rose with the sun. They dressed in blue jeans and khaki shirts. They ate meat and gravy and bread and oatmeal for breakfast. They policed their tents, smoothed the covers on their mattresses of straw. Then they explored the historic fort.

Where Washington Drank.

Across the Potomac they could see Mount Vernon, ancestral home of George Washington. Deep in the gray walls of the fortress they discovered the cool, dark room where Washington used to quaff an occasional tankard of beer.

"It's all sort of flabbergasting," said young William Minor, who was a Washington, D. C., electrician before the depression. "Only yesterday we were just a bunch of bums, wondering where we'd get our next meal. "And now look at us—walking right where George Washington walked, eating the kind of food he ate and working where he worked."

Minor and six companions arrived here late yesterday. Fifty more men came down the Potomac from Washington in a navy boat today. More will arrive in the days to come. Lieut. Col. Louis A. Kunzig expects 1,350 men in all. They will go into the forests after two weeks of "hardening" under army supervision.

Looks Good to Harry.

He had finished examining the fort. His lunch had consisted of vegetable soup, baked beans, beets, boiled potatoes, custard pie and milk.

After lunch the pioneers in the presidential experiment went to the fort physician for "shots" against typhoid fever. Then they rested on the lawns for an hour or so. After that they began "policing" [cleaning] their camp. They knew all the army phrases, but they were a little awkward with their hoes and shovels.

The rest of the afternoon they spent preparing a vast, green painted mess hall for the arrival of their companions. They scrubbed the floors, the tables and the benches. They washed the windows and rinsed the dishes. They got their first taste of kitchen police. They helped the cooks peel potatoes.

Then they trooped down the winding roads, under the blossoming cherry trees and to the edge of the river, which sparkled blue. They sprawled on the grass to await the coming of their companions from the city.

They didn't have to wait long. A white navy boat tooted, puffed around a bend and finally nudged against the wharf, decorated with ancient cannons.

The 50 city boys piled off, scrambled up the banks and deluged the seven "veterans" with questions.

'Clear World Trade Channels'—Hull.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Hull, in an interview of extraordinary frankness today, held the United States to blame for leading the world into an economic mess. He thus found logical grounds for an insistence that the United State is to lead the world back to prosperity.

The business of assuming this new leadership went along another long stride today. America's two neighbors, Canada and Mexico, were added to the list of nations invited to send representatives for economic conversations with President Roosevelt and his state department aids.

The list is now complete, it was announced. It includes eleven powers, the nine others being Great Britain, whose premier, Ramsay MacDonald, arrives on April 23; France, Italy, Germany, China, Japan, Argentina, Brazil and Chile.

Secretary Hull, expressing the hope that these separate preliminary discussions at Washington will lead to a great historic trade pact at the world economic conference in London during June, declared it was time all nations realized the folly of nationalism, of isolation, of building walls around themselves. Such walls, he said, do not retain prosperity within them. The London conference probably will start June 15, and it is rumored that Norman H. Davis will head the U. S. delegates.

Would Reopen Trade Channels.

The administration program for world progress, he revealed, is to throw wide the doors of international commerce, to rid the farmers of their crushing surpluses; to give back work in the factories and the mines to twelve millions idle, by selling their surplus products abroad, to put all business on what he termed a more healthy and wholesome level.

Secretary Hull declared that he believed the United States was one of the original leaders in championing what he termed a policy of economic nationalism, and in running that policy to seed during the last 10 or 12 years.

Having assumed that lead in helping to lead the world in a direction, where every nation now finds itself prostrate economically, the secretary declared, it is now high time that this country saw to it that the policy was reversed, and other nations, he believed, would agree.

May Reverse Policies.

The secretary of state then declared, the nations well could afford to reverse that process and readjust tariffs to a level of moderation, decreasing all other obstructions that accompany the policy of isolation.

The first object of the Roosevelt administration in opening individual conversation with principal nations, Mr. Hull emphasized, is to establish a clear policy for the world conference. He disclaimed any intention of having it appear that the United States was inviting the world to conference, since that would undermine the major purposes of the conference itself. But, he wanted it made plain to all people, that this country and the other countries were earnestly embarking on a new order of things which they felt confidently would be immensely helpful.

Would Exchange Surpluses.

Pointing out that the whole purpose of the program is to exchange surpluses between nations, Secretary Hull declared that the 50 billions in world trade had shrunk to 12 to 18 billions, with the United States bearing a sixth of that loss. He added that if this country had preserved the 6 to 8 billions in lost trade it would be able to send out surplus automobiles, wheat, cotton, machinery, oil, copper, and coal, and a number of other products, and that the nation would be in a vastly different situation thereby.

When it was pointed out to the secretary that the pending farm bill is intended to increase the prices of agricultural products, and that consequently tariff barriers could not be lowered to admit foreign goods at cheaper rates, Mr. Hull evaded a direct answer, simply reiterating that it will be necessary for readjustments to be made, and that he could not now discuss specific cases.

He declared that with nations fenced off from each other to a maximum extent, financially and commercially, it was impossible for them to

Alabama Jury Deadlocked in Rape Case

Decatur, Ala., April 8.—[Special.]—The jury in the trial of Heywood Patterson, first of the nine Negroes to face retrial in the "Scottsboro case," which has attracted national and even international attention since April 9, 1931, when the group was found guilty of rape and sentenced to death, was locked up for the night at 11:30 o'clock.

The jury had been deliberating more than ten hours.

The case was given the jury during the afternoon by Judge James E. Horton with instructions to ignore the color of the defendant, the identity of the lawyers, and other irrelevant factors and simply to see "that justice is done." Tonight, under state military guard, the prisoners, except Patterson, were removed to Birmingham.

Lawyers Tell of Threats.

While the decision on Patterson was being debated two defense attorneys, Joseph R. Brodsky and Samuel Leibowitz of New York, informed Judge Horton that fiery crosses had been burned on the hills of Huntsville and Scottsboro last night and that Brodsky had been threatened with death for his participation in the trial.

Leibowitz added that he had been informed a mob of 200 men tried to enter Decatur last night and that "intervention of the National Guard" prevented them from finishing their march. The attorneys declared the speech yesterday of Solicitor Wade Wright, who charged that the Scottsboro defense was being financed "with Jew money" had aroused the antagonism of Alabamans.

While the arguments went on inside the courthouse the National Guardsmen outside were alert. All was peaceful, however, and no soldier has had to draw a weapon since the trial began.

Granted Separate Trials.

Six of the others indicted with Patterson in the rape case were granted separate trials by Judge Horton. The New York attorneys moved, in view of the state of public sentiment in Decatur, that the later trials be held in Birmingham. The motion for change of venue was overruled. He said that the defendants and attorneys would be fully protected here.

In closing arguments in the Patterson trial, the defense charged that the whole case was "a frameup by two irresponsible women."

It was mainly on the testimony of these women, Mrs. Victoria Price and Ruby Bates, that the conviction of the nine Negroes was based in the previous trial. In this later trial, Mrs. Price still maintained that she had been raped in a railroad box car by Patterson.

Ruby, on the contrary, appeared unexpectedly in court and admitted from the stand she had lied in the previous trial. She declared she had not been molested by the Negroes and that she had not seen them harm Mrs. Price.

The state demanded the death penalty again for Patterson.

COLLIE'S BARKS INTO TELEPHONE BRING RESCUERS

"There's a dog barking into the telephone at 7543 North Western avenue," she reported. "Perhaps they need help there."

Sergt. McSween sent Policemen Thomas Naughton and John Sevick to the Western avenue address. They heard the dog barking as they arrived. There was no other response to their knocks on the door, so they forced their way into the apartment.

They found Mrs. Mildred King, 40 years old, unconscious on the floor. A large collie dog—named Kayo—was standing over a telephone instrument on the floor. Policemen Naughton and Sevick revived Mrs. King. She told them she had fainted after returning from taking her husband, H. B. King, a world war aviator, to the Edward Hines Jr. hospital.

The rest of the story belongs to Kayo, the collie. Seeing his mistress unconscious on the floor, Kayo, the police said, had knocked over the desk telephone and barked into it.

Old Monte Carlo Casino, Open Since 1862, May Shut

MONTE CARLO, April 8.—(AP)—For the first time since it was built in 1862, the famous Monte Carlo casino may be closed. The matter will be decided at the annual meeting of directors on April 19. It is thought probable that the old casino will be closed for from three to six months for "spring cleaning," but may not reopen until there are prospects that more money will flow across the roulette tables.

PISTOL SHOTS HALT HIJACKERS IN CITY STREETS

Steal Cargo of Brew on Country Road.

$10,000,000 for U.S.

Sale of legal 3.2 beer in the chief cities of the United States and to millions of persons in country districts, has enriched the federal treasury by an estimated $10,000,000 from taxes. [Story on page 2.]

Police last night fought and defeated beer hijackers who tried to seize a truck containing 250 cases of 3.2 brew in a west side street. It was the first beer hijacking attempt in Chicago since the 3.2 brew became legal.

Earlier in the day a gang of hijackers seized a truckload of 400 cases of beer in Lake county and held two truck drivers prisoners for nearly six hours. The hijackings followed by less than 24 hours the first bombing of the new beer era—that of the plant of the Prima company at 825 Blackhawk street.

The troubles with racketeers were mere incidents, however, in the vast volume of business which was stimulated by the new brew. The loop last night presented a scene of new life. It was one of the busiest Saturdays in many months.

Few Arrests Made.

Although there was a new spirit and new life in business places throughout the city police reported that the new brew had resulted in little drunkenness. The number of arrests was below normal. In the Des Plaines street district not an arrest was made and in the Hyde Park district, where 24 were arrested for drunkennes last Saturday night, no one was seized for that offense last night.

The west side hijacking was not completed because a half dozen policemen saw the theft. After a chase in which the police fired a dozen shots they forced the hoodlums to abandon their prize.

The victims of the hijackers were Albert Mueller and Elgert Hines, both of Eau Claire, Wis. During the evening they drove to the Atlas brewery at 2107 Blue Island avenue and purchased the 250 cases of beer to take back to Eau Claire.

They started northward in Western avenue. At Lexington street three men riding in a new car forced their truck to the curb.

Policemen See Seizure.

One man brandishing a revolver boarded the truck and forced Mueller and Hines to get into the car of his two companions. Then the hoodlum turned the truck about and drove south in Western avenue followed by his confederates and their two prisoners in the automobile. The turnabout wrecked the hoodlums' hopes for a getaway, however, for their actions had been seen by Sergt. Edward Keorner and Policeman Cornelius Scanlon, who were standing a block south.

As the hoodlums reached Polk street, the policemen ordered them to halt, but both truck and car sped away, going east in Polk. At that moment a squad car containing Policemen Edward Quinn and Luttrell White took up the chase. All four policemen opened fire on the hijackers. At Claremont avenue the hoodlum driving the truck stopped, leaped upon the running board of the car carrying his companions and the prisoners, and escaped with them. The truck was recovered.

Mueller and Hines, the captives, were driven to 35th street and 52d avenue, Cicero, and ejected from the hoodlum car with warnings not to make identifications. The two reported to police and continued to Eau Claire.

Hijack Load in Lake County.

The Lake county hijacking was more successful. Last night twenty deputy sheriffs under the direction of Sheriff Lester Tiffany were searching the county for a sedan carrying four armed men who had seized the truckload of 400 cases of beer, bound from a Milwaukee brewery to Chicago, and had kidnaped the two truck drivers.

The hijacking occurred at Green Bay and Rockland roads just west of Lake Bluff. There the four hoodlums, riding in a sedan with siren shrieking, halted the beer truck, which was being driven by William Sturm, 5115 South Fairfield avenue, Chicago, an employé of the Barr Transfer company, 6218 South Ashland avenue.

Two of the gunmen flashed stars and took charge of the truck. Sturm was compelled to lie on the floor of the sedan.

At Waukegan and Rockland roads

another truck of the Barr company had broken down sometime before. Walter Steck, 448 West 57th street, also a driver for the Barr company, had gone out from Chicago to make repairs or tow it in. Steck was at work by the road when the hijacked truck and its guards sped past.

His suspicions aroused when the drivers did not turn south in Waukegan road toward Chicago, but kept on west toward Libertyville, Steck jumped in his own automobile and followed. A short distance beyond, the hijackers in the sedan, apparently recognizing Steck as a pursuer, stopped and menaced him with their guns. He was forced to abandon his car and join Sturm in the sedan.

After about five hours the two prisoners were released near Fox Lake.

The two beer hijackings were regarded by the authorities as mere sporadic thefts and not the result of any organized gang activities such as had been feared before the advent of the new beer. There had been reports that gangsters, in their desperate efforts to control legal beer as they had the wildcat traffic, had planned wholesale piracy on the fleets of trucks when they swarmed the highways. Extra police were on duty to prevent such piracy, but the two hijackings one of which failed, were all that were reported in the Chicago area.

Courtney Investigates Bombing.

In Chicago State's Attorney Courtney assumed charge of the investigation into the bombing of the Prima brewery in accordance with his pledge to protect legitimate brewers from hoodlum interference. The state's attorney summoned officials of the Chicago Brewers' association to his office and conferred with them. He declined to divulge the results of his activity for the present, however, saying he would act tomorrow, when arrest warrants were more easily procurable.

From other sources it was learned that union labor "muscle" men are at work trying to turn previously organized brewery workers into other affiliations. One of the hottest fights, it is said, has been waged over the Chicago Brewery Drivers' union, an independent organization headed by Raymond Schoessling. Whether the labor trouble led to the bombing was a question for which the state's attorney sought an answer.

The possibility that gangsters set the bomb was being looked into by the authorities. It is known that gangs have been trying to seize control of distribution from some of the breweries. These gangsters have used threats to make dealers order beer from them. The hoodlums, it is reported, then planned to force brewers to accept them as their agents on the ground that they had customers ready to buy. No hoodlums, according to reports, succeeded in selling themselves as agents to any reputable brewery. The failure of such a s cheme might provoke bombings or other terroristic acts, police said.

MILLIONS FLOW INTO TRADE

The first forty-eight hours of 3.2 per cent beer has pepped up business all over the nation, pumping $25,000,000 or more into channels of trade. This, in high light, was the tenor of national surveys completed by press associations last night on the infant beer era.

More than 60,000,000 bottles of the amber drink have been consumed by a thirsty public in twenty-one states and the District of Columbia where beer is legal, according to the Brewery Age. Brewers have disposed of 2,000,000 barrels as well, or about one-third the available supply.

The possibility of a beer shortage was foreseen by Joseph Dubin, editor of the Brewery Age. Unless brewers get a respite from the deluge of present orders, he said, another fortnight will see the present stocks of aged beer all gone.

Reports from Cities.

While the shortage threat here isn't so immediate, other cities were not so fortunate. The supply was exhausted last night in Los Angeles, there being ten orders for a bottle for every available one. More than 250,000 cases and 1,600 barrels were sold out. In Pittsburgh, there was a scarcity of bottles. Baltimore's two breweries were forced to decline all further orders for immediate delivery. In St. Louis, rival of Milwaukee for honors as the beer making capital, many cafés pleaded vainly for more supplies, and the brewers were working almost to exhaustion. Cities in Kentucky outside of Louisville face a drought, and even Cincinnati stared possible aridity.

Meanwhile the hum of Chicago breweries, all far behind on their orders, quickened the business pulse of the city. Hundreds of carpenters and plumbers have found jobs installing bars in clubs, hotels and restaurants, it was learned, and an incipient "beer boomlet" was detected in real estate.

"It would be exaggerating to say that beer will bring on a boom," Mr. Levy observed. "There is no question, however, but that it will cause a pick-up in real estate. Many who contemplate opening restaurants and food shops with the return of beer, have had their determination settled when they observed the rushing business being done by those now open.

"The delay of the legislature in passing a licensing law has held up the closing of many leases. The tavern keepers naturally want to know how much their licenses will be and how great the state and local beer tax will be before they invest in bars, counters, and other equipment."

Lively Scene in Loop.

The rush of business in Chicago hotels, restaurants, night clubs and cafes continued last night. It was one of the liveliest Saturday nights the loop has seen in many a month. Dining rooms in the big hotels continued to have a big business yesterday. Nine out of every ten restaurant patrons in the hotels ordered beer. The old loop bars were jammed.

Maurice C. Cohn, secretary of the Waiters' union, sounded a happy note when he announced "Every one of our 1,500 members is working." A leading hotel man observed that the customers in hotel cafes were "eating more on account of beer." One cafeteria hired an extra man whose sole duties were to take the caps off of bottles.

City Collector Edward J. Kaindl moved yesterday to collect a $150 beverage license tax from thousands of pharmacies, groceries and delicatessens which, he said, were selling beer for consumption on the premises. The belief of many store owners that a food dispensing license will suffice is erroneous, Mr. Kaindl said.

AL SMITH GETS A BIG SAMPLE OF NEW BEER

ROCKEFELLER JR. ASKS REVERSAL OF INCOME TAX CASE DECISIONS

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—John D. Rockefeller Jr., today asked the United States board of tax appeals to review an income tax deficiency of $828,708 levied against him by the bureau of internal revenue.

The deficiency assessment was made on Feb. 11 last, and involves Mr. Rockefeller's income tax payment for the year 1930. Due to the crowded docket of the board of tax appeals it may be more than a year until the case comes up for argument.

The financier, according to the government, did not make adequate tax returns on a profit of $3,075,503 which he realized from a transaction in Bankers Trust company stock. A part of the alleged deficiency arose also, according to the bureau of internal revenue, from Mr. Rockefeller's deduction of certain charitable donations from his taxable income.

BARS BEER FROM RESTAURANTS IN U. S. POSTOFFICES

Washington, D. C., April 8.—Joseph C. O'Mahoney, first assistant postmaster general, today in the absence of Postmaster General James A. Farley issued an order prohibiting the sale of beer in any restaurants or other government controlled stores operated in postoffice owned properties anywhere in the country.

The order was issued, Mr. O'Mahoney said, after he had been advised that beer was being sold in the Chicago postoffice restaurant, not by the authority from Washington, but under verbal permission granted by Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder.

"Restaurants in postoffices," said Mr. O'Mahoney, "are conducted for the benefit and convenience of employés. They are service institutions pure and simple and are not intended to be patronized by the general public.

"It is my opinion, therefore, that beer should not be added to the menu of federal employés' coöperative cafeterias."

LEGISLATURE DELAYS ACTION IN NEW YORK ON CONTROL OF BEER

Albany, N. Y., April 8.—[Special.]—Gov. Lehman and legislative leaders decided late tonight that it would be impossible to complete a compromise beer regulatory measure in time to have it passed before Palm Sunday and put the legislation over until Monday morning.

The compromise bill as now tentatively drawn contains features of both the governor's bill and the Dunkel bill to which the Republicans gave their support and which will accompany the governor's bill to the scrap heap. The governor and the Republicans tonight each claim to have had the best of the bargain.

Among changes from the governor's original plan is one relating to the penalties for violations of the control act. In the governor's bill a first offense was made a misdemeanor and second and subsequent offenses a felony. Under the compromise a second offense is construed as a misdemeanor also.

It is expected that a month will elapse before the measure becomes operative. The state, however, will continue to collect the $1 a barrel tax on the brewers. When the bill becomes effective the licensing power will pass from localities to the state.

GERMANS HAVE A WORD FOR GOOD BEER: SUFFIGKEIT

An Expert Explains Common Terms of Trade.

For the enlightenment of those citizens whose acquaintanceship with real beer dates from Thursday midnight and to refresh the memory of those who observed the bans of the Volstead act for thirteen years, Dr. Robert Wahl, head of the Wahl Institute of Brewing Technology, yesterday explained some of the common terms used in the beer trade.

Most American beers are of the "pale" or "extra pale" type, Dr. Wahl pointed out. These terms refer to the light color and body of the beer in contrast to the heavy, dark beers of the German and English types which are necessarily of a higher alcoholic content.

Experiment on Heavy Beer.

"Drinkers of beer in America must be content with the pale or Pilsener type of beer until a dark, heavy beer of Muenchener or Culbacher type can be manufactured with not more than 3.2 per cent alcoholic content by weight,' Dr. Wahl said. "We are now making researches in our laboratories for the purpos eof producing beers which will have the body and flavor of porter and stout (the heavy, dark beers) with the low alcoholic content demanded by law."

The Culmbacher beer is the heaviest and darkest of the German beers, Dr. Wahl said. It is almost black in color, contains a high percentage of malt, and is about 5.5 per cent alcoholic content by weight. The problem of the brewers is to reduce this alcoholic content without impairing the flavor or body of the beer, Dr. Wahl said.

Muenchener beer is dark and heavy but not so much so as the Culmbacher beer, Dr. Wahl declared. These beers are meals inthemselves, he said.

"'Lager' beer is a light beer containing a small proportion of hops and is manufactured by prolonged fermentation over a period of four to six months at low temperatures," he continued. "'Bock' beer is an extra strong beer made in a shorter time. 'Weiss' beer is a light, whitish beer made from wheat malt."

English ale, beer and stout cannot be imported under the present law, Dr. Wahl said, nor can the heavy, German beers unless the alcoholic content is reduced.

A Slightly Bitter Taste.

"The 'pale' beer is the drink to be taken with food," Dr. Wahl said. "In testing this beer, we check its effervescence, its clarity, its sparkle first. If these are rated good, we examine the head of foam which must be creamy with small, fine bubbles.

"The color must be a light amber and the flavor fine with a slightly bitter taste. It must not taste sweet or tart or insipid, but must have a mellowness and zest. Finally, and perhaps most important, it must have what the Germans call 'suffigkeit'."

"And what does that mean?" he was asked.

"The best translation of the word I have heard is this," Dr. Wahl answered. "A beer has 'suffigkeit' when you can drink it all afternoon and still not have enough."

AMERICAN MARINES IN CHINA CELEBRATE BEER WITH CAMELS

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

PEIPING, April 8.—Celebrating the return of beer in their home country, the Thirty-ninth company, United States Marine corps, 500 strong, constituting the legation guard, mounted camels and held a parade and race on the glacis surrounding the legation quarter.

After the parade the marines, commanded by Capt. Lloyd Puch, abandoned the bewildered camels and adjourned to the German hotel Dunord, where, with their executive officer, Maj. John Arthur, they quaffed foaming flagons and toasted their fortunate comrades at home.

The camel corps is not expected to be a permanent unit of the legation guard.

FLOW OF BEER BRINGS MILLIONS FOR UNCLE SAM

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—The United States treasury today joined in the general jubilation at the return of legal beer. Unofficial estimates disclosed that the internal revenue from the new brew probably would exceed all expectations.

The outlook for beer revenue was all the more heartening as it came coincidentally with a recapitulation of collections, showing a remarkable improvement in the government's financial position in the last few months, resulting from a steady flow from the miscellaneous taxes imposed last year.

Based on Estimates.

The beer taxes will not be noticeable in any substantial sums in returns for the next few days, owing to the delay in receipts clearing through the internal revenue collectors and the several reserve banks, but on the basis of news reports from all sections of the country treasury officials figured that the federal tax for the first day would run around $7,500,000 and a total of $10,000,000 for the first two days. The return for this single day would be equivalent to three weeks' collection under the most optimistic predictions for the first year.

Other departments of the government were convinced, likewise, that original claims for the "reviving" qualities of the new beverage for business in general had been underestimated, employment has gained more readily than had been anticipated and reports of business generally have shown a decided upward trend, due, in a great measure, in the opinion of government officials to the sudden and marked revival of an outstanding industry.

Newark Brewery Closed by Dispute with Its Engineers

Newark, N. J., April 8.—[Special.]—The Kreuger brewery in Newark, one of New Jersey's largest brew manufacturing plants, closed its doors tonight, due to labor troubles. The engineers and firemen's union brought the matter to a head.

TWO MUSHROOMS WITH 'KICK' ON 'TAP' IN WOODS

Intoxicating Species Are Described by Teacher.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

When members of the Illinois chapter of the Wild Flower Preservation Society of America search the sylvan dells this spring and summer for rare wild flowers some of them perhaps will be on the alert to identify two species of mushrooms which are akin, in their effect upon the consumer, to an intoxicating beverage.

The members learned about mushrooms yesterday from Dr. V. O. Graham, chairman of the Illinois Conservation council and principal of Schubert school, 2741 North Long avenue. Dr. Graham gave an illustrated lecture at the society's annual meeting in Marshall Field & Co.'s tearoom. He discussed varieties of mushrooms that are to be found in abundance in the wooded areas of rural Chicagoland.

Become Hilarious and Stagger.

"I wouldn't have dared mention this," he confided, "if three point two beer hadn't become legal. But now there would be no point in going on a mushroom jag. I heard stories years ago of intoxicating mushrooms from persons who had tried them; mushrooms so intoxicating that the imbiber became hilarious and staggered after having eaten a few.

"In the study of mushrooms I found that of 500 known varieties two are intoxicating. This intoxication is not caused by alcohol, but by certain narcotic properties.

"One of these is the fiberhead mushroom, which is small, brown in color with black fiber scales over the cap, and is found in deeply wooded places. The other is the butterfly panaeolus mushroom, two or three inches in diameter, almost pure white, and shaped like an umbrella."

Dr. Graham warned against indiscriminate picking of mushrooms, asserting that only an expert can select the nonpoisonous ones. While there are 500 varieties and 98 per cent of them are edible, he said, the danger lies in being unable to single out the deadly 2 per cent.

Many Edible Varieties.

"The experienced mushroom hunter can find many edible varieties in the wooded dunes, which is one of the richest regions for mushrooms during the wet season," he said. "But here again the expert must do the selecting. In the dune country is the deadly Death Cup mushroom, a characteristic of which is the cup at the bottom of the stem.

"The fly mushroom is another that may produce ill effects. This is so called because flies gather on the cap, suck the juices, and fall dead.

"The jack o' lantern mushroom is another which some people may eat with no ill effects and which may make others quite ill. When seen in the dark these mushrooms give forth light. Some say the gills are phosphorescent and others that the light is due to bacteria in the cells."

The Wild Flower Preservation society aims to protect native plant life in Illinois through lectures, field trips, distribution of literature, and programs in schools and clubs. Mrs. Charles B. Cory was reëlected president of the society.

FIGHT TO SAVE LIFE OF WOMAN BY "IRON LUNG"

For nine days Mrs. Caroline La Plante, 37 years old, of 1826 South Cuyler avenue, Berwyn, has been kept alive in a Drinker respirator, otherwise known as an "iron lung," at the Frances E. Willard hospital and physicians are hopeful that her life might yet be saved.

Mrs. La Plante, mother of two children, is suffering from paralysis of the respiratory muscles. This condition is aggravated by inflammation of the brain. She was stricken on March 31 and taken to the Oak Park hospital. While there her breathing and pulse ceased for more than a minute, but life was sustained by artificial respiration. Later she was taken to the Willard hospital and placed in the respirator.

Since that day Mrs. La Plante has shown some improvement, but because of the brain complications she is said not to be breathing through coördination with her will. Physicians and attendants are concentrating their efforts on getting her to breathe when possible through her own natural efforts.

FAIR IS TO SHOW HOW ELECTRICITY RE-MADE WORLD

Edison Stands Out as Genius of Ages.

About six centuries before Christ one of the seven wise men of Greece, by name Thales of Miletus, noted that when a piece of amber is rubbed it attracts particles of various materials to it. This is the first historical record of electrical phenomena as such. Seven hundred years later another Greek, Hero of Alexandria, constructed the first steam turbine.

It took more than eighteen centuries for these two ideas to be joined, but in the thirty years since they were brought together in practical union they have remade our world. A comprehensive picture of how they have remade the world will be presented in the exhibit of the electrical central station industry at A Century of Progress exposition this summer.

Diorama Feature of Exhibit.

Historically, the development of electricity to its present status as the dispeller of darkness and the driver of machines is an absorbing story full of the names of great men from Thales to the deathless Edison, whose genius crowns them all.

The exhibits will occupy all of the semicircular second floor, a space about 550 feet long, of the main electrical building of the exposition. Conspicuous among the many features of the exhibit will be the largest diorama ever made, ninety feet in length, depicting the production and distribution of electricity.

The diorama will be animated with lights and flowing water, spinning turbines and all the movement of busy life.

Questions Answered.

Working models of basic devices and machines designed to show physical processes in the production of electricity will answer questions by demonstration as fast as they spring into the mind of the visitor. Flows of vari-colored liquids in a simplified glass replica of a boiler will show how water is turned into steam to drive power plant turbines. A large size section of a turbo-generator with wheels and rotor in full relief will expose the interior mechanism of this most important machine.

The utilization of electricity, however, is the major burden of the exhibit. There are six main divisions of the utilization display. They show severally the uses of electricity.

The use of electricity in the home will be demonstrated in three full sized displays of living room, kitchen, and basement. In the living room will be shown the contributions of electricity to comfort and to beauty in the modern idea of gracious home life.

A feature of the kitchen that should emphasize the difference between conditions then and now in the place where the average woman spends many of her waking hours will be a perspective from the electrical kitchen of today, with all its equipment and appliances gleaming in bright metal and enamel, into the kitchen of yesterday that, in comparison, will appear a primitive workhouse indeed.

Urge to Make Things.

Although the basement will have its utilitarian equipments for laundry, heater room and air conditioning, its chief charm to the masculine eye will be the workshop containing power driven tools with which the home craftsman can fully satisfy his urge to make things.

A complete set of farm buildings in model size showing the latest developments in design of such buildings will give an overall picture of farm electrification.

A particularly interesting section of the farm electrification section, presented with the assistance of Purdue university, will be electrical uses in plant husbandry such as soil heating, irradiation, etc.

Illumination Control.

General illumination controlled by the photo-electric cell, or "electric eye," and blackboard lighting for the conservation of child eyesight will feature the model school room.

One feature of the hospital display in which the uses of electricity in medicine and surgery will be shown will be a modern operating room. By periscope devices each student in the rows of seats that rise around the operating theater can see every detail of the operation while he listens to the explanations of the surgeon in charge.

Five model stores will show the most modern methods of lighting commercial places.

NEW SWITCHBOARD AT CAPITOL OPENED BY THE PRESIDENT

Washington, D. C., April 8.—(AP)—To President Roosevelt went the first call today through the new telephone switchboard just opened at the capitol to handle calls of senators and representatives.

South Trimble, clerk of the house, made the call.

"Is this South?" the President was reported to have asked.

"Yes," Trimble replied. "We have just transferred the switchboard from the old house office building to the new house office building, with 30 beautiful young ladies, and I had the honor of placing the first call."

The President sent his best regards to the 30 young ladies operating the board. That ended the first conversation through the new quarters.

More Records Introduced in City State Bank Trial

Minutes of directors' meetings of the now defunct City State bank from 1923 to 1929, when the institution was closed, were read into the record of the trial of five former officials of the bank before Judge Francis B. Allegretti yesterday. The five defendants, Seymour Stedman, Alexander Jarema, former vice presidents, and Morrison Castle, William C. Hartray, and Edwin G. Rellihen, directors, are charged with accepting deposits while knowing the bank was insolvent. Assistant State's Attorney Earle Hurley announced at the close of the court session that the state probably would close its case early this week.

FINEST HORSES IN U. S. TO BE SHOWN AT FAIR

Exhibits of Prize Cattle and Dogs Also Planned.

Admirers of fine horses will have an opportunity to see many of the finest horses in the United States at A Century of Progress opening June 1. A live stock and horse show will be a featured attraction of the fair, exposition officials announced yesterday.

The progress of the horse through the centuries also will be portrayed by means of plaster models of the original horse, and its evolution to the horse of today. The models will be copied from those in the Field museum and from famous fossils at Yale university. The original horse was a four toed animal about the size of a cat.

Developments in the breeding of cattle will be traced from the old Texas longhorn to the contemporary Holstein, Hereford and Polled Angus steers. Included will be the Brahma, which in India is a sacred animal. This sacred steer is now raised in Texas, deprived of the reverence to which it is accustomed and with the sole object of providing beef.

The stock and horse show will be directed by Harry I. Holton and Merrill B. Johns, well known in stock show enterprises. In addition there will be a dog show at which fashionable breeds of pedigreed dogs will be displayed. The stock and dog shows will be enstalled in a building to be erected on the main thoroughfare of A Century of Progress, south of 30th street.

POLICE DOG GOES AFTER ROBBERS; MEETS A POODLE

Five bandits who robbed Robert E. Maxwell of $60 and his watch last night owe a vote of thanks for their escape to an anonymous French poodle. Mr. Maxwell, who is secretary of the Greyhound Lines corporation, was walking to his home at 2474 Lake View avenue when at Roslyn place the five men stopped him.

The robbery completed, they started away on foot. At that moment a woman neighbor appeared on the scene leading a ferocious looking police dog. Apprised of what had occurred, she unleashed the dog.

Growling in a manner ominous for the fleeing thieves Tige started after them. Nearer and nearer he drew. Now only 100 feet separated him from his prey. But—just at that moment the anonymous little poodle entered the picture on the other side of the street. Tige saw. He skidded four-pawed to a stop, growled undecidedly at the thieves, and then with a friendly yelp trotted across the street to play with the anonymous poodle. The bandits escaped.

HITLER FORBIDS JEWS TO HOLD PUBLIC OFFICE

Thousands to Lose Jobs in Germany.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 8.—The Jew was relegated to second class citizenship by Chancellor Hitler's government today. His degradation was spelled in the publication of a new civil service law, which forbids persons of Jewish faith from taking part in the official life of Germany.

The cabinet's decree conforms with Hitler's original "25 point" program, which sets forth the principle that the nation shall be governed and administered only by Aryans. Its drastic provisions foreshadow the gradual expulsion of the race from Germany.

"No Jew is a fellow countryman!" is the Hitler credo. The decree's far reaching effect is indicated by the definition that any person having one Jewish grandparent is a Jew.

Thousands to Lose Posts.

As a result of today's enactment thousands of officials held over from previous governments will be ousted. In the future all Jews will be barred from public office. Certain Jews now serving will be spared.

The government will dismiss all civil service officials who entered office after the war on the basis of political appointment and without "necessary professional training." They will receive three months' pay with their notices of discharge.

Heretofore retiring officials possessed claims to pensions. Now they have been placed in the category of dismissed government employés and their claims will not be recognized. Officials who have the necessary technical qualifications but have declined to support the Hitler régime also will be dismissed.

The Jews whom Hitler is sparing are those who were in the service of the government Aug. 1, 1914, or who fought in the trenches in the world war. Jews whose fathers or sons fell in battle also will be retained.

No Jews to Hold Office.

After the death or retirement of these exceptions no Jews will hold office anywhere in the land.

The government will determine who shall go or who shall stay by examining the family history of officeholders. This examination must go back to the grandparents. The law is clear that if one of the four grandparents is Jewish then so is the grandchild.

The law further provides that officials may be transferred to other jobs. If these positions are of lower rank the higher title and salary will continue. Thus Hitler's aim to transfer Jewish judges to purely administrative positions will be made possible.

The law will be clamped down at once, with the authorities determining what constitutes technical qualifications and what constitutes purely political appointments. Thousands of civil servants—even clerks and manual laborers in federal, state, or municipal service—face immediate discharge.

Hitler Addresses Storm Troops.

Six hundred thousand Nazi storm troopers massed in various sections of the country were addressed tonight by Hitler. He spoke over the radio in the Berlin Sportspalast. The men stood at attention while the chancellor spoke.

"No force in the world can beat us," Hitler shouted, "if you stand behind me as you have up to now. You are the saviors of Germany. Greater sacrifices are demanded of you than of any generation. We must repair what has been dismantled by history's forgotten generations."

There was no applause until the chancellor had ended. Then there came a thunderous roar:

"Sieg Heil!—Hail Victory!"

The former republican Jewish owned Berliner Tageblatt today was officially placed in the hands of the Nazis. Hans Lachmann-Mosse and his wife transferred the paper to a "limited liability company" for fifteen years. They will receive $25,000 a year. Any profits will be used for the relief of war victims, "regardless of religion."

In line with the Nazi anti-Semitic drive the University of Leipzig today issued an order barring Jewish students from matriculating for five years. The Berlin electrical works discharged all Jewish employés.

The Nazis today extended their control over the German beer industry. A new board, composed of six Nazis, supplanted the directorate of the German Brewers' federation.

Dispatches from Breslau today reported that two men were killed and two injured when Nazi auxiliary police raided the workingmen's district and arrested 100 persons. The police reported they had confiscated arms.

Denounces Hitler; Imprisoned.

BERLIN, April 8.—[U.P.]—A Telegrafen Union dispatch from Kassel tonight said that Wilhelm Juris, a clerk, had been sentenced to 15 months' imprisonment on a charge he wrote a letter to his mother in New York, denouncing and abusing the Hitler government. The prosecutor, according to the dispatch, said the contents of the letter could have been highly detrimental to Germany's interests if it had been given to American newspapers.

Film Industry Crippled.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, April 8.—The political upheaval in Germany has brought to a complete standstill the business of American moving picture concerns in this country both as to production and distribution. The same is true of the entire German movie industry.

Not a movie camera is operating in Germany today. The theaters are using pictures previously contracted for. One reason for this paralysis is that, like everything else in Germany, the movie industry is to be "coördinated" with the National Socialist régime. The government has set up two requirements: first, the products of the movie industry must conform to Nazi dogmas; second, the industry must be "purged" of all Jewish elements.

Meanwhile mystery shrouded the death of Erik Jan Hanussen, one of Europe's best known clairvoyants, who years ago predicted the rise of Hitler to power. His bullet-riddled body was found yesterday in the woods near Baruth, 45 miles south of here, thirteen days after he had abruptly terminated an engagement at a Berlin vaudeville house "on account of a nervous collapse."

His real name was Steinschneider and he was said to have been of Jewish extraction, although he had denied it under oath. He has vigorously espoused the Nazi movement in a magazine he edited.

NAMING ENVOY TO BERLIN WAITS ON HITLER ACTION

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—Selection of an ambassador to Germany is being deferred by President Roosevelt, it being generally understood, although not officially admitted, that he desires to see how the Hitler régime functions a while longer before sending a new envoy there.

Some time is expected to elapse before an appointment to Berlin is actively considered and in the meantime it is assumed there will be more definite information as to Nazi programs as they may affect international relations.

Progress is being made, however, toward the selection of ambassadors for other important posts.

John P. Cudahy of Milwaukee is regarded as quite definitely assured of appointment to Havana. Francis White of Maryland, assistant secretary of state, appears virtually to have been eliminated from consideration for that post.

There are several Democrats mentioned for ambassador to Italy. They include Breckenridge Long of St. Louis and this city, an assistant secretary of state in the Wilson administration; James W. Gerard of New York former war-time ambassador to Germany; Grenville Emmet and Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo, both of New York, and Mayor James M. Curley of Boston.

Mr. Emmet, who is a former law partner of President Roosevelt, is understood to be under the most serious consideration for Rome.

GERMANY BANS BRITISH PAPER; ASSAILED NAZIS

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, April 8.—The German government has banned the Manchester Guardian from Germany until further notice.

Since the campaign against the Jews began, the Guardian has published detailed reports of it from its German correspondents. It was exposed as propaganda some letters which it published to give both sides, but has not ceased denouncing the attacks on the Jews, Socialists and pacifists.

Today the Guardian published a message from its correspondent in Frankfort-au-Main giving recent instances of persons being beaten by Nazis and then being taken home to die or sent to hospitals. The correspondent alleged that women, too, had been subjected to violence by the Brown Shirts.

"Thousands of Germans have only one wish—to get out of the country," the correspondent declares. "Germany is being converted into a huge prison."

READING QUITS ANGLO-GERMAN BODY IN A HUFF

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 8. — In protest against the persecution of Jews in Germany, Rufus Daniel Isaacs, the marquess of Reading today resigned from the Anglo-German association. In a letter to the secretary of the association Lord Reading wrote:

"In view of the policy of persecution being pursued by the German government against Jews in Germany, I cannot, as a member of the Jewish community, continue to hold the office of president or to remain a member of the society."

The association will be acquainted with Lord Reading's decision at a meeting after Easter, the secretary said. Lord Reading has been president of the association since its formation in 1929. He recently presided at a dinner given by the association to Dr. Heinrich Bruening, then German chancellor, on his visit to this country.

"NAZI" $5 BILLS ARE OFFERED IN JEWISH STORES

MONTREAL, April 8.—[U.P.]—Several $5 bills have made their appearance in Montreal, marked with the Swastika emblem of the Nazi party and bearing the inscription, "Germany,—Awake!"

These bills have been circulated in the Jewish and French quarters of the city in payment for goods purchased. Any remonstration on the part of the shopkeepers resulted in a take-it-or-leave-it attitude.

SHAW VISIONS HITLER WRECKED BY WAR ON JEW

Dramatist Reaches Cuba; Sails for U. S. Today.

HAVANA, April 8.—[U. P.]—If Adolf Hitler's policy includes persecution of Jews he "will fail in the end and the Jews will persecute him," George Bernard Shaw said today on his arrival aboard the round the world liner Empress of Britain.

The tall, white whiskered Irish dramatist commented on current world affairs and American idiosyncrasies.

"I've never met Hitler," Shaw said in reply to a question. "I know nothing of his plans and formulas. Nobody else does, not excluding the German people, but if they consist of persecution of Jews, it's a monstrous thing and Hitler will fail in the end and the Jews will persecute him."

Hands U. S. a Bouquet.

He inquired whether Cuba was a monarchy or republic. Then, without waiting for an answer, he continued:

"I suppose the United States manages it well. That's an intelligent thing if it cannot manage itself. The natural thing is to get Americans to run it."

Realizing he had paid a compliment to Americans, whom he once referred to as "dear boobs," Shaw hastened to add:

"Americans are a funny people. If told they have two eyes and one nose like Europeans, they're insulted. It's easy to get a rise out of Americans."

Reminded of published reports inferring he had been insulting to Helen Keller, famous blind woman, Shaw said they were untrue.

"Some irresponsible persons spread that story," he added.

Shaw leaves for New York early tomorrow.

Sorry She "Told" on Shaw.

Columbus, O., April 8.—(AP)—Helen Keller is sorry she "told" on George Bernard Shaw.

Discussing her meeting with the Irish playwright, during which he was said to have remarked, "All Americans are blind and deaf—and dumb," Miss Keller, here for a meeting of the Ohio educational conference, asserted, "I didn't mind the remark, and I'm sorry I told on him."

The Well-Fed Are Easier To Manage

THE baby seems to be wondering whether he or his nurse will end up with the dinner. And for good reasons. Because dogs, as well as babies, find food just about the most interesting thing in life.

Grown-ups try to appear more sophisticated. And, though they don't cry or bark when hungry, their ill humor appears in the sulks, a fit of bad temper, or something infinitely harder on the rest of the family than a lusty howl or a loud bark.

Understanding these kinks in human nature, wise wives and mothers make it a point to keep husbands and children well-fed. And that's why so many of them buy at A&P, where they know they can always get the best food at prices within reach of every purse.

Well-fed families are easier to manage. And when the food is bought at A & P, managing to keep families well-fed is easier.

GETTING THE REAL NEWS DIFFICULT JOB IN GERMANY

Propaganda, Spy Mania Barriers to Writers.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

FRANKFORT-AM-MAIN, Germany, April 8.—Getting the news of what is really going on in Germany and sending it out of the country probably at the moment is the world's toughest newspaper assignment.

American correspondents here are not only subjected to government interference which, at times, makes objective reporting virtually impossible, but what is worse, they are caught between the cross fire of propagandas calculated to distort even the pictures they see with their own eyes. The fire comes from the Jewish side as well as the Nazi side. It is an atmosphere comparable to the propaganda pall which hung over every country during the world war and it is no wonder that the same atrocity reports become circulated.

Use of Intimidation.

One of the least troublesome, but most conspicuous obstacles in the way of unbiased journalism, is the official use of intimidation to influence foreign newspaper men. I had a classic example of this Monday morning when I went to pay a courtesy call on Dr. Welker, press official of the Frankfort police department—incidentally every official and unofficial organization in the country seems to have its private press bureau and this adds to the general confusion.

Dr. Welker, after declaring he was anxious to do everything in his power to help me, remarked that it was his duty to warn me that the greatest caution must be used in handling German news by foreign correspondents. Foreign correspondents who did not observe extreme caution in criticizing the government or its decrees would get into trouble, Dr. Welker reminded me. He pointed out that all foreigners are under suspicion these days and it was barely possible that my hotel room might be searched at some time or other. If that happened and any "incriminating" papers indicating a hostile attitude toward the government were found, it would be very unpleasant for me, he said.

"But I don't imagine you will have any trouble," Dr. Welker concluded. "Since you are not a Jew it is not likely you will be molested."

"Bark Worse Than Bite."

Such lectures, which one is likely to hear, particularly from petty officials without responsibility, are calculated less to frighten American newspapermen than to make them go beserk and attack everything official with or without justification. It also may account for some of the worse exaggerations you have heard.

In most cases the officials prove to be less ferocious than they sound. For instance Dr. Welker, after he had got his "warning" of his chest, assured me that all the resources of the Frankfort police were at my disposal to probe the truth of conditions, at the same time he arranged for me to visit prisons and concentration camps and talk with prisoners.

The journalist, who shies away from official sources, immediately is viewed with suspicion and hostility while those who consent to take the news with the government "made in Germany" stamp on it really are given every assistance. Actually you have little choice. It is no use trying to check official news with news from opposition sources because it is almost impossible to find any trustworthy opponent of the régime who dares to talk.

All have the impression that the phones are tapped and that newspapermen are followed about by police spies wherever they go.

This spy mania has rendered it almost impossible for me to keep in touch with Jewish leaders.

As to official sources of news, they do not seem better or worse than in most countries. In the two weeks I have been in Germany, however, I have twice been told flat lies by Nazi spokesmen. Except for what he sees with his own eyes the newspaper man has only two chances to get at the facts. Leaks do happen in newspapers. On Monday the local press carried an item from Stuttgart which said that two Hitlerite auxiliary policemen had been dismissed and one jailed for having "handled very roughly" a group of communist and Republican prisoners in the police station on the night of March 26. That is just a lead and if you want to follow it up and find out just exactly what happened to those unfortunate prisoners you must go to Stuttgart and see how much you can make the police admit.

As to censorship, whatever it may be like in Berlin, it is either very lenient or very easy to outwit in the smaller towns—at least if you use the telephone.

It is moral censorship that is hardest to work against in Germany. Every German except a communist becomes a governmental propagandist when he thinks the good name of the "vaterland" is at stake. The newspaper man who goes out of his way to print unpleasant truths is classified as an enemy propagandist.

The Jews are just as bad. It isn't that they try to give you anti-governmental propaganda, but they see in a talk with a foreign newspaper man their only chance to make the government see that they are "playing the game."

"It is no longer a question between cheap sensationalism and serious journalism," one Jewish newspaper man told me. "It is a question of humanity. If you want to do something for the Jews tell the world we are anxious to coöperate with the government."

The couple were met at the La Salle street station by Mrs. Carpenter's daughters, Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson and Mrs. Robert S. Pirie. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter went from the station to the home at 1020 Lake Shore drive, where Mrs. Carpenter has resided since before her divorce from John Borden, sportsman and explorer, in December, 1924.

WEST AUSTRALIA SECEDES FROM COMMONWEALTH

People Vote to Set Up Independent Rule.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SYDNEY, Australia, April 9 [Sunday].—Western Australia has voted to secede from the commonwealth, it appears from available returns of yesterday's referendum. In the state election Laborites defeated Premier James Mitchell's government, winning 28 seats against 9 for the country party and 8 for the Nationalists. Five seats are still uncertain.

Western Australia, which enjoys lower taxes and is on sounder financial footing than the eastern states of the island continent, forced the secession issue on Premier Mitchell. He, himself, however, admitted that Western Australia "could not afford" the expense of federation with the rest of the commonwealth.

Lyons Hooted Out of State.

The federal prime minister, Joseph A. Lyons, author of the "premier's plan" to rehabilitate Australia's finances, entered the bitter campaign and was practically hooted from the state. The state feels that it has been neglected by the commonwealth, and that, being primarily a producing section, it is injured by the protectionist policies of the east.

The secession issue arose last December, when the state parliament voted an alternative of constitutional correction of these handicaps or submission of the referendum.

Western Australia, with a population of about 500,000 and an area nearly as large as western Europe, has only five of the 76 seats in the federal house of representatives. Leaders of the secession movement pointed to this fact and to the distance of the state from Canberra, the commonwealth capital, in arguing that Western Australia cannot benefit from any federation. It is a week's railway journey from the last to Chambers.

Equal Representation in Senate.

Although Western Australia has equal representation in the senate, it is pointed out that this body is no longer such an important part of the administrative machinery. "Depression discontent" she aided secession leaders in building up their movement.

Western Australian people, however, have never been fully satisfied with the federation because of the disabilities suffered financially by the state in losing its former customs and other revenue to the federal government.

The federal government and other states in the commonwealth fought the secession movement. Even if the referendum favors secession, the federal government will fight it.

The federal attorney general's department points out that under the federal constitution it is legally impossible for any single state by any method whatsoever to disclaim its status as a state and to revert to the position of a colony or of an independent country.

10% OF CHICAGO'S TEACHERS LIVING OUTSIDE OF CITY

Find Many Reside in Other Counties.

About 10 per cent of Chicago's 13,000 school teachers do not live in Chicago and a large number do not maintain their legal residence in Cook county, according to a residential survey made yesterday.

Under the present rules of the board of education teachers are not required to live in Chicago, although all civil service employés must maintain a legal residence within the city limits. During the last three years there have been demands in the city council and the board of education for regulations requiring teachers to live in Chicago, but political pressure has blocked such action.

Live Within Working Distance.

Teachers now are permitted to live anywhere within working distance of their schools. Many take advantage of this to live in the comparatively inexpensive suburban areas, availing themselves of fast transportation and city boulevards to reach their work in time. By this method, one teacher pointed out, it is possible to enjoy the higher Chicago salaries while living under the same inexpensive conditions as the teachers in the smaller towns.

The last adequate survey to be made of teacher residences was made at the direction of Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew five years ago. At that time it was found that 20 per cent of the teachers did not reside in Chicago. Due to agitation at the time many teachers moved to Chicago or changed their addresses. According to leaders in the teacher groups many teachers have developed a method to avoid censure by giving the address of a Chicago relative as their own.

No Recent Survey.

Due to the lack of comprehensive information the present survey was made on the addresses and names listed in the board of education directory. In 276 pages of names of teachers not a single page was found in which at least one teacher was not listed as living out of town. A majority of the pages averaged four and five names and several had as high as fifteen out of town names.

It was found that Chicago teachers live in 41 different towns, including five in Indiana: East Chicago, Whiting, Hobart, Hammond and Gary.

Of the approximate 13,000 names listed in the teacher directory 1,184 live outside Chicago. School officials pointed out that a great many more were listing Chicago as their address while living in another jurisdiction.

The three towns showing the greatest number of teacher residents are Oak Park with 580 teachers, Evanston with 150 teachers, and Berwyn with 73 teachers. Other suburban towns showing more than the average were Cicero with 46 teachers, Maywood with 45 teachers and La Grange with 22 teachers.

Other Towns Listed.

Among the other towns listed as residences are: Brookfield, Downers Grove, Winnetka, Bellwood, Lockport, Elmhurst, River Grove, Wheaton, Wilmette, Blue Island, Des Plaines, Glen Ellyn, River Forest, Barrington, Aurora, Western Springs, Highland Park, Hubbard Woods, Hinsdale, Libertyville, Lake Forest, Riverside, Elmwood Park, Glencoe, Chicago Heights, Flossmoor, Harvey, Naperville, Hollywood, Lemont, South Holland, Lombard, Elgin, Itasca and Mundelein.

Among the teachers listed as living at a greater distance than the ordinarily termed suburban area were the following: Ocie Mc. Burke, Whiting; Elsie L. Gruel and Mary D. Forsberg, Hobart; Georgia S. Adamson, Geneva; William M. Alberg, Lombard; Elizabeth Balhouse, South Holland; Edna M. Stephens, Indiana Harbor; Geneva Ward, Gary; Clara R. Waser, Gary; William H. Riechers, Hammond; Oscar W. Roesinger, Gary; Emma G. Rought, New Lenox; Edna V. Scheidt, Hobart; Helen and Mary Rapp, Warrenville; Rose A. Vatter, Monee; Helen T. Warren, Crete; Lida J. Shreffler, Gurnee; Loretto Burke, Waukegan, and Frances F. Wilmes, Itasca.

Inquiry among teacher officials and department heads of the board of education failed to disclose one who would comment on the situation for publication. Individual teachers expressed indignation that their privilege of living in other towns on public money earned in Chicago should be questioned.

MOVES TO SCRAP ASSIGNMENTS IN CHICAGO COUNCIL

Steering Group May Punish Anti-Corr Aldermen.

BY STANLEY ARMSTRONG.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hot Springs, Ark., April 8.—[Special.]—A minor argument today over the filling of two vacancies on the finance committee led to an agreement among the five members of the Chicago city council steering group to "scrap" all assignments that the reëlected aldermen had in the old council under start of an entirely new slate.

The agreement grew out of a fight over whether seniority of council service or the old "district" plan of allotments should be used as a basis for handing out committee chairmanships and memberships. The decision was to disregard the "district" plan under which previous organization groups strove to give equal representation on all important committees to each set of ten wards.

Get Unimportant Assignment.

While the surface inference was that the 16 new aldermen and the second termers would be given unimportant assignments, a deeper significance was attached to the committee's action as the belief spread that the committee intends to use its decision as a smoke screen under which to punish the Democratic councilmen who fought their organization's selection of Frank J. Corr as acting mayor.

Ald. John S. Clark [30th], chairman of the finance committee, was a candidate for acting mayor against Corr, and his most vehement supporter was Ald. James B. Bowler [25th], chairman of the committee on local transportation. Previously, it was reported that Clark would be retained as head of the finance committee, but that Bowler would lose his chairmanship.

Old District Plan.

"It is not true that we plan to punish any one by this decision," declared Ald. J. M. Arvey [24th], chairman of the steering committee.

"Under the old district plan the group of wards—31 to 40—represented by Ald. Thomas P. Keane [31st], would be entitled to the two finance committee memberships vacated by Frank H. Landmesser and Joseph H. Smith, who did not run for reëlection. In that group, however, there are four new aldermen and five second termers. Should they get the two places, or should aldermen with more service and experience fill those vacancies? We thought they should not."

HELD AS AUTO THIEVES.

William Creighton, 17 years old, 853 Lill avenue, and Vito Graziano, 18 years old, 1035 Belden avenue, were held to the grand jury by Judge John Gutknecht yesterday on four charges of stealing automobiles.

G. O. P. SPLIT ON JUDICIAL TICKET COALITION PLANS

Expect Decision Tomorrow on Slate.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

On the matter of a judicial ticket for the June 5 elections, the Republican county committee yesterday found itself divided on the question of accepting limited coalition or putting a full party ticket in the field. A session behind closed doors at the Hotel La Salle led to the postponement of action until tomorrow afternoon, when a sub-committee is expected to receive a definite fusion proposal from the Democrats, and place it before the Republican committeemen.

Patrick A. Nash, Democratic party leader, who is week-ending at Lexington, Ky., so far has not committed himself. Among Democratic committeemen the general talk was for offering the Republicans seven or eight of the twenty Circuit judgeships. Tied to it was a stipulation that the Republicans would not put up any of the four judges who failed to get the bar indorsement.

Plan to Sound Out Judges.

The Democrats also have been informally talking of calling in the sitting Republican judges themselves and negotiating with them instead of with the Republican committee, which is split into half a dozen factions.

Prompted by this, the Republican committeemen are to get in touch with the Republican judges by tomorrow afternoon with a view of ascertaining their views. The question to be put up to them is whether, if indorsed by both parties, they would elect to run on the Republican ticket or the Democratic ticket.

Weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth over the resonant raspberry with which the Democrats have greeted the Republican proposal for a 50-50 coalition, each party to name ten candidates for the 20 circuit judgeships, garnished some of the speeches at the Republican meeting. Some groups urged that if the Democrats offered eight places out of twenty on the Circuit court ticket, the Republicans should accept, as this would take care of the five Republican judges indorsed by the bar primaries. They are Judges Hugo M. Friend, David F. Matchett, Kickham Scanlan, Daniel P. Trude and William V. Brothers.

Would Seek Bar O. K.

In the meantime ward committeemen are to prepare lists of judicial candidates to be submitted to the Republican county committee. In case it is decided to put up a full ticket some Republicans urged that the lists be submitted to the Bar association before the party makes up its slate.

The committee which will interview Mr. Nash is composed of William H. Weber, county chairman; Oscar F. Nelson, city chairman; Edward F. Moore, secretary, and Committeemen William E. King [2d], George F. Barrett [21st], Eden T. Brekke [36th], William H. Reid [16th], Charles E. Peace [42d], and William Busse [country towns].

Among the Democrats sentiment yesterday seemed growing in favor of inviting the five Republican circuit judges indorsed at the bar primaries to run on the Democratic ticket, and of putting up a full party ticket for the rest of the judicial places.

At Morrison hotel headquarters Judge Martin M. Gridley's name appeared to be leading in the talk about the Supreme bench nomination, but strong support was reported for other candidates. Among them were Judges John M. O'Connor, John P. McGoorty, and Denis E. Sullivan, and Francis X. Busch, former corporation counsel. All four of the judges are veterans of more than twenty years on the bench.

'PAUL REVERES' PLAN UNITS IN ALL 48 STATES

Col. Edwin Marshall Hadley, president of the Paul Reveres, an organization formed to combat communistic influences, announced plans yesterday for organizing chapters of the order in every state of the union.

"There are more than 4,000,000 agents preaching communistic doctrines in the United States," Col. Hadley said. "We know of at least 700 college professors, high school teachers, and members of boards of education who are in sympathy with the communists and are preaching their doctrines.

"In recent months we have had considerable success in ousting communist agitators from colleges and pulpits and our new national campaign calls for the driving out of all agitators."

Wife Scorns Husband's Diet; He Gets Divorce

Carl Larsen, 704 Emery street, won a divorce from Mrs. Elizabeth Larsen, 3036 West North avenue, before Superior Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday when he said his wife had refused to prepare his meals according to a diet prescribed by a physician. When he protested she flung dishes at him, he testified.

FOUND DEAD FROM GAS.

John G. Rozewski, 49 years old, 5821 South Cicero avenue, was found dead yesterday in the basement of his home. A tube attached to an oven burner of a gas stove was in his mouth.

GUNMEN SHOOT UP SOUTH SIDE BANK; TELLER IS DYING

Bandits Begin Firing as Women Patrons Scream

Unnerved by the screams of women patrons, one of four bandits, who entered the University State bank at 1354 East 55th street yesterday flourishing revolvers and a sawed off shotgun, shot and probably fatally wounded Carlton J. White, paying teller. The bullet struck White in the neck, coursing downward and fracturing his spinal column.

Without attempting to carry out the robbery the gunmen then fled, firing several shots in the direction of terrified customers and employés as they ran through the door. A fourth bandit, waiting for them in an automobile parked at the curb, became frightened at the shots and sped away before his companions reached the car.

Drop Their Shotgun.

They ran into an alley where they forced Stanley V. Fosdick, 5545 Drexel avenue, to give up his car. In their hurry and excitement the robbers dropped a sawed off shotgun in the alley. Later Fosdick's car was found abandoned at Calumet avenue and 43d street. In it was a second shotgun. Efforts to identify the robbers through tracing the numbers on the guns were begun by police.

The wounded teller was taken to the Chicago Memorial hospital, where an emergency operation was performed. He was later placed in an oxygen tent. Dr. M. L. Weinstein said he had been paralyzed f m the waist down and had only a slight chance of living through the night.

Girl Describes Shooting.

Miss Virginia Kendall of the Kendall College of Physical Education, 5026 Greenwood avenue, one of the witnesses, told a graphic story of the attempted robbery and shooting.

"I was standing in front of Mr. White's window," she said. "Without warning a man came up behind me and pushed me. 'Stand aside,' he said. Then I saw him pointing a revolver at Mr. White and the next moment he fired.

"After that everything was in confusion. The robbers ran towards the door, shooting at the crowd as they ran. It seems a miracle that several more weren't shot."

Charles Hoff, president of the bank, said he was in his office at the rear of the banking room. "I heard several women scream," he said, "and then shots. I ran out and saw White lying on the floor behind the teller's window."

Miss Viola Dax, 3008 Cheltenham place, switchboard operator, was the first person approached by the bandits. They ordered her to leave the board and then flourished their guns at the customers, most of them women. There were forty persons in the bank at the time. As soon as the bandits had left the bank Miss Dax ran to the switchboard and called the police.

White is 28 years old and has been employed by the bank for the last five years. He lives at 3540 West 64th place and is unmarried.

Harry Mueller of Morton Grove, teller of the National Bank of Niles Center, who was shot and seriously wounded Friday by one of three robbers wh escaped from the bank with $6,000, was reported in fair condition last night at the St. Francis hospital, Evanston.

WHEALAN URGES FEDERAL AID FOR SEWAGE PLANTS

President Emmett Whealan of the county board yesterday forwarded a letter to President Roosevelt urging that sewage disposal plants be considered as one of the items in the public works program now contemplated by the federal government. He pointed out that numerous local municipalities in the county as well as several others on the boundaries of adjoining counties have their health endangered because of their lack of sewage plants.

A program to cover the situation is beyond the financial ability of the local municipalities, stated Mr. Whealan, but is comparatively small in contrast with the larger projects of the Chicago sanitary district. Federal aid on the program would provide work for thousands of people, he added.

TALK BY MOLEY MAY BRING RIFT IN D. A. R. CAMP

One Group Considers Him Parlor Pink.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—When the Daughters of the American Revolution open their convention here a week from tomorrow, the war they'll be talking about won't all be in the history books.

The women are about to stage a brand new scrap about an age old subject—a man.

The man in the case is Prof. Raymond Moley, assistant secretary of state. To one group, led by Mrs. James Russell Magna, the president general of the D. A. R., he is a scholarly blue stocking. To the other group, marshaled by Past President Mrs. Grace Lincoln Brosseau, he is a parlor pink. Each faction is sure the other is color blind.

So you see everything is set for a fine and dandy time.

Story as It Is Told.

Here's the story, as it is grapevining its way about Washington.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen is chairman of the program committee for the convention. Now it is reported that Mrs. Owen, former congress-woman, was not a bit loath to get a job in the state department; either abroad or as an assistant secretary right here at home. What more natural, then, for her to go to Prof. Moley, who is in the state department and who is so close to President Roosevelt and urge him to be one of the distinguished speakers at the D. A. R. meeting.

Mrs. Magna, who is reported to be considerably more liberal than Mrs. Brosseau, gave her official approval and the professor's name went down on the program.

Mrs. Brosseau Aroused.

Whereupon, so the story goes, Mrs. Brosseau got excited. It was she, you may recall, who wrote in a letter that last autumn to a Mrs. Buel in Connecticut:

"When you consider that President Elect Roosevelt is taking to Washington as his friend and adviser in his conference with President Hoover on world affairs Tuesday, Prof. Raymond Moley of Columbia university, one of the lecturers at the red and disloyal Rand school and a member of the foreign language information service of the American Civil Liberties union. I, for one, feel that strength and unity of purpose are the crying need of the hour."

Mrs. Brosseau rallied to her side of the fence a number of ladies who felt the same as she did about Mr. Moley. They plan, so it is said, to hold an independent meeting here; perhaps at the very hour that Prof. Moley is speaking.

Hope to Bill Fish.

The speaker they hope to have, it is reported, is Representative Hamilton Fish Jr., famous red chaser who appeared at previous D. A. R. conventions has been so popular he has had to stop and autograph programs.

But this time if the plan is carried out Mr. Fish will be the bait in the other stream, with which the irreconcilables hope to lure the delegates away from the regular pool.

All this is still in the air but every hour the air is getting heavier with suspense.

FOUR FOUND SLAIN IN THEIR HOME NEAR BEAUMONT, TEXAS

Beaumont, Tex., April 8.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hastings, their 8 months old son, and Mrs. Laura Franklin were found slain today in their home about 18 miles north of Liberty, in the Trinity river bottoms.

Bob Martin, chief deputy sheriff of Liberty county, said tonight they had been killed with a .32 rifle. He believed he knows who did the killing. The suspect's trail tonight led officers toward Beaumont.

Hastings had died from a bullet wound through his heart. He was about 30 years old. Mrs. Hastings, 16, was shot through the head, as was the infant son. Mrs. Franklin, 45, was shot in the body.

Martin described the suspect as being about 57 years old, 6 feet tall, and weighing 160 pounds. When last seen he was carrying a rifle and a suitcase.

FIVE ARE HURT AS STOLEN CAR CRASHES AUTO

Five persons were injured last night when a stolen automobile was driven through traffic stop signals at Grand and Ashland avenues, against another car, and over the sidewalk through the window of a grocery at 512 North Ashland avenue.

They were Rudy Stefanick, 16 years old, 1746 Grand avenue, former Lane Technical High school student; Harry Appelt and his mother, Margaret, 68 years old, both of 6128 South Whipple street; Joseph Pollis and Mrs. Sophie Morozinski, both of 4338 South Fairfield avenue. All except Stefanick were in the car that was struck. None was seriously injured. Sergt. Harold Pilling asserted that young Stefanick was one of three boys riding in the stolen car. The other two fled. The boy denied the accusation.

Michael G. O'Malley, 65 years old, 201 South Lockwood avenue, a retired policeman, was killed by an automobile in front of 2811 Washington boulevard last night. The driver was Mrs. Sophie Maurer, 4944 George street. O'Malley retired five years ago after twenty-five years' service. He is survived by his widow, Nellie, and a brother, Policeman William O'Malley of Central station.

Mrs. Corlene Johnson, 30 years old, 6010 South Morgan street, died at the Englewood hospital yesterday from injuries incurred Friday night when she was struck by an automobile at 59th and Morgan streets. The driver was held.

Patrick Merwick, 68 years old, 1656 West 39th street, a laborer, died at the county hospital from internal injuries. He was struck Jan. 9 by an automobile at Paulina and 35th streets.

FISHING FLEET TOLL IN PACIFIC STORM IS NOW SEVENTEEN DEAD

Hoquiam, Wash., April 8.—(AP)—Three more fishermen were added today to the list of men lost in the Grays Harbor fishing fleet disaster three days ago, bringing the total to 17.

Walter Maunula of Astoria, Ore., was decided definitely to have drowned after wreckage of his boat was found on the shore between Long Beach and Sea View, and Alfred Hansen of Portland and an unidentified companion were also placed on the list of known dead when the skiff from their boat, the Thelma, was picked up near Westport.

One man previously believed to have drowned, Herman Tuhkila, who operated the Buckeye, was reported safe at Astoria.

WOMAN FALLS FROM WINDOW.

Mrs. Salome Walkewicz, 50 years old, 4817 South Ashland avenue, plunged from a second floor window of her home and was probably fatally injured. She was taken to the county hospital.

Dear Mr. Larson:
The shoes you made for me are simply wonderful. I am wearing them constantly and I think it amazing that you could do such work for me. . . . Personally, I can't begin to tell you how pleased I am.
The orthopedic surgeon who examined my feet a year ago told me that unless something was done for my feet I would be crippled before I was 40 years old! . . . I am sure the shoes will relieve my condition and in time correct it. . . . The shoes haven't hurt me a moment, and I want to thank you for what you have done.
MRS. K. B. L. S.

P. S. Mr. Vassan (the shoeman here) says he has known of your wonderful work for 25 years and that my shoes prove all the fine things he has heard of you. He is very happy in my behalf that you did such fine work for me.

Perhaps you are troubled like this woman was—perhaps you have tried other shoes and haven't found relief. You can have help. Remember there is only one Martin Larson and I have put thousands back on their feet.

NEW LIFE SEEN FOR TAX STRIKE IN SENATE BILL

Measure Would Reopen Cases of Objectors.

County officials yesterday charged that tax strikers who, in seeking to avoid payment of delinquent real estate taxes have lost half a dozen la.r suits in the state and United State- Supreme courts, are taking a new lease on life through a bill which has been introduced in the state senate.

The bill would give County Judge Jarecki new jurisdiction over every property for which an objection to either 1928, 1929, and 1930 real estate assessments was filed. It then would give him the right to make new assessed valuations of these properties on the basis of evidence to be placed before him by the owners.

The measure is senate bill No. 463, sponsored by Senator Arthur Huebsch of Brookfield. It has been advanced without reference to a committee for second reading and a general discussion in the senate next week.

Reveal Backers of Bill.

Yesterday Senator Huebsch stated that the bill was drawn under his direction after a conference attended by the following:

ROY D. KEEHN, who was associated with Morris Schaeffer as counsel in the Cisar case, the most celebrated of the tax strike suits. This case was won by the strikers before Judge Jarecki, but reversed by the state Supreme court. Later the United States Supreme court refused to review the findings of the state court. Keehn also has been connected with the Association of Real Estate Taxpayers, the leading organization of tax strikers.

FRED W. SARGENT, president of the North Western Railroad company and head of the citizens' committee on public expenditures.

EARL B. SEARCY, Republican senator from Springfield.

Held "Special Deal for Objectors."

When informed of the introduction of the bill yesterday the heads of the Cook county tax collecting agencies were unanimous in declaring that its passage would amount to the "granting of a special deal to the objecting property owners, most of whom possess large realty holdings."

County Tax Attorney Hayden N. Bell asserted that passage of this bill would nullify the effect of three years of litigation won by the county in fighting the tax strike. In effect, he said, the protesting property holders would receive consideration which home owners who have already paid their taxes for those years would never get.

"More than 100 million dollars in taxes are tied up in property of the tax strikers," Attorney Bell said. "Most of these taxes are owed by large property owners. More than 99 per cent of the small home owners already have paid their taxes for these years and any such 'deal' as this bill would allow would be rank discrimination against honest citizens who properly support the government."

Denies Committee Approval.

County Treasurer McDonough said yesterday that he learned of the proposed legislation several days ago. He stated that its sponsors had informed members of the state senate that it had the backing of the Sargent committee. When he communicated with John O. Reese, secretary of the organization, he learned that the committee has made no expression of approval.

"Reese told me that Mr. Sargent and some other individual members of the committee favored the bill as a means of getting the delinquent tax situation cleaned up once and for all," said McDonough.

"However it is my feeling that this is not the method which should be used. Under the American theory of government no taxpayer, regardless of the size of his holdings, shall receive consideration which is withheld from others. I believe that the proposal is a rear guard attack of the tax strikers who have finally realized that they have lost their fight in the courts.

"I am opposed to any such discriminatory legislation and I propose to go to Springfield with my Attorney Tom Nash, to oppose the bill."

Action News to Jarecki.

County Judge Jarecki said he had never heard of the proposed law when he was informed of the contents of the bill. "I can't see why I should be given jurisdiction of that kind," he said. "I hesitate to comment on the bill until I actually see it, but apparently it constitutes a discrimination against home owners who already have paid taxes."

Senator Huebsch said that the proposed law was discussed in relation to the Cook county tax muddle and the program for collecting the delinquent realty taxes during the initial conference. Attorney Keehn raised the point that most of the objectors in the county court had been given no opportunity of appearing before the old board of review and registering a protest against high assessments.

"It was generally favored during the conference as only equity in those cases where no hearing before the board of review was granted," said Senator Huebsch.

"The plight of the property owners was recited by Attorney Keehn, who said that he owned several loop properties on which taxes had increased greatly during those years."

County officials in general discussion of the measure recalled the Cisar, the Bistor, and the Koester cases as the most famous of the tax strike court suits.

Cite Personalty Omissions.

The tax strike was built about the contention of attorneys representing the strikers' organizations who alleged in injunctions and mandamus suits and in objections in the county court that fraudulent omissions of personal property from assessment rolls constituted an invalidation of realty assessments.

In Springfield yesterday Scott W. Lucas, chairman of the Illinois state tax commission, announced that the commission's decision on the general 15 per cent real estate reduction for small home owners ordered by the board of appeals, would be announced in Chicago on Monday or Tuesday. The order is opposed by Assessor Jacobs and other county officials. Both sides have agreed to abide by the tax commission's finding.

DRUMS STOLEN FROM AUTO.

Russell Miller, 7406 Champlain avenue, yesterday reported the theft of a bass and a snare drum from his automobile while it was parked in front of 1100 West 59th street.

WOODIN AWAITS PANTS OF ASBESTOS DUE TO OGDEN MILLS' JOKE

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Treasury Woodin will welcome the asbestos pants said to be on their way to him from Denver, Colo. He says, however, he won't need them.

When the fireproof clothing arrives it will be hung up by the Woodins as a memento, but the secretary will continue to wear his dapper but inflammable tailor made suits.

Woodin has his predecessor, Ogden Mills, to thank for the flame proof trousers. When Mr. Mills first heard who his successor was to be, Mr. Mills remarked he would need asbestos pants to sit in the secretary of the treasury's chair for the next four years. Mr. Mills, re-telling this story in Cheyenne, Wyo., on his way to California, inspired the shipment of the trousers from a Denver Democrat.

On his first call at the treasury building in Washington, Mr. Woodin confesses he cautiously felt the secretary's chair, pointed out to him by Mills, but he says he decided then and there that it was not hot enough to require him to wear anything but ordinary pants.

STATE SECRETS BILL REDRAFTED TO OMIT PRESS

Senate Committee Drafts New Measure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—A rewritten bill designed to protect state secrets without infringing on freedom of speech and press was reported today by the senate foreign relations subcommittee delegated to consider the "censorship" measure recently rushed through the house of representatives.

The bill was passed by the lower house at the urging of the state department and following secret hearings at which department officials told of a threatened unpleasantness with a foreign power, presumably Japan. Code messages between the Japanese foreign officers and its ambassador in Washington were reported to have been intercepted and were about to be published, it was said, in a volume written by a former state department code expert.

Storm of Criticism.

As passed by the house at the state department's behest, the bill prohibited and punished the disclosure of virtually any official news not authorized by a vague and unnamed "competent authority." The storm of criticism which answered the bill's house passage caused the senate committee to take immediate steps to redraft the measure and limit its scope to the immediate end in view.

Announcement that the bill had been redrawn was made today by Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader. The new draft, he believed, together with the section of the criminal code making accessories equally responsible for an offense, would be adequate to meet the situation.

Provisions of Bill.

The new bill provides:

"Whoever by virtue of his employment by the United States shall obtain from another having custody of or access to, or having had custody of or access to, any official diplomatic code or any matter prepared in any such code, or which purports to have been prepared in any such code, shall wilfully, without authorization of competent authority, publish or furnish to another any such code or matter, or any matter which was obtained while in process of transmission between any foreign government and its diplomatic mission in the United States shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both."

Armstrong said, that he wrote six letters to Mrs. Weckbaugh demanded $10,000 and that he wrote a letter to Charles Boettcher II., recently kidnaped millionaire clubman, threatening him with death if he prosecuted four persons now being held in Connecticut with that case.

THE NEW KIMBALL
Six Foot Five—Grand

THIS new Model made a musical mark, set new standards of musical performance, from the day it was introduced only a few short weeks ago. When told its price, professional musicians were amazed. They said such tone could only be expected—and found—in Grand Pianos that were priced at half again as much. It truly and modernly represents what life-skilled and life-trained Kimball piano craftsmen can do when given their usual artistic leeway. You should see, hear and play this new Kimball Grand today. Its marvelous tone and distinguished design will win you instanter. And you will agree that the price represents the true acme of values as set by the house of Kimball.

WATCHMAKERS OF NATION FACE SMUGGLER FOE

Industry in Illinois Hit by Illicit Trade.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—A vigilantes committee among domestic watch manufacturers would be the most effective way of choking off the smuggling of tariff-free watch movements which is threatening the jeweled watch industry with ruin, government officials said today. Sixty-two per cent of the industry is in Illinois.

Admitting the threat to the domestic industry arising out of the smuggling, customs officials declared themselves almost helpless in checking the flood of illegally imported mechanisms. Only by joining hands and pooling information with the watch industry can the government wipe out smuggling.

Illicit Profits Large.

So great is the profit to be reaped from the illegal importation of watches and so easily concealed are the tiny pieces that the small squad of customs detectives who devote their whole time to the problem is overwhelmed. A single shipment of rabbit skins was recently discovered to contain enough complete watches to replace two days' production by a domestic factory in addition to thousands of watch movements.

With only 200 agents under his command, E. J. Shamhart, chief of the customs bureau enforcement agency, explains that he can assign only a very few of them to the watch problem. Even then the agents must depend largely on information from the industry and previous criminal records to point out watch smugglers to them.

Wealthy and prominent persons in the watch business frequently help the government agents in apprehending smugglers of watch parts, Shamhart said. Two channels of information are open to the watch trade which the government has not the time, money, or men to tap, according to Shamhart.

Information Helpful.

If a manufacturer through his retail connection discovers competing watches being sold for very low prices he frequently can unearth clues of smuggling which will help the government in its enforcement work. Given a lead, government officials, trained in detection work, can quickly follow it up. In the last few months they caught almost a half dozen men, all with aliases, who were involved in one case.

The second source of information which the trade has is in its foreign connections. Watchmakers who purchase some of their materials abroad and legitimate importers frequently know more about the destination of watch shipments from foreign factories than the small band of customs officials.

Already much of this information is turned over to the government by the trade, sometimes even by illegal operators who wish to see their competitors in the smuggling racket wiped out. If the trade would be consciously on the alert for clues and regularly report them to customs officials the threat to the domestic industry from illicit importations might be largely done away with, it is said.

Diamond Action Cited.

Very little redress can be obtained by legal maneuvering, according to Shamhart. Congress and the customs bureau effectively blocked the smuggling of diamonds by lowering the duty and thus removing the premium of illegal operations. The duty was cut until it amounted to no more than the estimated cost of smuggling.

Watch makers can find no protection from this device, however, Shamhart says. Lowering the duty on watches would open the doors to a flood of watches and parts from Europe, where they are made much more cheaply because of lower labor costs. Ninety per cent of the cost of a watch is determined by labor charges, it is estimated.

INDIANA VOTES JUNE 6TH ON DRY REPEAL QUESTION

Indianapolis, Ind., April 8.—(AP)—Gov. Paul V. McNutt today issued the official proclamation calling a special election to be held Tuesday, June 6, to select delegates to a convention on repeal or retention of the 18th amendment.

The convention will be held June 26 in the house of representatives chamber.

The proclamation fixed the number of delegates to be elected at 329 and a bare majority will decide whether Indiana will ratify or reject the repeal proposal.

ENVOY'S SON TAKES A BRIDE

Pierre Claudel, son of Paul Claudel, retiring French ambassador to the United States, and his bride, the former Marion Rumsey Cartier, after their civil marriage ceremony at the French consulate in New York on Friday. The religious ceremony took place yesterday.

AMERICAN GIRL WEDS SON OF FRENCH ENVOY

Notables at New York Ceremony.

New York, April 9.—[Special.]—That extra halo of romance invariably glistening above an international marriage shone with great brilliance this morning when Marion Rumsey Cartier, daughter of an Americanized branch of the famous French house of Cartier, became the bride of Pierre Claudel, son of the French ambassador and Mme. Paul Claudel.

The Church of St. Jean Baptiste on Lexington avenue was crowded with diplomatic, financial and social notables in full flower, with French military attachés in dark blue coats and gay scarlet trousers, with legation secretaries in silk hats and long, picturesque capes, with American generals in khaki, ribbons and a bucket of decorations, and with dowagers in pearl dog-collars and sables.

Many Notables Present.

And while such invited guests as Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., the Belgian ambassador and Mme. Paul May, the new American ambassador to France and Mrs. Jesse Isidor Straus, Jules S. Bache, Mrs. Henry Clews, Mrs. Bayard Cutting, Mrs. Caspar Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Myron C. Taylor and Mrs. James B. Duke and her daughter, Doris, filled the front pews, the rear of the church was preempted by three or four hundred curious bystanders who had crowded the sidewalks about the church.

As soon as the ceremony started, after the hundreds of invited guests had been seated, the men, women and children from First, Second and Third avenues who had collected by the hundreds around the red carpet and marquee leading into the church, to watch the guests and the bridal party arrive, were invited to enter and fill the vacant pews at the sides and rear.

A sailor from the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, an old woman peddling gum, a truck driver in torn pants, a sweat shirt and a leather jacket, and a dozen aproned housewives with infants in their arms and small children clinging to their skirts, were among the throng that promptly acted upon the unexpeced invitation.

Delay Liner 30 Minutes.

Marion was given in marriage by her father, Pierre Cartier, who heads the New York branch of the old French jewelry firm that bears his name.

The liner Conti di Savoia was delayed half an hour in sailing to allow Claudel and his bride time to attend their wedding reception.

The couple sailed on the liner for their honeymoon. They will live in Paris, where Claudel has entered upon a diplomatic career.

RETURNS AFTER 12 YEARS TO FACE MURDER TERM

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Marten Desteigleer, 59, started back to New Hampshire today to complete a sentence of 25 to 30 years for murder. He went voluntarily after defeating the effort of his attorney to procure his release on habeas corpus proceedings.

The attorney told Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Lockwood that Desteigleer might not be the man sought by New Hampshire.

In the course of the argument the district attorney mentioned that Desteigleer had escaped 12 years ago.

"It was 13 years ago," the prisoner corrected. "Let us not equivocate. I am the man. I am willing to go back if you will only let me speak to my wife."

Desteigleer was convicted in 1919 of murder in the second degree after he had shot and killed his first wife in a jealous rage.

COURT UPHOLDS CONVICTION OF PALATINE BANKER

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the conviction of Ralph L. Peck, former president and attorney for the First National Bank of Palatine, now closed, who was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment and fined $2,500 by Federal Judge John P. Barnes on charges of embezzling $25,000.

The government's evidence, presented to the jury by Assistant United States Attorney Owen A. West, showed that Peck collected interest and principal on mortgages owned by the bank and converted the proceeds to his own use. His defense was that the bank owed him the money.

The opinion of the Appellate court, written by Judge Evan A. Evans, contained a rebuke for Judge Barnes, declaring that his refusal to grant the defendant a bill of particulars constituted "an abuse of discretion." Nevertheless, the court ruled, the evidence showed that the defendant was not surprised by the nature of the government's evidence and hence his rights were not prejudiced. The error was not a reversible one, the court held.

make any progress. For ten or twelve years every nation, he said, has been having practically embargo tariffs, and he thought it necesary, as he said, that American leaders of all forms of industry should open their eyes and reëxamine all those matters.

The state department has expressed the view that the old cry raised against "foreign entanglements," was just a bugaboo, and that today such a cry has about died out. It was recalled by a high official at the department today that in the régime of Secretary Charles Evans Hughes the demand that this country enter into no foreign entanglements was far spread and overwhelming, but in this day of the "new deal" another conception has fully developed, to the effect that this nation cannot prosper without entering into friendly pacts with the outside world.

Undersecretary of State William Phillips late today made it plain that in selecting eleven nations to which invitations were extended to send their "chiefs of state" or other representatives to the United States, there was no disposition to bar other nations from similar contacts.

He revealed that he had discussed the problems with diplomats from Colombia and Peru, among other nations and that the important issues confronting Cuba will be discussed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 8.—"When is a moratorium not a moratorium? When it is a suspension."

That is the popular riddle in England just now and it never fails to get an appreciative hand, particularly in political circles. It is hoped that it will make a great hit with President Roosevelt when Prime Minister MacDonald tells it to him at their forthcoming meeting.

There is now no effort to conceal that one of the first tasks which MacDonald has set for himself when he arrives in Washington is to secure a promise that the June 15 installment on the British war debt need not be paid.

Call It "Suspension."

The formula of a "suspension" is being used as less offensive to American opinion than a "moratorium," but the effect will be the same.

The argument will be advanced that if Great Britain and other debtors are compelled to continue paying. such an atmosphere will be created that it will be useless to hold the world economic conference. Hence, an appeal will be made to America to suspend temporarily and without prejudice the June payments.

There is now some talk that it may be necessary to postpone the world conference until autumn, or even next year. MacDonald, however, is anxious to hold it as early as possible, and he hopes to enlist the coöperation of Mr. Roosevelt to this end.

Davis Confers with Hitler.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 8. — Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's ambassador at large in Europe, who arrived here today from Paris, spent an hour and one half in conference with Chancellor Hitler tonight.

He also had an audience with President von Hindenburg and Foreign Minister Baron von Neurath.

Hitler is understood to have told Mr. Davis that Germany insists on equality with other world powers, but, he said, Germany does not intend to rearm if the other nations discard their arms or reduce the armed power surrounding Germany on all sides.

Balks at Humiliation.

Like all preceding chancellors, Hitler emphasized that the element of humiliation is rankling Germany, which feels that it is unable to defend itself from possible invasion.

Davis made it clear to Hitler that he realizes the dangerous psychological effect of such a situation. He said he is hopeful that the powers will come to an agreement on disarmament before the world economic conference meets.

Wilhelmstrasse believes Hans Luther, former president of the Reichsbank and the new German ambassador to the United States, should represent Germany at the preparatory economic conference conversations in Washington. A few experts including privy councillors Ritter and Posse, who have attended earlier economic conferences, will go to Washington to reinforce him. Luther sailed for America today.

Herriot Brings Up War Debt.

PARIS, April 8.—(AP)—The French cabinet is expected to determine finally on Monday whether former Premier Herriot will go to the United States to represent the government in conversations with President Roosevelt. At that time the cabinet will consider Premier Daladier's reply to questions from Herriot as to the stand of France on the war debts question.

Herriot, who lost the premiership because he insisted that France should pay the $19,261,432 war debt interest due the United States last December, asked Premier Daladier to answer certain written questions as to the conditions of accepting the mission to the international economic conference.

The government's condition was previously defined as awaiting a change in sentiment in the chamber in favor of the Dec. 15 payment of interest, but Herriot wishes to have the view point more in detail. The former premier is confident that President Roosevelt's invitation to attend the economic conferences will have a favorable effect on the chamber.

TRAIN DERAILED, WRECKING 27 FREIGHT CARS

Some of the cars piled up in the wreck of Rock Island freight train between Oak Forest and Tinley Park. A broken truck on a tank car was the cause of the accident, which delayed passenger service on the line for some time.

Delays Trains

Wrecking crews were busy last night clearing the wreckage of a derailed freight train from the tracks of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad between Oak Forest and Tinley Park. The accident occurred in the morning.

Blood stains were found on some of the wreckage and police believed at first that hoboes riding on the train had been killed. Several men were seen running away from the scene shortly after the accident, however, and the police concluded that one or two of them had been hurt, accounting for the stains. No bodies were found and evidently no one was killed.

The accident was caused by the breaking of a truck on a tank car loaded with sulphuric acid. Twenty-seven freight cars were derailed and a number of other cars piled up. Fifty feet of track was torn up. The wreck delayed passenger service.

BOAT BUILDER, WOMAN SEIZED IN RAID BY WIFE

Led by Mrs. Judith Leander, 3910 North Central avenue, police early this morning raided the office of her husband, Dan Leander, at 2235 Oakdale avenue, and arrested him and another woman. Leander is a builder of speed boats and operates a boatyard in the north branch of the river in back of his office.

The woman with him was Miss Gladys Hanson, 30 years old, of 2542 North Lockwood avenue, a stenographer. Both were charged with disorderly conduct at the Sheffield avenue station, released on cash bail, and ordered to appear in the Women's court tomorrow.

The arrests were made at Mrs. Leander's request. She complained to Lieut. Steve Barry that her husband was running around with other women. Once she saw him with another woman on one of his houseboats in the river, she asserted. Lieut. Barry, sent Detectives Emil Boettcher and Edward Tierney to Leander's office and the arrests followed. The Leanders are separated.

Gunmen Hold Up Hotel as Guests Lounge About

Four gunmen invaded the lobby of the Gladstone hotel, 6200 Kenwood avenue, early this morning, while fifteen guests were lounging about. They menaced Charles Peterson, the night clerk, and Clara Lilygren, the switchboard operator, and forced the former to give up $300 in cash and $50 in checks. Only a few of the guests were aware of the robbery at the time.

Waukegan Pair Jailed for Stealing 3.2 Beer

Milton Jones, colored, and Matel Martinez were sent to the Lake county jail at Waukegan yesterday to serve out fines of $40 each for stealing ten cases and two quarter barrel kegs of 3.2 beer from the warehouse of George Doyle, Spring and Water streets, Waukegan. The beer was recovered by the police.

G. O. P. SALON OF MRS. J. F. CURTIS BECOMES CLUB

Washington, D. C., Aurll 8.—(AP)—Important looking legal papers are about to incorporate a depression project extraordinary, making Mrs. James Freeman Curtis a club hostess in her beautiful 120 year old home here.

She's the Mrs. Curtis of the Washington, New York, and South Carolina society columns. Her hospitable Washington home has been a gathering place here of that inner circle of Republicans to which the late Nicholas Longworth belonged. That tradition continued when it was leased for two years to former representative Ruth Pratt.

Mrs. Curtis frankly announced she no longer could afford to go on living in her house, and would have to store her furniture. So her intimate friends decided they "just couldn't give up nineteen twenty-five F street."

So they started the club, to be patterned upon the Algonquin round table—primarily a place where there may be zestful political discussion over the luncheon and dinner table. Mrs. Curtis is to be president, manager and hostess, making her actual residence in a smaller house next door which also belongs to her. George A. Garrett is vice president, Newbold Noyes, treasurer, and Mrs. Rose Wallach Merriam, secretary.

Machinist Shot as He Walks Along Street

Anton Jetseck, 35 years old, of 1808 Larrabee street, a machinist, was shot in the chest last night by unidentified gunmen in the 1700 block, Larrabee street. Police believe the bullet which struck him was intended for some one else. Witnesses said he was walking along the street with another man when several others approached them. One man fired supposedly at Jetseck's companion, but hit Jetseck.

G.O.P. POLITICIANS AWAIT MISTAKE BY ROOSEVELT

Hoover Fans Sigh for Old Regime.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—The politician is beyond understanding, but I hope none of my fellow citizens will misinterpret the momentary acquiescence of the Republican statesmen as a policy of altruistic coöperation for the good of the U. S. A. Politicians do not change and the present attitude of nonresistance, or passive resistance, in time will reveal itself as the working of a plan to give Mr. Roosevelt and his party plenty of rope.

The Democrats, in a time just as critical as the present, took the opposite method to achieve the same result. They gave Mr. Hoover no rope whatever, so that whatever he may have wished to do he was prevented from doing lest, by any miracle, he should leave the people laughing as he said good-by.

If Mr. Hoover could have obtained advance copies of all Mr. Roosevelt's measures during the last session of congress and had submitted them in the identical way that Mr. Roosevelt did they would have been turned down, because there was no intention that he should be allowed to accomplish anything which would have been of any political value to his party regardless of any possible value to the country.

Hope for Painful Fall.

Nowadays, in Washington, it is the secret hope of surviving Republicans that Mr. Roosevelt and his party in their enthusiasm and the frisky enjoyment of almost unlimited opportunity to err will involve themselves in some perfectly ghastly mistake and the sooner the better, which would ruin the Democrats all over again and make Mr. Hoover seem to have been not such a terrible failure after all.

It will be pretty hard to make Mr. Hoover seem to have been good, except by contrast with some one worse, and it makes a Republican politician gloomy to realize that Mr. Roosevelt can hardly be as bad as that.

Even the most captious and optimistic tabulation of Mr. Roosevelt's faults up to now leaves Mr. Hoover with an overwhelming score, much of it having to do with his sulky personality, but wishing is free and the Democrats, with their proven knack for balling things up, might come from behind in the course of four years and make another Lincoln of Hoover just by comparison.

Sigh for Hoover Return.

It may be surprising to hear that Mr. Hoover left behind him some persons who yearn and dare actually to hope that he will be President of the country again, to be elected by Mr. Roosevelt's mistakes of the next four years. In that case it would seem that there could be very little country for him to be President of, but that is something which does not enter the calculations of a true politician.

You may reckon that if Roosevelt should be bad enough to make Hoover look good, then the country couldn't hold together through four years of him. But the politician takes the country for granted. It has stood up under the government of many a gang of politicians with no interest but their jobs and the easy life and minor importance of their position, and some pretty terrible Presidents, so why not?

Roosevelts Avoid Hauteur.

The popularity which Roosevelt has won since his inauguration is due largely to so minor a thing as plain civility to the reporters who cover the White House. The job got Mr. Hoover down, and, with the exception of a few yes-men who told him he was misunderstood and a victim of circumstances and the times, bare tolerance was all that he could give or expect in his dealings with the press.

The Roosevelts, on the other hand, put on a show with, apparently, never a dull minute. Though it may be impossible to hold public affection through four years on card tricks and dialect stories, it remains to be seen how long the act will continue to amuse and divert.

They will get better than an even break in the papers, because the men on the White House run like the President personally and the girls who have grown into a numerous corps, including some first class hands who can write a good story without recourse to baby talk, are growing very fond of Mrs. Roosevelt.

The status with the newspaper crowd of Roosevelt and Hoover may be compared to the old case of Dempsey and Tunney. Dempsey was friendly, especially to new reporters who were trying hard and likely to appreciate and remember minor words or deeds of kindness from the great man, but Tunney was offish, his word was not always reliable and be began his administration with a cordial insult to the whole craft.

It is said of Mr. Hoover that he tried to be a good fellow, which overlooks the fact that he had to try, whereas Mr. Roosevelt seems to do it naturally.

This is not to predict that all will be sweetness and mutual admiration between him and the reporters for four years, because he may feel rotten some day and take it out on some one of the boys or some pest may ask him some fool question calling for a short answer.

However, no end of stories about his cheery smile, civility, love of children and pets and the joke he cracked to old Mike, the gardener, will do him much good if the farm relief plan doesn't work or his economies are more than offset by new spending in whatever guise.

Honor Veterans

Capt. William Wright, national commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, and other civil war veterans of the Chicago area were honored last night at a banquet in the Hotel Sherman given by the Sons and Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War. The banquet commemorated the sixty-seventh anniversary of the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic. Life in the civil war days was depicted in tableaux. Other entertainment included singing of war songs and costume dances. More than 250 persons attended.

"Throat Is Locked," Scotti Says on His Way Home

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Antonio Scotti, who sang his farewell to grand opera at the Metropolitan in January, sailed for his native Italy today on the liner Conti di Savoia. "My throat is locked. No more," he replied to questions if he would sing again. Scotti, recently 67, will spend the summer at Lake Como and his old home in Naples.

INTOXICATED MAN PICKS POSTOFFICE FOR HOLDUP PLAN

Red of face and uncertain of gait, a man walked into the Federal building yesterday afternoon and made his way to the postal savings and money order department on the first floor. There he drew a revolver and thrust it through a grilled window under the nose of Clerk Matt Madsen.

"Grab a handful of that dough and hand it over buddy," the man demanded.

Madsen clutched the weapon and the hand holding it and called for help. Several spectators and two postal guards disarmed the man, who was taken to the office of Postal Inspector David Lyons. There he identified himself as James J. O'Brien, 27 years old, 2700 Indiana avenue. He said he had recently lost his job as a bartender. The postal authorities said O'Brien was intoxicated.

Rob Cemetery Office and Force Victims Into Vault

Edward Monroe, manager of the Montrose cemetery, 5400 North Crawford avenue, and two employés were held up yesterday by three gunmen who took $100 from the cash register in the office. The robbers forced their victims into a vault and told them to stay there while they left in an automobile.

INFLATION WINS NEW RECRUITS IN WASHINGTON

Program Being Prepared, It Is Believed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special]—There is one topic that is almost universally fashionable on capitol hill these days, and that is inflation.

The new deal has caused some striking swings of opinion. Among the recruits to the inflationist ranks, for example, are said to be Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.] and Senator Frederic C. Walcott [Rep., Conn.]. The former, though he often votes in concert with the radical group, has the reputation of bring a hard-headed business man. The latter is one of the conservative New England bloc.

See Action Assured.

That there must be and that there is to be inflation of some sort, leaders or both the Democratic and Republican sides and at both ends of the capitol are agreed. It is certain that assurances have been given at the White House that some sort of inflationary program is in preparation.

Measures passed and pending are, of course, pointed indirectly at inflation. The emergency banking act validated a whole new type of currency, but one which so far has been little used.

The farm bill is aimed at inflation from the reverse side, by stepping up farm commodity prices and writing down farm indebtedness. The coming home mortgage bill will offer a means of writing down urban mortgages.

The banking bill, now in preparation, is to include a depositors' guarantee fund which will be counted on to go far in releasing the six billions of money estimated to be frozen in the banks.

Liberal Loans in Prospect.

A more liberal loaning policy by the R. F. C. is in contemplation, and when the Federal Reserve board receives the revamping that is scheduled for it in the near future new appointees will be selected with an eye to a more liberal interpretation and use of the potent authority of the board.

But beyond these measures another is looked for which will strike directly at the present condition of national deflation.

The plans range from the remonetization of silver to the reduction of the gold content of the dollar.

With most of the country's hoarded gold driven out of its hiding places and an embargo on gold exports in effect, the stage is ready for inflation whenever the President sees fit.

What the scheme is to be is still a secret. At least administration leaders at both ends of the capitol profess not to know.

Mr. A. J. Boland, 1422 Devon Ave., cleaning and tailoring, praises the scientific work of

Dr. Pinkston's Foot Institution

Mr. Boland affirms that he suffered for many long years with foot troubles. The pains from his feet caused his back to ache and his whole body to feel tired and hurt all over, for which reason he wrongly thought he had RHEUMATISM, NEURITIS, ARTHRITIS or KIDNEY TROUBLE when his troubles were all caused from his feet. Mr. Boland was advised to go to Dr. Pinkston's Foot Institution, where every DISEASE and AILMENT of the FEET is relieved and cured. DR. PINKSTON, The Orthopedic Foot Specialist, has his own factory and laboratory, where he makes his own arch supports and ankle and leg braces, and his wonderful preparations. Dr. Pinkston personally diagnoses and treats your feet. He takes the cast of your feet and also X-rays where it is necessary, and if you need arch supports or braces he makes them from the cast of your feet, eliminating all guess work and giving you instant and permanent relief. He also makes a preparation to cure whatever is wrong with your feet.

So, to Mr. Boland's amazement, a complete recovery was accomplished and he now enthusiastically states that Dr. Pinkston cured all of his foot troubles, permitting him to enjoy life to the full and recovering a degree of vitality and general good health that had been denied him for many years. Mr. Boland says that foot troubles cause bad health and that you can get them cured at DR. PINKSTON'S FOOT INSTITUTION.

GOVERNMENT IN EMERGENCY.

When in 1917 the United States lost its feeble finger tip grip on neutrality and dropped into the midst of the war there was a makeover of the American government to meet the requirements of new conditions which had been foreseen but for which no real preparations had been made. In the emergency the government began to take over the industries of the country as it saw fit and to conscript the citizenship not only for combat but for the civilian activities in support of combat.

The individual found himself obeying the government in some of the most minute details of his life, even as to the amount of sugar and white flour he used, the times he ran his automobile, and when he burned electric light. The railroads went under government control, agriculture prices were stimulated or fixed, and the industrial structure was remodeled under government direction to produce what the government needed.

There was some, but very little, criticism of these measures. Most of the opposition came from violently nonconformist elements and some of it was made a penal offense. Politics in a partisan sense was submerged and a Democratic administration found itself supported by a general sense of patriotism in the conduct of affairs regarded necessary for the winning of the war.

It is recognized that in times of great danger governments find general assent for procedure which in less critical moments would receive more critical study. No prudent person can be quite rid of the thought that the danger which excuses or justifies extreme government measures is in itself a danger to be faced after the emergency has passed. The American people know this to be true because their government did not recede when the war reasons for its overexpansion had disappeared. The very federal machine which Mr. Roosevelt is now trying to reduce in size and field of operation found that many of its parts were war parts.

At this moment there is the paradox of a government reducing itself in one direction and increasing its size in another. The second procedure is viewed in the light of emergencies; the first as a disclosure of general principle. That is, it may be assumed that the administration wishes it could bring federal activities back in line with old principles, but is forced by desperate conditions to adopt measures for the time being seemingly contrary to the principles advocated. Criticism of the administration now has been, as it was in 1917, virtually suspended. This is not because the opposition is not apprehensive but because there is now, as in war time, a general feeling that the administration plan should be given its opportunity to work out. How wisely founded this feeling is no one can foretell. There are proposals on the President's schedule which in themselves could cause the wildest alarm. There is always a great danger in the disappearance of critical opposition when national measures of wide-sweeping consequences are being adopted. The country may live to rue the day when it accepted a dangerous or doubtful doctrine and accepted it merely because it was stunned by the shock of adverse events. It may call to its aid allies which remain to subdue it.

This has happened before in the history of this comparatively short-lived nation. People look back with astonishment at their acceptance of emergency measures. In a safer position they cannot understand how they were swept off their feet by a current which has subsided, leaving them to work their way out of problems forced upon them by fear and mental stampede.

Even in the present suspension of criticism and opposition warnings should be given. The doctors are making free use of the medicine chest. It is to be hoped that they have the antidotes at hand for some of the extraordinary doses which they are using on the patient. The cuts which are being made in the ordinary processes of government are reassuring as to principle. They, however, do not immediately affect the fact that the debt of the United States is returning to monumental proportions. Debt, in public and private life, is the dead weight now holding the nation's head under water.

Criticism, it may be expected, will remain conservative if not sluggish for some time yet to come. That very fact should cause the federal government to be extraordinarily introspective and highly critical of its own proposals.

HOW TO STUDY.

Dean Virginia Gildersleeve of Barnard college has informed the students that the faculty doesn't think much of surveys, considering them pernicious and superficial. Instead "intensive samples" in each field are offered the student for the first two years of the college course.

As a modest observer of the labors in the vineyard of higher education, distrust of the survey seems to us commendable. Dean Gildersleeve warns that there are fashions in curricula as in clothes and that the faculty may at some time change their minds. We hope not. Surveys are an invitation to loose thinking and dubious generalization unless they are prepared for by intensive work. There is plausible criticism of the educated in America that their knowledge is inexact, and certainly nothing is more conspicuous than their tendency to sweeping generalities which gratify their emotions and are inexpensive in the costly coinage of exact thought. Thus we have an intelligentsia that "with extensive view survey mankind from China to Peru," and know very little about it.

It is important, as Dean Gildersleeve told her young hearers, not to be turned out uneducated specialists, but the selection of major subjects, we think she is wise in advising, should be put off as long as possible. A background of general culture is advisable for the specialist, but easy and uncritical generalization is not a part of it. We doubt there is any educated class in the world so given to wishful thinking as ours.

THE COURTS DURING PROHIBITION.

The prohibition administrator in New York City has disbanded his "padlock squad" of sixty or seventy men because orders from Washington handicap their work. The orders forbid wire-tapping and buying drinks. They were methods obnoxious to American ideas and could only have been adopted under the domination of bigoted prohibitionism. With their departure, it is to be hoped, will go another offensive device of dry tyranny which they supported, the Volstead injunction or so-called padlock proceedings. Under a provision of the Volstead act the process of injunction and contempt was applied to citizens charged with offenses against the dry law, depriving them of the use of their property and imposing jail sentences upon them without trial by jury. In fact, these proceedings were evasions of civil guaranties, and ought to have been held unconstitutional. Yet federal judges were eager to use the power granted by the dry law and showed little interest in the underlying issue.

If the American people are as jealous of their liberties as their forbears or predecessors were they will not forget this aspect of the prohibition régime and they will be more careful in the future in granting power to impair private rights. Theoretically the federal courts are taken to be the final defenders of the constitution, and especially of its civil guaranties. But during the domination of prohibition fanaticism they have, with few exceptions, proved feeble defenders. They have shown themselves about as regardless of essential principles underlying and inspiring our constitutional system as the legislative and executive branches of government. Supposed to be raised by judicial function and by permanency of tenure above the pressure of popular impulse or political domination, they, with few exceptions, have bended complaisantly to the prevailing winds. It has been an ominous sign of weakness where we had thought to have established a strong bulwark for freedom for fundamental rights.

GOD SAVE SOMEBODY.

The United States Army band in a recent concert in Washington included in its program a composition by a Canadian band leader dedicated to the prince of Wales. There was more than a little unction in the voice of the Washington announcer as he related that the prince had graciously conveyed his acceptance of the dedication to the Canadian composer and that the United States Army band was delighted to play the piece as a gesture of international good will. The title was "God Save the Prince of Wales." The band, which is a good one, may now take the piece to the bank and see what it can get on it, or might inquire whether the British will rate the performance as a satisfactory contribution to the reduction of the debt. Very likely too much could be made of the incident, and it may make little or no difference whether the army band plays "God Save the Duke of York" or even "God Save Mr. Lascelles." It might even be consistent with the higher realities if a dedication were to Mr. Lascelles, of whom the prince is reported credibly to have said, "Lascelles is getting royaler and royaler, while I am getting commoner and commoner." The self-deprecating humor of that remark would reveal the difference between virtuosity and dilettantism. Some day Mr. Lascelles will be missing and a search probably will find him sitting in the glass room in the Tower, which contains the crown jewels, sitting there to enhance their value.

There might, however, be urged as a condition for such tributes by the United States Army band or any other official musical organization in the United States a reciprocal arrangement which would provide for, say, the playing of a piece by the band of the Coldstream Guards dedicated to Huey Long. "God Save Huey Long" would be not inappropriate to the welfare of the United States, or even a piece entitled "God Save Senator Borah" would have its sentimental value in these days. We'll not ask any British band to play "God Save the Debts," although we know of no other power that will.

FARM MORTGAGES AND LEASES.

[Des Moines Register.]

Prof. Millard Peck, who had an important part in formulating Iowa State college's sliding scale cash farm lease, now advocates extension of that principle to farm mortgages and contracts for sale of farm real estate. This idea is theoretically sound. It has been advanced in England in the form of an "index bonds" proposal. There is no reason why interest and principal payments on long term contracts should not be stabilized on the basis of the prices of products with the proceeds of which those payments are to be made. It would be necessary, however, to overcome the inertia of long standing custom to be sure that both parties entered such contracts with an adequate understanding of their conditions.

For example, in the case of a farmer owing a $10,000 debt on his land, it would be easy to persuade him today of the advisability of substituting a contract to pay the market price of 2,000 bushels of corn as interest each year, and the price of 40,000 bushels of corn at maturity to discharge his obligation. That would be assuring him a price today of 25 cents a bushel, which is considerably more than his corn would bring at the elevator.

But would he be able to see corn rise to $2 a bushel, as it was in 1919, without getting the idea that his confidence had been abused by the mortgagee? Could he pay with equanimity the equivalent of $4,000 for a year's interest on a mortgage that was originally only $10,000 in principal amount?

This is not to argue against the merits of the plan, which is in fact thoroughly sound. It is only to point out that we have accustomed ourselves to doing business the other way, and the groundwork will have to be very carefully laid for any such departure from the theory of fixed money payment in which our long term contracts are nearly always stated.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT EFFICIENCY

BY ROBERT B. GOODMAN.

The United States is composed of forty-eight dissimilar states. These states are divided into local governments generally termed counties. In many of the northern states the counties are divided into cities, villages, and towns or townships and in some instances these units are divided into school districts, drainage districts, or other subdivisions. There are in all about 150,000 local government units.

Such is the subdivision of government that every American citizen lives under several layers—usually from three to five—of public administration and taxation. Of these the local governments are responsible for four-fifths of the nation's tax bill and they expend five-sixths of the aggregate national and local tax revenues.

In the bureaus of the federal government and in the state departments are many elaborate functions, recently developed to staggering proportions, that are being condemned for their excessive cost—not only because of uneconomic administration but because they are unjustified. In their infinite variety some of these activities are essential, some are futile, some are outside the scope of government, and some are economically unsound.

In our local government units, however, the functions are more basic, more a part of our social and economic needs, and more directly within our individual observation. These services may be loosely classified as education, transportation, security, charity, and public finance.

There is an inherent efficiency in city government arising from services to a compact population. This brings with it the demand for greater elaboration—not only schools, streets, and security but libraries, museums, zoos, parks, swimming pools, and beaches, street lighting, fire departments, health clinics, hospitals, water works, sewage disposal, and numerous other utilities. All these services, even with the most efficient administration, incur higher costs of government per capita for large cities than are incurred in well settled rural communities. However, in sparsely occupied rural areas governments cannot perform the bare essentials of modern public service without incurring a per capita cost that is disproportionately high.

Mr. Frank O. Lowden recently presented this phase of local government inefficiency in a poignant paragraph. "Our county jails," he said, "have been a disgrace to our country for more than a hundred years. . . . Our county almshouses have been a reproach to our civilization since they were first established. This is not the fault of the officials, who in the main are humane and considerate men. It is the system which is to blame. The inmates of county jails and almshouses are too few in number for modern or humane or economical administration of either."

What is true of these institutions also applies to our rural schools in quality and cost of instruction, because the pupils are too few in number. In another sense it applies to secondary roads. The cost of the poorest dirt road is exorbitant per farmstead served in sparsely settled regions.

The aggregate inefficiency of the various local government functions is reflected in their increased cost per capita as the numbers they serve decrease. In studies made in Wisconsin, which show results corresponding to those of studies in other states of similar pattern, it is found that in the range from well settled communities to the most sparsely settled townships there is a gradually accelerated rate of increased cost of government functions per capita.

Comparisons of land values and net returns per acre in these towns indicate that all other costs of agriculture as well as social activity increase in the same manner as local government costs. It is in the less populated regions that we find the greater farm abandonment, larger areas of tax delinquent land, and the breakdown of local government finance.

Surveys have disclosed possible reductions in local government costs of one-fourth to more than one-half, depending on complete elimination of duplication, an optimum of centralization, and the complete segregation of habitable regions from forest land areas. Political science in this field has observed and noted the following three procedures for increasing the efficiency of local government units:

Consolidation. This is the reduction in the number of local government units. School districts are replaced by a joint district or a county unit. Two or more towns may be joined. Some less realistic in their grasp of the social elements of this problem advocate the abandonment of the township structure. There are now pending in several states measures for the joining of counties and for consolidating city and county governments. There are constitutional barriers to consolidation in many states and there is political sentiment that opposes abridgment of local self-rule.

Centralization. This is change in administrative function without change in government structure. Local government functions have grown more specialized. Standards have become more exacting. Administration calls for trained minds and skilled labor. Road construction and maintenance require costly modern machinery. These trends have necessitated greater centralization in administration of all local public services. The centralization of function has been from towns to the county and from the counties to the state. The extreme of state centralization is now being demonstrated in Virginia and North Carolina.

Reorganization. Much is being said in favor of complete reorganization of the local government pattern in many states. Desirable consolidation of units and reasonably limited centralization of functions will accomplish much good. Yet these measures do not fully meet the objective of economic efficiency joined with a thoroughly democratic structure. The reorganization of local government to meet this objective might include three classes: 1. Free cities or metropolitan areas (in which overlapping and duplication of local jurisdiction would be eliminated); 2. Urban, Rural—Small cities and areas of agricultural land use; 3. Territorial—Unorganized and unpopulated areas of forest and recreational use, governed by the county or, as in Maine, by the state.

The progress made in reform of local government has been definite in every state, but the field is so broad and the progress so gradual that it has largely escaped popular notice. We have not been particularly concerned with long time programs. They have a way of working themselves out that is "good enough"!

Now, however, these local governments are facing an emergency that calls for immediate action. In all these units the property tax base has declined, both through the shrinkage in land values and the increase in tax delinquent land. The poorer and less populated regions have asked and obtained more and more state aid from the general tax revenues. This occurred during years of increasing general prosperity. The system has broken down completely in the present depression. Now the "richer" industrial and commercial urban centers are themselves in difficulties. They are naturally opposing the diversion of sorely needed general tax revenue to rural and underpopulated regions where these distributions are in effect a subsidy to marginal agricultural land use.

All this changes the complexion of land use and local government planning from a long time program to one of immediate local and national administrative and legislative concern.

WEARING OUT.

Something in our way of living is throwing too much strain on certain very important organs, such as the heart, the blood vessels, the brain and spinal cord, the liver, the kidney, the pancreas, and the digestive organs. We must change our tempo in some way or other or pay heavily in sickness and death.

R. H. Britton of the United States public health service has recently published a study of trends of health in the United States. In some particulars the study extends to the health of the pioneers who lived in the seventeenth century. In others it goes back to the first census—that of 1790. In the main it starts with health conditions in certain cities in 1820, or soon thereafter, and is continued to the present day.

The experience has been long enough to establish in what direction we are going, though in many particulars the data are fragmentary. The outstanding improvement has been in the contagious diseases. Some of these have been wiped out and others have become negligible. The tendency of this group is toward a permanent rating of insignificance. The greatest advancement of the last five years has been in diphtheria. The trend may indicate that it is due to disappear shortly, but a better prophecy is that it will continue, but as an unimportant disease.

There has been great improvement in the health of babies and children of more than one year of age. Those sixty years and older are out of luck. The recent course does not augur well for them. The seamy side of the picture relates to organic degenerations of the tendency in this group. Britton says:

"Attention is more and more focused upon those diseases associated with the breakdown of the bodily organs. The general trend of these diseases is regarded as upward, even when the age factor is taken into account. Organic diseases of the heart form a group of vital interest. There has been a marked decrease of heart diseases among young persons. The constant rise in the adult population, becoming more and more marked as the older ages are reached may or may not be real. The mortality rates from cancer for specific ages continue to rise."

He does not discuss what we are to do about this curve toward worse conditions, nor does he say anything about the wearing out of certain organs.

Others have made some suggestions. For instance, the New York city health department a number of years ago made kidney examinations of all of their employés. A large proportion were found to have albuminuria. Most of those so affected were restored to health by following certain simple laws of hygiene. The principal of these was regularity of living, quiet evenings, regular hours for retiring, and plenty of sleep.

Better eating habits should lessen the prevalence of infected gall bladders and infected crippled livers. Many other suggestions have been offered. The problem is to have them followed.

BEATING MIGHT HELP.

J. M. F. writes: I am a man 32 years old. For a year I have had attacks of hysteria. I get these attacks every week or two and I go to bed and have hysterical crying spells. I cannot speak. I have choking sensations, followed by nervousness. When I get angry I become terribly nervous and cannot get my breath. My doctor dismissed me, saying he could do no more for me.

REPLY.

Your doctor is right. You were not a case for him in the first place. You will either cure yourself of hysteria or you will not be cured. You will get pleasure out of the discomfort of hysteria and you are willing to pay the price. If somebody would beat you up every time you have a spell the price of your pleasure would be too high and probably you would get well before the next time for a treatment. Self-cure is the only satisfactory cure of hysteria, though in this case a prize fighter might help.

UNDERSIZE VEINS.

Mrs. H. D. H. writes: Please advise if undersize veins, causing blood pressure of 160 to 180, in a young man of 23 years, is curable. Also proper treatment.

REPLY.

A blood pressure of 160 to 180 in a man that age calls for investigation. I do not think the size of the veins is the cause. I do not know how that will be decided, either for or against. Is this young man highly emotional? Is worry the cause? If you can find the cause that should be the foundation of treatment.

SACCHARIN.

H. S. writes: Is it harmful for a healthy person to use saccharin in coffee, fruit, and cereal? I want to reduce weight.

REPLY.

A small amount of saccharin eaten daily is harmless. However, you will need to do much more than eliminate sugars if you are to reduce. Bread and cereals, potatoes, peas, beans, and corn are fatteners. So are oils and fats. Eating full meals is a fattening procedure which you need to cut out.

HAY FEVER.

J. M. A. writes: Have you any booklet on hay fever? The tree hay fever season is nearly here and that for grass hay fever will come along soon.

REPLY.

We have a booklet on hay fever which we send on receipt of 10 cents and a stamped, addressed envelope.

CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, March 29.—[Friend of the People.]—My wife was born in Ireland and I in this country. We have been married for three years and I understand that this does not make her a citizen. 1. Please inform me as to whether or not she can be deported if papers are not taken out. 2. Where are papers applied for? 3. How much does it cost for such papers? M. S.

1. This question should be referred to the district director of immigration, room 1019, Manhattan building, 431 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

2. Application blanks may be obtained at this office, room 776, Postoffice building, Chicago.

3. As the subject of the letter is the wife of a citizen she may apply for naturalization without a declaration of intention (first paper). The cost is $5 for a certificate of arrival and $10 fee of the clerk of the court for filing a petition.

FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT,
District Director U. S. Department of Labor.

COLLECTING ON NOTE.

Prophetstown, Ill., March 29.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A, as administrator of an estate, holds a note signed by B. A sells this note to C, indorsing same as administrator, but neglecting to include the words "without recourse." B goes bankrupt before the estate is closed, but C waits until about two years later to come back on A for payment of the note. The estate in question has by this time been fully settled and closed. Can C collect from A for the amount of this note? F. T. C.

You do not state exactly what C wrote on the back of the note. The negotiable instruments law provides that a party's liability is not limited merely by adding descriptive words such as "agent" or "president" after his name.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CONTRACT OR MORTGAGE?

Chicago, March 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A relative bought a permanent waving machine a year ago with the consent of her husband. A few months afterward they separated. She expected he would pay for it, as he is working and has not offered to support her. The company she purchased the machine from is now insisting that she return it. She thinks it should collect from her husband. 1. Does she have to give it up? 2. Can they take it away from her? M. F.

1. Depends upon whether they have a conditional sale contract or a chattel mortgage.

2. See 1. If they have no such document they would have to rely on securing judgment against her and proceeding by execution and levy and she would be entitled to assert a $100 exemption.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 9, 1917.

WASHINGTON.—With actual war operations likely to materialize before the end of the week the administration and congress will enter today upon the stupendous task of making effective the participation of the American republic in the world conflict. An attack by Germany is expected. The attack is expected from any one or all of several quarters. German submarines and cruiser raiders are likely to appear off the Atlantic seaboard at any time and shell American ports. A submarine attack on the Panama canal is another possibility. The likeliest quarter, however, is Mexico. It is known that there are thousands of German reservists in Mexico, that many have gone there from the United States since the diplomatic break with Berlin apparently in accordance with a prearranged plan, and that there are German officers in the Mexican army and German agents in positions of high trust in the Carranza government. There is ground for the belief that the movements of the Germans in Mexico are not unrelated to the Zimmerman plot to draw Mexico and Japan into a war alliance against the United States. The uneasiness of the government concerning German schemes in Mexico has been aggravated by the failure, if not the absolute refusal, of Carranza to give any satisfactory assurance of friendliness to the United States and of determination to relieve the American nation of anxiety regarding German operations on the border.

LONDON.—The Daily Express' Calcutta correspondent says an amazing story of a Bengal plot to bring about a revolution in India, officered by Germans, to establish an India republic or a Turkish-India, to foment rebellion in Bengal, to overpower British troops, to seize arsenals, to attack Fort William, and to sack Calcutta, was disclosed by Sir Reginald Craddock, member of the vice regal council, in a statement made at a recent meeting of the imperial legislature council in Delhi.

LONDON.—A Daily Telegraph dispatch from Milan says the Austrian declaration of a rupture with the United States was decided at a meeting of the two emperors at German headquarters as soon as President Wilson's message was known. It is gathered from a dispatch to the Neue Freie Presse that the question was discussed between Bethmann-Hollweg and Czernin and both were in accord as to the necessity of the rupture.

WAR SUMMARY.—London reports the torpedoing of two German destroyers off Zeebrugge. One was sunk, according to reports received in London. Paris reports the piercing of German lines in Belgium. The German rain of shells on Reims did little damage, the war office statement says. Petrograd reports the landing of troops more than 200 miles west of Trebizond and the capture of ten Turkish sailing vessels.

CHICAGO.—The grimness of war came home to Chicago last night when 450 members of the Illinois naval militia—the first volunteer contingent to leave the state since war was declared—marched through the loop and entrained for the east.

WASHINGTON.—Full and loyal support to the government in war against Germany has been pledged by organized labor of America. The council of national defense announced this in a statement giving details of a conference held with its advisory commission, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and heads of various other labor and employers' organizations. No strikes or labor disputes of any kind during the war is the program.

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Hugo Reisinger, daughter of Adolphus Busch, brewer of St. Louis, issued a statement explaining the report that United States secret service agents had discovered that until recently a wireless receiving plant was operated on the roof of her Fifth avenue home. "There is no wireless or any instrument of this kind on my house or on any building in which I am in any way interested," Mrs. Reisinger declared.

WASHINGTON.—Gratifying reports have been made to the department of justice from its agents in all parts of the country on the behavior of Germans and German-Americans following the declaration of a state of war between the two nations. While about 100 special arrests have been ordered, and others are expected, Attorney General Gregory said that so far the situation is encouraging.

WEARING THE WRONG COSTUME

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

REQUEST FOR AN ACCOUNTING.

Newman, Ill., March 29.—I noticed the letter of Harve Badgerow in Wednesday's TRIBUNE saying the farm in northwest Iowa in which he is interested paid a net profit of better than $8 an acre in 1932, besides a good living for those on the farm. This is such a remarkable and, in comparison with what we get in the corn belt of Illinois, an unreasonable income for 1932 that I ask him to please furnish a statement showing from what products he could get that much income at 1932 prices.

If corn, wheat, or oats, I would like to know yield per acre and price at which sold. If live stock, I would like to know whether cattle or hogs, what they cost, the gain in weight and at what price sold, and the amount of grain and hay fed. I ask the cost of planting and harvesting the crops and marketing them. I would also like to know if they used gasoline or horse power and cost of gas or feed for the year. I would also request the amount paid for taxes, insurance, repairs, and other necessary expenses. Also, did he count any interest on his investment, or did he lose the income which he might have got on his money if in government bonds?

In this, the best corn belt of Illinois, corn averaged about 50 bushels per acre and sold at 10 to 12 cents per bushel. It cost 2 cents to husk it and 1 cent to shell. This was cash expense. Tax at $2 an acre has to be paid in cash. Wheat yielded 16 bushels per acre and sold for 35 cents. Threshing bill was 5 cents a bushel cash, seed 75 cents an acre, and tax $2. Oats made about 40 bushels and sold for 10 cents.

Those who fed cattle lost money because of the low price of fat cattle. An itemized statement showing just how more than $8 an acre was made net will be hailed with eagerness by a million farmers who would gladly adopt your method, which, if correctly showing such a profit, would solve the farm situation and release Washington from any responsibility. Let us know how it was done, giving details.

HENLEY EVERSOLE.

PRICE FIXING.

Kankakee, Ill., March 30.—THE TRIBUNE would have us believe, from two articles in last Sunday's paper and one recently from a bunch of Bloomington grain dealer farmers, that farmers are actually on the warpath fighting price fixing or a better price for their product.

You must admit that the farmer is generally a man of at least average intelligence and would hardly be expected to fight a proposition that would put good money into his empty pocket. Of course, in almost every herd there is a maverick who prefers drifting away by himself, but as a class there is no such fight being waged.

The price fixer, or advocate of a fixed minimum price, is not a criminal or a bootlegger, but the pioneer who is blazing the way for a return to prosperity, and every knock given the idea is a knock against that return. A FARMER.

WASTING MONEY.

Chicago, March 30.—At 12 o'clock noon March 28 I parked my car opposite 123 East 22d street, Chicago. Directly behind my car was a work truck bearing the sign "Chicago Water Pipe Extension Department," with license plate "B 3 Ill. '33." The engine was running, but the car was unmanned. From the window of the restaurant where I had my luncheon I could observe the truck. At 12:35 p. m. the operator and another employé returned to the truck and drove off.

How long the engine had been running before I drove up I do not know, nor how many hours a day, how many days a week, how many weeks a year, these city employés burn up taxpayers' money to save themselves the task of cranking a motor. G. W. N.

QUESTION.

Chicago, March 30.—Will some one kindly let me know who originally laid out Lincoln park? What was the name of the landscape gardener? ANDERS.

KOHLER, FOR EXAMPLE.

Chicago, March 29.—Let me congratulate you on your editorial in this morning's TRIBUNE, "Eighty Million Dollars Shy," inasmuch as it furnishes food for serious thought along various channels, one of them being your constant and everlasting attack on the La Follette régime in Wisconsin and your advice to the people of that state to discharge a state government there that has brought the state through without any bonded debt at a time when your own state is up to its neck, even over its neck, in debt.

It is almost amusing to think what shape the good old Badger state might be in if they had followed your never ending advice and turned the state over to a bunch of politicians such as have been running the state of Illinois. No, I guess the people of Wisconsin will have to struggle along without your help and keep on as they have been going—on the pay as you go policy of the La Follette Progressives. JOHN C. BUDD.

LIBRARY HOURS.

Chicago, March 30.—A communication from John E. Flynn in today's Voice of the People complains that the libraries of this city close daily at 6 p. m. We ask space to say that this is not true of the Chicago Public library, which is open on weekdays from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., nor of its forty-four branches, open from 9 to 9. Perhaps the writer refers to the John Crerar library, a privately endowed institution whose depleted income has forced it to reduce its hours.

Sunday service in public library branches was discontinued some fifteen years ago after experience that seemed to show that the demand was too slight to justify the cost. The downtown building is open Sundays from 1 to 6 p. m.

RAILROAD STRATEGY.

Chicago, March 31.—It is interesting to watch the efforts which the railroads are making to have the federal government step in and arrange the railroads into systems.

This is only a first step toward unloading them on to the government and letting the good old taxpayer shoulder the burden of debts that has accumulated from an era of the wildest and worst financing which ever plagued an industry.

The fact that a part of the unsound securities which the railroads have issued are held by insurance companies or trust companies should not be sufficient reason for our government to assume these obligations nor place arbitrary barriers against other forms of transportation to drive traffic to the railroads.

A TAXPAYER.

THE HONEYMOON.

Keokuk, Ia., March 24.—How long are you going to continue to picture Mr. Roosevelt as the keeper to the gateway of heaven? Please desist. A large proportion of your readers are weary of it. Judging by the information in your columns the last week, it would be more appropriate to picture Mr. Wallace and Mr. Roosevelt as the keepers to the gateway of Russia.

I suppose there is a tacit understanding among the great newspapers of the country not to criticize the new administration. This is proper. However, when the administration runs wild, as it has on this agricultural plan, it is time to call a halt. Mr. Roosevelt himself calls this an "experiment" and "untrod path." The country is having a hard enough time getting along without being burdened with such a radical "experiment." E. CARROLL TABER.

IN NEED OF IMPROVEMENT.

Chicago, April 5.—The various radio broadcasting stations are extolling the beauties and virtues of Chicago, but they neglect to mention the deplorable condition of the streets and the lack of street signs.

Also, why not prohibit parking on Broadway, one of the busiest north and south streets, so that it would be possible to pass a street car in safety? WILLIAM H. ESTES.

EDUCATOR FINDS RED MOVEMENT IN CHINA WANES

Dr. J. L. Stuart of Peiping "U" Speaks Here.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Communism as a movement is on the wane in China, J. Leighton Stuart, president of Yenching university, Peiping, said yesterday in a discussion of the last three months' events in China before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations at the Palmer house.

"Communism in China is not the political philosophy that underlies the Russian system," he said. "It has more the aspect of a smashing revolution that would give everybody a fresh start. It is largely waning and only two provinces remain to be cleaned up. It does not constitute a serious menace to Chinese development.

"The resumption of diplomatic relations with soviet Russia was in the nature of a protective action by China, for there is a clause in the treaty which secures China against propaganda of this sort. The fact that China is a nation of small peasant landholders, while little capacity for highly developed organization, makes the further spread of communism improbable."

Long Fight Ahead of China.

As to the general outlook for China in its efforts to resist Japan and develop a strong nation, Dr. Stuart was not hopeful of the near future, but confident that in the long view China would be able to emerge.

The university which he heads is five miles outside Peiping and on the highway toward the pass in the Great Wall through which further Japanese invasion would come.

"There is constant fear," he said, "as to what Japan will do next: invade North China, restore Pi Yu to his ancestral throne as an extension of the figment kingdom of Manchukuo or in a separate state, or persuade Chinese leaders to declare against the central government and establish another puppet ruler.

"I know of no one living in that region who ever takes seriously the idea of Manchukuo as an independent kingdom as anything but a Japanese creation. It is the general feeling that it would not survive one day if Japan withdraws. Manchukuo is infinitely more disorderly now than it ever was under any Chinese régime.

Discount Japanese Statements.

"Will the Japanese attempt to recover Shantung, which remains a grievance in their thinking? Would they extend this effort to the rest of North China? The declarations of the Japanese government have very little effect on our thinking. They are either the Japanese conception of diplomacy or statements forced on them by the unrestrained actions of the military leaders.

"There is constant speculation as to these things but I cannot give the answer. The concensus in North China is that probably in the next few weeks or months there will be no actual invasion of North China, but we do not know. The Japanese have done so many unbelievable, unexpected things. I am convinced that the Tokio government never desired the advance into North China. But the question is whether they will try to shatter the resistance of China, make sallies and punitive expeditions into North China, to prevent further resistance.

"There is an awakened national self-consciousness in China. Student opinion registers the reaction of the masses as these ideas penetrate. They are aflame with resentment, more acute because of their impotence. There is a growing cynicism regarding the league of nations. They think the only thing to do is to become nationalized, militarized, and take back what they have lost by force.

War Lords' Rule Passing.

"The leaders of China are also determined. There are signs of the passing of the war lords. A new and younger group is coming into power, whose loyalty is to the nation. There is an anti-civil war league, using the boycott against their own oppressors. It is the emergence of a new type of leadership.

"The only real government now in China is public opinion. No leader can defy it. Any settlement with Japan based on self-interest would be opposed. The nation is in a flux and ferment. Communism and civil war are the waves on a troubled sea. The great underlying unity of Chinese life and thought flows on. Time is not much of a consideration with them. They know if Japan advances they will be defeated, but they will resist out of self-respect, and they will continue to harass them and struggle against them."

Outer Mongolia, the speaker said, had been sovietized, while Japan has designs on inner Mongolia.

BOY DROWNED

ROSS LOOKER.

After an all night search along the lake shore near the Foster avenue pier, Gerald P. Looker, 901 Argyle street, sales promotion manager of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese company, early yesterday found the body of his 12 year old son, Ross. The boy had been fishing and had apparently fallen into the water from the pier. The body was lying in shallow water near the beach.

U. S. DOUGHBOYS CAUGHT IN FIRE OF SINO-JAP BATTLE

Yanks Stationed Between Opposing Lines.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, April 9 [Sunday].—The little detachment of American troops stationed at Camp Barrows, Chinwangtao, received its baptism of fire yesterday when bullets from both Chinese and Japanese lines rained into the compound, according to reports received here. The Americans are commanded by Lieut. Dennis M. Moore. No American casualties were reported. The soliders remained in bombproof shelters constructed last January following the Japanese occupation of Shanhaikwan, about 12 miles north of the American camp.

Reports from Japanese sources said Chinwangtao has been captured, but Chinese reports said the Chinese troops, commanded by Gen. Ho Chukuo, formerly commander at Shanhaikwan, drove the Japanese back in a counter attack.

Charge Soviets Shipped Arms.

The Japanese claim that the attack on Chinwangtao was conducted solely by Manchukuoan forces, but the Chinese allege that the army was largely composed of Japanese and Coreans wearing Manchukuoan uniforms.

Japanese airplanes bombed the entire surrounding area, including Changli, several miles behind the line, where a large American missionary station is located. The missionaries are reported to have gone to Peiping on instructions from the American minister, Nelson T. Johnson.

Chinese reports tell of chaotic conditions at Kalgan on the Great Wall, 100 miles northwest of Peiping, as a result of the Japanese drive toward Dolonor in Cahar province west of Jehol. Dolonor is 200 miles north of Kalgan, which is also in Chahar province.

Sever Russian Railway.

HARBIN, Manchuria, April 8.—[U. P.]—The Manchukuo government today forcibly severed connections of the Chinese Eastern railway with the trans-Siberian railway at Manchuli, northwest Manchurian gateway to Moscow and Europe.

The action recipitated a crisis in which Soviet officials immediately wired the commissary of railroads at Moscow for instructions.

Manchukuo officials authorized the severance of the connection after they had failed to receive satisfactory answers to their charges that the Russians were carrying rolling stock into Soviet territory and not returning it.

The dispute had raged for months, marked by earlier charges that Russia was making unauthorized shipments of arms over the Chinese Eastern railway.

Meanwhile, the Manchukuo foreign commissioner ordered an official protest drawn up for Slavtsky, pointing out that his communications department had failed to negotiate for a settlement of differences.

URGES CLASSES IN COURTSHIP IN UTAH'S SCHOOLS

Salt Lake City, Utah., April 8.—(AP)—A proposal for courtship classes in all senior high schools in Utah was proposed today by Dr. E. E. Ericksen, professor of philosophy in the University of Utah.

The plan is based on experiments in teaching courtship in high schools in Sevier and San Pete counties of this state and in his classes at the university.

"On the stage, love is the favorite butt of ribald jokes," he said. "In current superficial fiction it is handled lightly to make 'best sellers.' The total result of this bungling manner of treating the deepest emotion of the human race is a vast ignorance and confusion."

AUTO PLUNGE KILLS ONE.

Paducah, Ky., April 8.—(AP)—Charles Scott, 49, of Mayfield, tobacco exporter, was killed and William Oliver, 19, also of Mayfield, was injured today when an automobile in which they were riding crashed through a guard rail and fell 20 feet into a flooded canyon. The machine, under 30 feet of water, was not salvaged.

MOSCOW DEFIES BRITISH THREAT TO HALT TRADE

Prisoners to Hear Sabotage Charges Tomorrow.

MOSCOW, April 8. — [U. P.] — Threats will not influence the soviet court that will hear evidence of sabotage against six accused British subjects on Monday. This was, in substance, Moscow's answer today to the threatened British embargo.

While it had been originally announced the trial would begin Monday, it was delayed until Wednesday. The indictments probably will be read to the defendants on Monday, however.

Press Denounces Threat.

The Moscow press vigorously denounced the threat of embargo, significantly indicating that evidence against the accused Britons was strong. Izvestia twice referred to them as "people whom the government considers guilty."

Pravda, in ironic vein, foresees the discomfiture of Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, who denounced soviet justice in the house of commons, when evidence against his "innocent countrymen" is made public.

The press implied that British Conservative leaders had attempted to prevent the trial because they feared its disclosures. Izvestia said:

"Perhaps they know more about these affairs than the public suspects. Perhaps they are afraid the trial will uncover phases which are still unknown."

Argue "Can't Boss Us."

The principal point of the press argument, however, was that Great Britain could not treat the soviet union as though it was a colony.

"The workers and peasants of the soviet union haven't overthrown the power of Russian landlords and capitalists in order to allow foreign capitalists to boss things in soviet territory," Izvestia said, "or to allow foreign imperialist governments to dictate laws to a nation of soviets."

GRANT BOY BAIL PENDING APPEAL OF DEBT TERM

William Weber, the 15 year old Fenwick High school sophomore who was imprisoned for two weeks for debt, will be allowed his freedom while his case is appealed to the State Supreme court. Superior Judge Joseph B. David yesterday overruled a petition for a writ of habeas corpus but announced that he would accept a $1,000 bond while the case is appealed.

Weber was imprisoned after Mrs. Lucille Saliba, of Berwyn, obtained a $2,500 judgment for injuries resulting from an auto accident in Oct., 1931. Because the verdict granted by Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude, contained a special count of malice, the boy was unable to obtain his freedom as an insolvent debtor. Mrs. Saliba paid his board bill according to statute in order to keep him in jail.

"We have peculiar debtor laws in Illinois," Judge David said, "because the law has not been changed for 80 years. It's time they were changed."

AIR RACES WIN FINAL APPROVAL BY MAYOR CORR

Sees Trade Stimulus and Aid to Charity.

Mayor Frank J. Corr yesterday gave his final approval to plans for staging the American Air races at the Chicago airport on July 1, 2, 3, and 4 by issuing a permit for the use of the city property on those four days to the Chicago Air Race corporation. The air races are sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The permit also was approved as to form by Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph F. Grossman, and countersigned by City Controller M. S. Szymczak. It was issued by Commissioner of Public Works Oscar E. Hewitt under an ordinance passed unanimously by the city council last week. The permit states that the air races will in no way interfere with regular scheduled operations of the airport.

Corr Calls Races "Fine Thing."

"I am much interested in air racing and I believe the American Air races at the airport on the first four days of July will be a fine thing for the city as a whole," Mayor Corr said. "A fine form of entertainment will be provided for the residents of the city, the charities will benefit and business will be stimulated generally."

Ten per cent of the gross receipts from the air races are to be paid to the city under the permit, it was announced by Capt. M. M. Corpening, president of the Chicago Air Race corporation. The cost of any permanent improvements made to the municipal airport is to be deducted from that percentage, but that deduction is not to exceed half of the 10 per cent. The air race corporation furnished a large bond to indemnify the city against any losses.

Plenty of Parking Space.

Details of staging the meet are to be handled by Walter Wright, director of aviation for the city, and John A. Casey, the airport manager, under the direction of the commissioner of public works.

Adequate parking area adjoining the airport has been obtained by the air race corporation to provide free parking for all who drive to the races, Capt. Corpening said. Two surface lines on 63d street and on Cicero avenue, will provide faster and more convenient transportation than any other large air event held in Chicago has had.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 115; recovered, 95; stripped, 15 [from police records for the twenty-four hours ending at midnight Friday].

Court cases: Edward Dougherty, one year in Bridewell for larceny; Edward Dobrochowski, six months, and Robert Gerth and James Buck, sixty days each, for driving a car without the owner's consent, by Judge Gutknecht.

File New Charges Against $206,000 Robbery Suspect

Clyde Bridges, arrested here Friday in connection with the $206,000 robbery of the Northwestern National bank in Minneapolis, is wanted also for bank robberies in Birmingham, Ala., and Chattanooga, Tenn., it was learned yesterday by police. The Minneapolis robbery occurred March 29, 1932.

So shines a good deed in a naughty world.
"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE."

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

When Pastor Matthews' old horse died after what had been, like his master's, a life of good works, Dr. Clark Hawley of Chicago said to his fellow Rotarians, "I think we ought to buy the old gentleman another horse."

For years Pastor Matthews and his horse had been faring among unfortunate children in a district to the southwest of Chicago and bringing them to an extemporized orphanage which the pastor maintained. There the ailing were treated without charge by physicians, among whom was the oculist, Dr. Hawley.

"Good work!" said the fellow Rotarians, and bought a horse.

That was a quarter of a century ago, when there was only one Rotary club in the world—Chicago's—and it was the start of what Rotarians now call "outside work" as distinguished from activities carried on by and for themselves. The original idea of Rotary was "How can I help my fellow member in a business way?" But helpfulness soon overleaped the boundaries of membership and became international.

From Cairo to Cairo.

"International"—a large word though easily used—became a fact, a tremendous fact, when you think back to that horse deal of five and twenty years ago. It became, in short, "Rotary International," an organization flourishing in good times and bad in 76 countries of the world and numbering 3,600 clubs with a membership of 150,000. They dot the globe from Cairo in Illinois to Cairo in Egypt, and thence back to the Illinois city at the confluence of the great rivers. In England alone there are 350 clubs; in Chile 43, in China 5, and Foreign Minister Po, commenting recently on the chaos in his country, said, "There is only one thing that is uniform and united in China, and that is Rotary."

Chicago houses at 211 West Wacker drive the administrative body which, without oppressive meddling, coördinates the work of these 3,600 far flung centers and outposts of helpfulness.

Its budget is $600,000 a year.

A Roll Call of Nations.

In the rear rooms whirr and click printing presses turning out documents in English, German and Spanish. On a blackboard in the mailing room the sailing dates of mail steamers leaving New York this week. A thousand pieces of mail coming in daily, among them Rotary club magazines published by Rotary districts in France, Italy, Spain, Germany, Norway, Brazil, Peru and Singapore—20 such monthlies in all and some of them fine examples of printing and art work. Going out were 145,000 copies of the Rotarian. Pointing to stacks of them, a secretary said, "A member is not allowed to announce himself as a Rotarian in his advertising in the Rotarian nor in the Gyrator—which is Rotary spelled backward and with a G prefixed to make it a word—and in his other advertising he would not. A few days ago a new member called up and said, 'I'm thinking of sending out a business circular to members. Is that ethical?'"

An Epigram Worth Italics.

Frequent arrival of Rotarians from foreign lands in these offices and reception rooms—business men from Latin American countries, business men from Australia on their way to England, and for all of them endless courtesies—arrangement of appointments, mapping of routes, purchase of railroad tickets. For one incoming Australian, it being his birthday—a fact disclosed by the archives—flowers to his hotel. Call that a shade excessive if you will. Perhaps International Secretary Perry detected my suspicion that it might be so, for his crisp comment was:

"O," said I—and saw a light.

Mr. Perry and his aids imparted much curious information as they led the way past stands of massed flags of 76 nations. "In India," said Mr. Mason Taylor, "Mohammedans, Brahmins and Malayans will sit together at a Rotary table—and nowhere else. That is because Rotary avoids the contentions of politics and religion. Some of the members will bring their own cooks and their own food—that was our suggestion—and so contamination is avoided.

"Constantly Rotary tries thus to compose artificial differences. Take Princeton, Ill. Railroad tracks divide the town into north and south sides, and until Rotary was organized in Princeton the two sides never united in any cause. Princetonians saw that such was not the spirit of Rotary—and the railroad tracks are no longer a barrier. To return to the orient—Singapore Rotary has representatives of seventeen different races in its membership—all speaking to one another."

The World at Your Finger Tips.

We continued our march through the offices, reception rooms and corridors which occupy two floors of International's headquarters. It was like having the world at your finger tips in a neighborly way. There were thousands of cubic feet of steel cases containing biographical data on all the Rotarians in the world. Glancing haphazardly into the cases the aids would come on scores of names they knew, and many a name would prompt a pleased reminiscence about "a fine fellow in South Africa"—or in the Argentine, or in Alaska—"whom I got to know well at our convention in Vienna in 1931. His problems are about the same as mine. . . . We still correspond. Can you imagine him and me wanting our countries to go to war?"

There were bookcases filled with volumes on the history, economics and attractions of remote countries, the gift of Rotarians who are citizens of those countries. On the walls were scores of large and small maps set with colored pins that gave you the world march of Rotary at a glance, and in cabinets were stamps issued by governments to commemorate Rotary conventions, and souvenirs of international conventions from the first one, held in Chicago in 1910, when there were only 16 Rotary clubs in the world, to the conventions in Edinburgh, in Ostend, in Vienna, and in Seattle last year, when 3,514 clubs were represented. And there were sheaves of data on exchange of supplies for prisoners of war taken in the chronic ructions between Bolivia and Paraguay, with an Argentine club working as intermediary on behalf of the prisoners.

Coming to Practicalities.

Now all this—the maps, the 150,000 biographies, the international souvenirs and literature—seemed very grandiose, but sometimes things can be grandiose without being wholly substantial. All was opulent and highly organized, but what did it come to besides documents and super-gladhanding?

That question I ventured as delicately as might be, asking, among other things, what Rotary was doing to ease the rigors of depression.

At that point young Mason Taylor disappeared and I listened to Mr. Perry's placid recital of how Rotarians in recent months have helped put competitors in business—who by the rules of Rotary membership are non-Rotarians—on their feet. In half an hour Mr. Taylor returned with three closely typewritten pages which I wish the satiric Henry Mencken, who probably has done Rotary more harm than any other living writer has done any large cause, could see. They contained more than fifty separate items—it will be seen that Mr. Taylor is a fast worker—of which a score will show what Rotary clubs the wide world over have been doing in recent months for the unemployed.

Hard Work and Hard Cash.

Rotary in Valparaiso, Chile, supervises government's public kitchens; has supplied ten million meals.—Saltburn, England, population 2,500, fitted up a vacant house as a clubhouse for unemployed.—Barcelona, Spain, pays double luncheon cost and thus provides thousands of meals from the supercharge.—And here the other way around: Turku-Abo, Finland, economizes on club's luncheons and gives amount thus saved to unemployed.—Maywood, Ill., organized community garden for unemployed.—Toowoomba, Australia, placed 70 unemployed boys on good farm projects.—Metuchen, N. J., feeds 178 families each week, gives 450 quarts of milk a week and noon luncheons to 70 school children.—Falkirk, Scotland, organized a barter work plan for 50 unemployed artisans.—Brasov, Rumania, organized a fund of 25,000 lei and created work for unemployed.—Flint, Mich., studied the "Youth Adrift" problem and organized boys' club.—Shanghai, China, raised $17,000 for school for children of Russian refugees.—Sheffield, England, 1,500 fatherless boys given employment.—Webster, Mass., gives 240 bottles of milk daily to school children of needy families.—Dewsbury, England, organized welfare center and workshop for unemployed.—Mlada Boleslav, Czechoslovakia, organized mess for indigent university students.—Los Andes, Chile, organized "Gota de Leche" [drop of milk] fund for poor.—San Antonio, Tex., operates relief kitchen for children of unemployed.—Calcutta, India, obtained a shelter for homeless street urchins.—Port Arthur, Tex., has sandwiches and coffee for club luncheon and gives the saving for relief work.—Durban, South Africa, introduced community chest idea in South Africa and raised £15,000.—Saarbrücken, Saar basin, organized children of well-to-do families to take extra luncheons to school for poor children.—Porto, Portugal, supplies food daily for 40 destitute families.—Holland, Mich., organized and supports crippled children's work in public schools.

Hearken to Treadwell.

All that, thought I, is extraordinarily specific. Not just resolutions and recommendations but eloquent of hard work and hard cash. George Treadwell, secretary of the Chicago Rotary club, largest in the world, which has headquarters in the Hotel Sherman, a staff of six aids to handle the work among nearly 650 members, and an annual budget of $36,000, said that Rotary was not warm for resolutions. "Not much concerned," said he, "with rushing into the municipal situation, or into prohibition, with a lot of resolutions, and so tearing the membership apart. Our most fruitful activity in Chicago is educational—that is, showing a man how to be a more serviceable member of society. Rotary does not function on backslapping and slogans and ballyhoo."

If George Treadwell saw from the tail of his eye my lingering suspicion—implanted by my old friend Mencken—that perhaps once it did, he was not resentful.

"Rotary," he continued, "has passed the sophomoric age. Once a man said to me, 'There's a lot of slapstick in Rotary.' Well, there isn't—not at the age of 28, if there ever was. I don't call the asking of the blessing at our weekly luncheons slapstick. I don't call the singing of 'The Star Spangled Banner' slapstick. I don't call courteous and friendly introduction of guests slapstick. I don't call a lecture and pictures by Burton Holmes on a remote and interesting country, or a talk on the stratosphere by Piccard slapsticks. I don't call genial visiting by five or six hundred of our Chicago members at the tables slapstick. Travelers, men of science, men of letters, great economists talk to us, and we pay them handsomely. Of our annual budget of $36,000 the sum of $6,000 goes to speakers at our luncheons. And I don't call that riding the world for free entertainment.

A Club Without Groaners.

"Such are representative programs for Rotary luncheons. They and the visiting are a toning up. I have heard in the ranks of Rotary less groaning about depression than I have anywhere else, and I would say that all but about half a dozen of our 650 members have weathered the storm.

"As for Rotary International's membership, it decreased by five or six thousand during part of the depression period, but since last October it has had an increase of 1,600 members and 46 clubs, and the gain is continuing. At that, we have no paid organizers and no ballyhooers for membership drives. We don't seek publicity as we used to, and, if it's any comfort to critics who maintain that Rotary makes friendliness glow by a forced draft, I might add that the fluent first name habit, which secreted especially to irk them, is decreasing.

"I don't wish to talk in slogans but in facts, and the outstanding fact is that fellowship is the motive power of Rotary. It gives men a sense of obligation to their homes, to their communities, to their churches and to their associates and their competitors in business. That is practical idealism. Material bonds easily disintegrate. It is the spiritual note and not the pocket nerve or slapstick that has held Rotary together.

But a Shining Drop.

"Of course, Rotary is only a drop in the bucket. Nobody has the idea that it is going to reform the world, but it is constantly working on the individual to inspire and stir him to special work whether it be in his downtown environment, or his suburb, or in a circle of university students. It doesn't believe in a small coterie of its officers rushing into a cause and striving to bind the members to it.

"Men, we like to think, get their stimulus in Rotary and then do Rotary work as citizens—as individuals. If a member can at the moment do no more than take residents in an old people's home out for a ride once a week that's a start. Soon he works in a larger field—work for crippled children, work for the blind, work for the Boy Scouts, work for struggling students. Chicago Rotary supports fifteen boys in universities, not on the basis of charity but on a repayment basis that gives us a revolving fund. In university towns throughout this country and other countries Rotarians have been entertaining students in their homes for the last two years. It has been good for the boys and good for the members.

Super Smart Alecks Hate "Service."

"In creating opportunities for service—service is another word that seems to annoy our critics—Rotary formulates programs on a specific need when there are no other existing agencies to meet the need, and then it says to a member, 'Now go to it in your own way.' Rotary clubs all over the world exchange those programs, partly through international headquarters in Chicago.

"That is how 'the Bristol scheme' was made known to the whole world. It was originated by the Rotary club of Bristol, England. The plan was to get pledges from members and nonmembers to spend a definite sum for needed work in order to help the unemployed. It was promptly adopted by more than a score of cities in Great Britain and more than a million pounds were pledged. Somehow I can't think of that as a mere backslapping."

Nor I.

Over at Rotary International, a few blocks from the headquarters of Chicago Rotary, Secretary Perry uttered the most arresting phrase I heard during my two afternoons with the members, the mechanism and the archives of Rotary. "We work," said he, "among underprivileged boys—that's taken for granted—but we also work among overprivileged boys."

"Work among overprivileged boys"—I thought the phrase great and the task vital, the task of reaching the lazy, indolent, thriftless, irresponsible juvenile who is a more acute problem than the underprivileged boy because he has been spoiled from the nursery up.

"How do you help the overprivileged boy, Mr. Perry?"

"By unfolding to him in a cheerful way—without oppressive admonition, I mean—the satisfaction in [1] Productive earning, [2] Wise spending, [3] Careful saving, [4] Helpful giving. Sometimes it takes a great deal of patience to teach an overprivileged boy the value of money."

The Romance of Rotary.

As Wednesday of next week brings his 65th birthday, this article is by way of being an anniversary piece about his inspiration. He is Paul Harris, a Chicago lawyer, and the lawns of his home in Morgan Park are planted with trees sent to him by grateful Rotarians in many parts of the world. So, unlike many benefactors of the race, he achieves his monument while he is alive to enjoy it—and the monument is alive.

At various times in February, 1905, he said to his friends Silvester Schiele, coal dealer; Gustavus Loehr, mining engineer, and Hiram Shorey, merchant tailor, "What would you think of a friendly club composed of men each of whom represents a different profession or business? You see, there would be no rivalries, and it might work for good acquaintanceship among different callings and put more fellowship into business. No reason, as far as I can see, why business friends should not be social friends."

Schiele, Loehr, and Shorey agreed.

"And we could meet in rotation at each other's offices," suggested Paul Harris. Agreed.

And that was the start of world-wide Rotary—four members, and the first meeting of their new club on Feb. 23, 1905, in Mr. Loehr's office in the old Unity building, 127 North Dearborn street. Then election of Mr. Schiele as president, and other meetings in rotation in other members' offices. Hence the club's name "Rotary," which was Mr. Harris' suggestion.

The first man to be elected to membership by the four founders was Harry Ruggles, printer, now head of H. L. Ruggles & Co. on Wacker drive—and still printing. He is a historic figure in Rotary because he was the originator of club singing. Of the founders Mr. Shorey resigned his membership and Mr. Loehr is dead. The scheme of membership based on one representative to each profession and business has been so enormously enlarged through classifications and subclassifications that the potential membership of a Rotary in a city where all the classifications are represented would be about 4,000, so highly specialized has 20th century business become.

Early in Chicago Rotary's history Charles Newton said, "Why not meet at noonday luncheon instead of at each other's offices at night?" Agreed. Thus with one suggestion and another Rotary grew and grew out of an office in a skyscraper to become a world girdler.

SOLEMN RITES USHER IN EASTER WEEK IN ROME

City Is Crowded with Worshipers.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Italy, April 8.—With crowded churches, accentuated by the coincidence of Holy year, the solemn functions of Easter week will be inaugurated in Rome tomorrow with the presentation to Pope Pius XI. of artistic palms, offered annually, in accordance with a tradition that dates from the time of Pope Sixtus V., by the Bresca family of San Remo. The palms presented the pope are confectioned by the Camaldolesi Benedictine monks.

Monday Commendatore Manzia, master of the apostolic palaces, will also present palms to the pontiff and to Cardinal Secretary of State Pacelli and similar offerings will be made to all the Vatican prelates and officials.

Churches to Be Thronged.

Easter week in Rome, when the city is usually filled with foreigners, draws the interest not only of Catholics but also of Christians of other faiths because of the solemn functions mystically reënacting the Passion, and tomorrow for the Palm Sunday masses the major basilicas of St. Peter's, St. John Lateran, Santa Maria Maggiore, and St. Paul's Outside the Walls will be thronged with visitors, with the members of chapters, seminaries, and colleges. In some of the minor churches the ceremonies devolve with different oriental rites.

Interest tomorrow centers at St. Peter's. Outside, in the huge square, scores of venders will distribute palms to those coming from mass. Up until 1870 the pope himself used to celebrate the Palm Sunday functions here of blessing and distributing the palms and then after the procession attending mass sung by one of the cardinals.

The cycle initiated with the blessing of the palms culminates on Holy Thursday, when the concourse at St. Peter's is unusually great, for on that day takes place the special ceremony, unique in the Catholic world, of washing the papal altar.

Washing the Papal Altar.

The papal altar stands in the center of the cross over the confessional in which repose the remains of the prince of the apostles, according to church tradition. It is surmounted by the huge bronze canopy made by Bernini. It is called the papal altar because only the pope may say mass here.

The function takes place at twilight, after the Tenebræ officers have devolved and the relics of the Passion exposed to the faithful from the Veronica loggia. Taking part in the ceremony is a cardinal archpriest with the chapter and the Vatican clergy. The altar is washed with a mixture of aromatic wine, a boxwood brush being used for the purpose. The cardinal archpriest first brushes the altar with the wine and after him each of the clergy.

The Holy Stairs.

With the exception of a few churches in which it is still carried out the ceremony of the washing of the feet has fallen into disuse during Easter week. Formerly it was a function performed by the pope himself

On all the Fridays of Lent and especially on Good Friday an incessant stream of devout people flows in pilgrimage to the holy stairs, near St. John Lateran, to climb the steps on their knees as a particular act of piety. According to the tradition, these are part of the stairs of the prætorium of Pontius Pilate, bathed by the blood of Christ when he climbed them after being flagellated.

Good Friday ceremonies are also notable for the penitential open air procession which takes place at the church of Santa Croce in Jerusalem in which participates the Cistercian fathers and numerous members of Catholic associations and clubs.

Bells Ring on Saturday.

On Holy Saturday there are ceremonies only in the morning, and at noon the bells, which have been silent since Thursday, are rung again in symbol of the resurrection and the advent of Easter. Saturday morning at St. John Lateran there is a ceremony of the benediction of the baptismal font which usually attracts many foreign visitors. The function is performed by the members of the chapter and afterwards the font is strewn with flowers which are taken away as valued mementoes by the people, the same as are the wisps of the boxwood brush used to wash the papal altar on Holy Thursday.

Next Sunday the Easter services at St. Peter's will be made memorable by the fact that Pope Pius in person will descend to the church to say mass at the papal altar and afterwards bless the crowds from the loggia above St. Peter's square. It will be the first time this custom has been repeated since 1870.

ASSOCIATED PRESS NOT A MONOPOLY, U. S. COURT RULES

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 8.—(AP)—The Associated Press was absolved of charges of monopoly, discrimination and unfair competition in findings of fact and conclusions of law filed in Federal District court today as a result of its suit to prevent a Sioux Falls radio station from using its news dispatches without authority.

The ruling confirms earlier decisions by Federal Judge James D. Elliott, and was filed to clarify the record in the event of an appeal from the temporary injunction which restrains station KSOO from "pirating" Associated Press news.

Judge Elliott issued the injunction March 14, supplanting the temporary order granted with the filing of the suit against the Sioux Falls Broadcast association which operates station KSOO. Odin Davis of counsel for the broadcast association said an appeal would be taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

PALM SUNDAY'S SERVICES TODAY OPEN HOLY WEEK

Special Rites Planned in Chicago Churches.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

When Cardinal Mundelein gives his blessing to the palm branches which will be distributed to those who throng Holy Name cathedral this morning for the observance of Palm Sunday, he will recall Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem just four days before Roman soldiers put him to death on the cross.

Palm Sunday, for those who observe its religious meaning, arouses feelings of both triumph and sorrowful devotion. This is true among Christians of all faiths, in as much as practically all groups now observe the day with ceremonies varying in elaborateness.

While Cardinal Mundelein and his priests in the 250 Catholic churches of the city bless and distribute palm sprays at solemn masses this morning, priests of Episcopal and Orthodox churches will be performing similar rites.

Introduction to Holy Week.

In a thousand or more Protestant churches of the city special musical programs will be given. Palm Sunday opens the religious period of Holy Week which closes Saturday, the eve of Easter. Protestant pastors in their sermons will relate the meaning of Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem to present day life.

Typical of the extensive programs for Palm Sunday and Holy week is that planned by the Rev. Dr. Asa J. Ferry, pastor of the Edgewater Presbyterian church, Bryn Mawr and Kenmore avenue. Dr. Ferry, in following the plans laid down by the Church Loyalty crusade sponsored by the Chicago Church federation, has associated Palm Sunday with the crusade's recruiting day. His sermon this morning will call for life enlistment in the Christian cause. Dr. Ferry will preach at special Holy week services each night this week except Saturday.

Services at Fourth Church.

A similar holy week program has been planned at the Fourth Presbyterian church. On successive nights beginning tomorrow, Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson, pastor of the Fourth church, will introduce neighboring Gold Coast pastors to his congregation. These Holy week preachers at the Fourth church will be Dr. Duncan H. Browne, of St. James' Episcopal church, the Rev. Dudley Scott Stark, of St. Chrysostom's church, Dr. John Timothy Stone, of the Presbyterian Theological seminary, and the Rev. Theodore Carswell Hume, of the New England Congregational church.

Loop services will be held during the noon hour at many points. Bishop George Craig Stewart will be the preacher each noon at the Grand Opera house services conducted by the Church club of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago. The Christian Business Men's committee, which has been conducting loop services during the last two years, announces a series of special preachers for Holy week services at the Garrick theater.

Lutherans in Charge at Y. M. C. A.

At the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 South La Salle street, noon services will be conducted under Lutheran auspices. Dr. Preston Bradley will preach each noon at the Erlanger theater, where he announces that Civic noon day Holy week services will be held.

The Chicago Church federation, representing 850 churches of 18 denominations, will continue its Lenten services through Holy week at the Chicago temple. The preachers this week are to be Dr. John Thompson, who will preach tomorrow on the subject, "Blood Brothers We"; Tuesday, Dr. Herbert L. Willett, "Jesus and the Waiting World"; Wednesday, Dr. D. W. Kurtz, "The True Hero of Passion Week," and Thursday, Dean Charles W. Gilkey, "God's Way and Ours."

On Good Friday the church federation will sponsor a three hour service, with seven pastors of the city delivering the meditations.

5 PICKPOCKETS FINED; ORDERED TO LEAVE CITY

Five pickpockets were fined yesterday by Judge Joseph McGarry in the South State street court, and warned to leave the city.

They were Frank Fazio, Joseph Battaglia, George Overholt, Edward Galvin and Elmer Arbuthnot. Frazio and Battaglia were fined $200 and costs each, and Overholt, Galvin and Arbuthnot, $100 and costs each. The latter three had been given similar fines only three days ago.

The men were arrested by Lieut. Edward Kelly and his pickpocket detail as the beginning of a drive to purge the city of pickpockets before the opening of the World's Fair.

Ice Clearing in Straits as Tribune Ship Nears

Ice was moving out of the straits of Mackinac yesterday with the prospect that navigation from Lake Huron into Lake Michigan would be opened today or tomorrow. The steamer New York News, with 1,319 tons of newsprint for THE TRIBUNE, sailed from Port Colborne on Lake Erie late yesterday afternoon and is expected to be the first ship of the season through the straits. The sailing was scheduled for yesterday morning, but an ice floe at Port Colborne caused a delay. The ship is expected to arrive in Chicago on Tuesday.

PARKER SCHOOL SENDS GIFT TO THE HUNGER FUND

On the north, in Webster avenue just west of Lincoln park, the Francis W. Parker school, a private institution, has found time now and then to hold benefits for the needy in the city's public schools. Yesterday an additional gift of $85.69 was received by the Hungry School Children's fund. The sum was raised by giving pioneer lunches and holding charity basketball games. This money will be sufficient to provide 1,720 children with a free lunch each. Miss Flora J. Cook, the principal, has stimulated the interest of the Parker pupils in the charity.

Contributions yesterday remained near the $100 mark, and brought the grand total to $23,299.19. They are acknowledged as follows:

Mrs. Jos. E. Otis, W. C. M.	5.00
Anonymous. Phyllis, J. P. M.	1.00
Total	$ 98.69
Previously acknowledged	23,200.50
Grand total	$23,299.19

LABOR'S PLIGHT HELD WORST PART OF DEPRESSION

No problem confronting this country today is more tragic or of greater import than the lowering of standards of labor brought about by idleness, the forum of the Illinois League of Women Voters was informed yesterday at its final meeting of the season at the Palmer house.

Miss Mary Barnett Gilson, instructor in economics at the University of Chicago, who has had years of experience in the industrial field both here and abroad, was the speaker.

Individual employers who are sympathetic and would like to inaugurate wiser methods of leveling hours of work and raising standards of labor, Miss Gilson said, are often intimidated by their own associations, which fear it will throw too much power into the hands of organized labor.

SEIZED AS ALCOHOL SELLERS.

Peoria, Ill., April 8.—[Special.]—While the rest of the country was watching "new beer year" celebrations federal prohibition agents were on the lookout for alky peddlers and as a result two suspects were arrested here. They are William T. Melbourne and Louis C. Brower. Sixty gallons of alcohol were found in Brower's home on Frye avenue.

PASSION PLAY AT BLOOMINGTON OPENS TODAY

Bloomington, Ill., April 8.—[Special.]—The first performance of the American Passion play will be given here tomorrow in the consistory temple. This play, hailed by critics as "the world's greatest portrayal of the life and works of Jesus of Nazareth," begins its eleventh season tomorrow.

Two hundred and fifty actors will perform in fifty-six scenes. More than $100,000 worth of scenery, costuming, and lighting effects will be used in the presentation.

Frederick Hitch, dry goods merchant, and Clara Koogle, society woman, will play the leading rôles. Both have taken part in 250 rehearsals and 100 performances since the play began without the use of a double or substitute.

The play has been dramatized and produced by Delmar Darrah, Illinois deputy of the Scottish Rite Masons, and member of the Illinois state board of pardons and paroles, recently appointed by Gov. Horner.

Lighting effects will make the scenes of Christ walking on the water and the ascension into heaven as realistic to spectators as the scenes were to the followers of Christ ages ago.

Other performances after tomorrow will be given April 16, 22, 23, 29, 30, and May 6 and 7.

LETTER PENNED BY FRANKLIN IN 1784 IS FOUND

New York, April 8.—(AP)—A letter written by Benjamin Franklin, lost since 1784, has been found in the vaults of Columbia university.

Penned while Franklin was in France seeking a loan for the United States, the letter counseled against any declarations of poverty in the states, saying such would endanger chances for credit abroad.

The letter was written to Col. Matthew Clarkson, who was seeking funds from foreign countries for the University of the State of New York, later Columbia university.

The letters were found in a musty chest in a search for some of the old university's financial records. The chest was found deep in the vaults of the university's library.

WOULD PUNISH ANY THREAT TO EUROPE'S PEACE

New York, April 8.—(AP)—H. B. Lees-Smith, member of the king's privy council and former postmaster general and minister of education in the cabinet of Ramsay MacDonald, asserted today that "Germany would be smashed like the hammer smashes the shell of an egg," if that country's chancellor did anything to force an immediate threat of war.

Lees-Smith arrived in New York today from Columbus, O., where he addressed the Ohio State Educational conference. He plans to remain in America another week.

Despite his assertion pertaining to the danger to Germany that would lurk behind a war threat, he did not think that the Nazi régime would make any false moves in foreign policy.

"Hitler is closely controlled in foreign policy by the Nationalist party," he said. "Baron von Neuraeth, the foreign minister, is known to us as a careful and cautious man. Hitler's difficulty is his own left wing."

YES, Calumet's the secret of many a success—whether it's a single cake baked at home or scores of them selling fast in a tea-room.

Everything baked with Calumet—cakes, muffins, waffles—all turn out so beautifully . . . That's because this fine modern baking powder is Double-Acting. The first action is in the mixing bowl, the second is released in the heat of the oven. This second action takes care of your batter or dough all through the baking, raising it gently, slowly—making it light, tender, smooth-crusted.

Such a good baking powder might well be high-priced. But it isn't! Its price is moderate. And you use less, because of Calumet's thrifty standard proportion—only one level teaspoon to a cup of sifted flour in most recipes.

Perfect results—reasonable price—and a can lasts longer!—Three reasons why Calumet is winning more and more women all over the country every day.

WINNETKA VOTES TO UPHOLD HEAD OF ITS SCHOOLS

Townships Over County Hold Elections.

Winnetka residents voted yesterday, 2,670 to 967, their approval of the educational methods of Carlton W. Washburne, the town's superintendent of schools.

A faction in the village which advocated a return to the methods of olden days and smaller budgets saw its candidates for president of the board of education and trustees swamped by the Washburne adherents. Clarence B. Randall was reëlected to head the Winnetka board. Robert B. Brown, Mrs. Hildegard W. Warfield, and Mrs. Beatrice C. Rothschild were elected trustees.

Superintendent Washburne's work has attracted national attention. He has advocated and fought for more individualistic treatment of school children.

Elections in Many Districts.

Elections of school board members were held in seventeen high school districts, 194 elementary districts, and a number of the thirty townships of the county. No elections were held within the city limits of Chicago. In many of the districts in the county trustee tickets were unopposed and there was slight interest manifested.

In other places there were hard fights. One of the hardest was in the J. Sterling Morton High school district, which includes Cicero, Berwyn, and Stickney. There has been vigorous opposition on the part of taxpayers to the present board's dismissal of Harry V. Church, superintendent, a few months ago, and also to financial management.

Two trustees backed by the Parent-Teachers' association and pledged to "clean up the board" were elected. They are Edmund S. Placzek and Richard W. Hoffman. Henry Langner, the only member of the present board who sought reëlection, was decisively defeated.

Proviso Veteran Beaten.

Leslie D. Allen and George Bosco won a bitter contest for membership on the Proviso township high school board. One of those displaced was William F. Boeger, who has been a trustee for twenty-one years. The vote was: Allen, 5,814; Bosco, 6,024; Boeger, 5,532. The new trustees are pledged to an economy program.

In Glenview, the regular ticket of John L. Wolf, president, and Mrs. Rodney Baird and Christian Harbach, trustees, was elected. Opposition candidates had criticized the present board for dismissing Mrs. Lillian Hoffman, school principal, and had promised to reinstate her if elected.

Boston, Mass., April 8.—[Special.]—The first man arrested after drinking 3.2 beer and charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, Archduke Leopold of Austria, now a resident of Marblehead, will appear in court next Friday and the verdict may set a precedent for the nation.

Prosecuting authorities and Morgan T. Ryan, registrar of motor vehicles, seemed to be willing to make a test case of the matter.

Archduke Leopold was arrested after a thrilling three mile chase. He produced credentials to prove his identity when stopped and said he was returning from a society function where he had been drinking 3.2 beer and nothing else. Police maintained that his machine was zigzagging, despite the fact its operator insisted his sole liquid refreshment of the evening has been classed as legally nonintoxicating.

The archduke is a brother-in-law of Princess Ileana of Rumania and two years ago in New York was found not guilty of aiding an alleged unauthorized sale of a $400,000 necklace given Marie Theresa of Austria by Napoleon.

ROOSEVELT PAYS FLEETING VISIT TO MT. VERNON

Washington, D. C., April 8.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt today paid a fleeting visit to Mount Vernon, the home and burial place of George Washington. He was accompanied by Mrs. Grenville Emmet of New York, a guest at the White House and wife of the President's former law partner.

The President did not leave his automobile, but sat chatting with Arthur Dodge, in charge at the shrine, while Mrs. Emmet inspected the grounds. Tomorrow Mr. Roosevelt, with members of his family, will motor to Rapidan, to the mountain camp used by former President Hoover. Mr. Hoover deeded the camp to the state of Virginia with a request that it be placed at the disposal of future Presidents.

President Roosevelt does not expect to make use of the camp at this time, and he may suggest to the Virginia authorities that it be maintained as a national park during the next four years. There was some thought that Mrs. Roosevelt, a great lover of the outdoors, may prevail upon the President to visit the camp occasionally, but this was simply conjecture.

CONGRESS PLANS A FULL INQUIRY ON BLIMP MAKING

Whole U. S. Airship Policy to Be Discussed.

Washington, D. C., April 8.—(AP)—America's $20,000,000 experiment with airships is to be studied next week by a joint congressional committee. That group will include members of both house and senate. Their verdict is likely to decide whether the United States builds any more dirigibles like the Akron.

President Roosevelt will attend memorial services for the Akron dead at Arlington National cemetery on May 30. Tomorrow, however, there will be memorial services in the Washington cathedral attended by members of the house naval committee. The belief at the White House was that as many bodies as could be found should be recovered before the official services.

Agree to Widen Inquiry.

The agreement on capitol hill, said Representative Bankhead of Alabama, one of the Democratic leaders, is to set up a special committee including five members from the senate and a like number from the house to study not only the Akron's fatal trip but "to consider everything pertinent to airships."

Accepting this compromise were Chairman Vinson [Dem., Ga.] of the house naval committee; Senator King [Dem., Utah], who had proposed a separate senate investigation, and Representative McClintic [Dem., Okla.], who wanted a special house committee to make the study.

Mr. Vinson, whose committee began its investigation yesterday with testimony from the three Akron survivors, said:

"After a conference with Senator King this morning, I thought it would be wise to have only one congressional investigation, and took it up with Speaker Rainey and the rules committee. They agreed, and a rule will be brought in Monday for the appointment of a joint committee of five from each house."

Ready to Stop Quiz.

Mr. Vinson added that his committee inquiry would stop as soon as the joint investigation is ordered. Mr. Vinson and Mr. McClintic had been engaging in a duel of words of whether the naval committee's decision would be a "whitewash." Vinson said "no," emphatically. Mr. McClintic said "yes," just as emphatically. But when asked about the joint investigation, Mr. McClintic said he "always" had been for it, and that "it's settled."

Mr. McClintic added that the joint investigation plan was endorsed by Democratic Leader Byrns and Chairman Crosser of the house Democratic steering committee as well as the other leaders.

Senator King told newspapermen he had been working for a joint investigation and that if the house adopted a resolution for it on Monday, as Bankhead and Vinson plan, he would present it to the senate immediately.

Recalls Shenandoah Loss.

The last previous airship accident of consequence—the destruction of the Shenandoah in 1925—was followed only by a study by a naval board of inquiry.

Some members of congress, who are likely to be on the joint investigating committee, predicted privately to newspapermen that the finding after the new study will be that airships are not practical and the United States consequently will do as Great Britain did after the fall of the R-101—abandon airship construction and operation.

Find Another Body from Akron.

New York, April 8.—[Special.]—The body of another of the 73 men who lost their lives when the giant U. S. dirigible Akron crashed into the sea of the Jersey coast was recovered near the scene of the disaster today.

It was identified as that of Col. A. F. Masury, U. S. A. ordnance reserve who was making the fatal flight as an officer guest of Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, head of the navy air service.

This makes three bodies so far recovered, the others being those of Lieutenant Commander Harold E. MacLellan, third senior officer aboard the Akron, whose body was found by one of the searching ships last Tuesday, and Robert W. Copeland, radio man of the craft, who died after being rescued by an oil tanker an hour after the crash.

SALES TAX MEASURE PASSES IN NEW YORK AND GOES TO LEHMAN

Albany, N. Y., April 8.—(AP)—The New York legislature today passed and sent to Gov. Lehman for his signature a bill providing for a 1 per cent retail sales tax on all commodities except food.

The bill, one of Gov. Lehman's program tax measures, was passed in the Republican controlled assembly after narrowly escaping defeat. On the first count the bill did not have the constitutional majority, but several members changed their vote, making the final count 78 to 71. Six Democrats voted against the bill.

The new tax is counted on for $28,000,000 in revenue to help wipe out the 100 million dollar deficit hanging over from last year. It is only one of the four measures in Gov. Lehman's approved new tax program. The other proposals are a dollar a barrel tax on beer, 1 per cent gross income tax, and an increased personal income tax.

The assembly voted today to continue the emergency increase in the personal income tax voted last year, raising the tax from 1 per cent to 2 per cent.

REVOLT SUCCESS; NOBODY INJURED, NO ONE ARRESTED

ANDORRA, April 8.—(AP)—This tiny republic of Andorra, between France and Spain, underwent a revolution in which no one was hurt or arrested today. Several hundred young men stormed the parliament building with demands that in future elections the cabinet of 24 members, which rules the country, be elected "by universal vote" rather than by "a restricted vote."

The cabinet refused at first to hear the petition. Thereupon the youthful rebels attacked the building and forced the cabinet to agree to recognize their demands. All citizens of Andorra, the cabinet promised, who are at least 21 years old, will be entitled to vote, whereas previously only heads of families enjoyed the franchise.

[Andorra is on the south slope of the Pyrenees. Much of its 175 square miles is snow covered six months of the year. Most of the 7,000 inhabitants are shepherds. Under the nominal sovereignty of France, Andorra is governed by the council and the bishop of Urgel.]

MRS. HAMBLETON DIES FROM RARE BLOOD AILMENT

Mrs. Eleanor Fargo Hambleton of the Ambassador East hotel died late Friday night in the Michael Reese hospital, the victim of a rare ailment, it was learned yesterday. She was the mother of Margaret [Peggy] Hambleton, a leader in Junior league theatricals.

Mrs. Hambleton was stricken about March 22 with what is medically known as agranulocytic angina, a disease marked by the disappearance of white corpuscles from the blood. Numerous blood transfusions were made to build up the disappearing corpuscles. From the outset, however, physicians held little hope for Mrs. Hambleton's recovery.

At her bedside during her illness were Mrs. Hambleton's daughters, Miss Margaret Hambleton, Mrs. Francis S. Rickords of 1530 North State parkway, and Mrs. Berrien Eaton of Detroit. Funeral services will be private. Mrs. Hambleton was the widow of Earl Lander Hambleton.

CHARLES CLARK, COPPER COMPANY OFFICIAL, IS DEAD

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Charles W. Clark, 61, president of the United Verde Copper company, died in Mount Sinai hospital today. He had been suffering for a week from a complication of ailments, including pneumonia.

A son of the late United States Senator William Andrews Clark of Montana, Clark was born at Deer Lodge, Mont., and passed most of his youth in the west. He was widely known in Arizona and California, where he maintained an estate at San Mateo.

After his graduation from Yale in 1893 Clark became identified with his father's mining interests and was stationed for a time at the United Verde properties in Jerome, Ariz. He was made general manager in 1922 and president in 1931.

His father's estate, valued in 1926 at $48,000,000, was divided among the senator's widow, Mrs. Anna E. Clark, and five children, of whom Charles Clark was the oldest.

Clark was one of the prominent Republicans who supported Alfred E. Smith for President in 1928. Later it was made known Clark had contributed $50,000 to the Democratic campaign fund.

Clark was thrice married.

PETER BARTZEN FUNERAL TO BE HELD TOMORROW

The body was brought to Chicago yesterday to the home of a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Zonsius, 4732 North Artesian avenue. Friends and relatives gathered there to pay their last respects to the man who was known as "Battling Peter" during turbulent years in Chicago politics.

Mr. Bartzen was born in Germany, coming to Chicago when he was 10 years old. He was a mason contractor until 15 years before his death, when he retired. Entering politics as a Democrat he was appointed building commissioner by Mayor Edward F. Dunne in 1906. In 1910 he was elected president of the county board and later served a term as a county commissioner. His name "Battling Peter" was given him by both friends and foes who recalled that he was always in some kind of political fight.

Akron, O., April 8.—(AP)—The newly completed U. S. S. Macon, sister ship of the Akron, today was freed from her moorings and was "walked" 200 feet across the floor of the dock in which she was built.

The maneuver was staged to give her ground crew a rehearsal in preparation for the huge craft's maiden flight scheduled for Thursday. Capt. Alger H. Dresel, her commander, watched the proceedings carefully. Referring to the Macon's initial flight, Capt. Dresel said "our orders in connection with all flights are not to give out specific information as to how long we will be aloft or where we will go," but he intimated the ship may be in the air about 12 hours next Thursday, leaving the dock about sunrise if weather permits.

20,000 FAMILIES TO RECEIVE FREE GARDEN PLOTS

Warner G. Baird in Charge of Relief Project.

BY PAUL POTTER.

At least 20,000 needy families in Cook county are to be provided gardens on which they can produce their own vegetables this summer, as a result of arrangements by county and community relief agencies this week.

Warner G. Baird, Chicago realtor, has been named chairman of a garden committee in charge of this form of relief by the county bureau of public welfare and the state emergency relief commission. Already 600 acres of forest preserve land has been plowed and within two weeks the allocation of garden plots and distribution of seeds will begin, Baird announced yesterday.

Plans Are Expanded.

The methods to be used this year have been greatly expanded over those of last season, he pointed out. Such agencies as churches, Rotary, Kiwanis, and Lions clubs, local garden clubs and other civic community groups are to help provide garden areas and equipment, as well as determine what families will be allowed aid.

"We now have a group of idle men sorting seeds and assembling small garden packets for the first 5,000 families on public relief," Baird reported. "We are prepared to supply supervisors for the various localities seed where needed, and to coördinate local activities. Since our funds may be used only for those families approved for public aid, however, the independent agencies are to help families not now on public relief but worthy of such relief."

Headquarters for the new relief garden committee have been set up at 188 West Randolph street. Plans have been made for garden areas in Evanston, Maywood and other suburban communities.

Seek Family Plots.

An attempt is being made to secure areas sufficient for large groups of families together, to economize on transportation, plowing and supervision during the crop season and harvest, and to have such plots scattered over the entire metropolitan area.

It is expected that the average family will produce fresh foods worth $40 at retail from about a dollar's worth of seed. Supervisors for various units are secured from the ranks of successful gardeners in last year's relief garden work.

Three types of gardens are recommended by the Baird committee: Back yard gardens at homes of the idle; assigned back yards or open lots donated by their owners, and assigned plots in the centralized field areas.

MEDICAL CARE

is now available in all fields of Medicine at LOW COST

For the first time people of limited incomes can obtain complete Medical and Dental Care within their ability to pay

With the opening of UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE in its beautifully appointed and scientifically equipped quarters, occupying four floors in the Finchley Building, Chicago becomes the first city to offer a constructive solution to the problem of the high cost of medical care. Organized by more than three hundred Chicago physicians, surgeons and dentists, UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE is an organization of physicians, operated by physicians in an honest, straightforward effort to reduce the existing high costs of medical care and make it available to persons of limited incomes, directly, or through their own family physicians.

Special Heart Service

Heart trouble causes more deaths than cancer or tuberculosis. Early diagnosis by trained physicians offers the greatest protection. Our special heart service includes a physical, general medical and clinical examination of the heart by trained physicians, blood pressure, urinalysis, complete blood examination and serological tests, electrocardiogram, a six foot distance full size X-ray film of the chest and fluoroscopic examination when indicated. This complete service for $5.00

Repeated visits $1.00

Special Gastro-Intestinal Service

Here is an important diagnostic service that high cost has denied to many persons who might have avoided serious sickness through its timely use. A special gastro-intestinal service is now available which includes a special clinical examination of the gastro-intestinal tract by trained physicians, blood pressure, urinalysis, a complete blood examination, serological tests $3.00

In addition, if necessary, there is a laboratory examination of the gastric contents and of the stool for blood and bacteria, for an additional laboratory fee of $2.50

A fluoroscopic examination following a barium meal, repeated at intervals necessary to watch it pass through the gastro-intestinal tract, including a full size X-ray film of the abdomen for $4.00

There is a charge of $1.50 for every additional 14 x 17" film, and $1.00 for every 8 x 10" film. Special X-ray examination of the gall bladder $3.00

Special Rectal Service

Five thousand persons die every year from cancer of the rectum. In many cases early diagnosis and treatment could have prevented such serious results. No rectal ailment should be treated without a complete clinical examination by a trained physician, including the use of the anoscope and the proctoscope, urinalysis, complete blood examination and serological tests, and microscopic examination of the stool for blood, amoebae and bacteria. This complete service affords the greatest protection and costs $5.00

PROMINENT medical authorities and others interested in public health agree that no problem facing the public today is of more vital importance, for adequate medical care is one of life's necessities and, when needed, is equally valuable to persons in all stations of life.

High Cost a Vital Problem

"The Committee on the Cost of Medical Care" after five years of investigation and study costing almost a million dollars, reached the conclusion that persons of limited incomes were finding it increasingly difficult and in many cases impossible to obtain the medical care they need because the costs were beyond their capacity to pay. Because of this failure to utilize more generally the great wealth of scientific information which medical science has produced the past fifty years, disease and disability continue to take an alarming toll of health and happiness. Each year there is a vast amount of unnecessary sickness and many thousands of unnecessary deaths. The death rates for cancer, heart trouble, diabetes and other diseases are rising and many persons, young and old, are more or less incapacitated by physical defects which proper and timely medical care could prevent or correct.

UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE has been organized to relieve these conditions by making available at controlled low costs medical knowledge, technique and equipment which have been denied to persons of limited incomes because of their high cost.

Not an Experiment

UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE is not a new experiment, for its basic principles of operation are patterned after a successful plan conceived and put into operation by Dr. Joseph G. Berkowitz, which, during twelve years under his able management, provided adequate medical care to thousands of persons who could not afford to pay the costs of similar services elsewhere. Over 200,000 persons were examined and as many as 2,000 treatments were given in a single day.

The success of this effort by Dr. Berkowitz attracted nationwide attention, but it remained for this group of several hundred Chicago physicians, surgeons and dentists under his leadership, to organize UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE in order to adopt and apply successfully these principles to all fields of medical service at controlled low costs.

Not a Charity nor a Philanthropy

UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE is not, nor is it associated with, or supported by any charity, philanthropic, educational or tax-supported organization. UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE is incorporated for profit as are many other successful medical institutions in order to exercise the same control over costs and avoid unwise, wasteful and undirected expenditures as business institutions do, thus providing for a more rapid extension of facilities with increased improvement and availability of service at progressively lower costs.

Departments of Medical Service

At UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE, through its large group of associated physicians, surgeons and dentists and completely equipped diagnostic laboratories and treatment rooms, competent and adequate medical care is provided for the first time at controlled low costs in all the general and specialized fields of medicine, some of which are:

Cardiovascular · Respiratory · Gastro-Intestinal · Neurological · Metabolic · Proctological · Urological · Gynecological · Eye-Ear-Nose-Throat · Dental · Special services are available through the General Medical · X-ray and Dental laboratories, Optical, Drug and Medical Appliance Departments

All departments are in charge of competent physicians, recognized by diplomas of graduation from prominent medical schools, interneship in Class A hospitals, licensure by the State and by appointments to the staffs of the foremost hospitals and teaching institutions. All have had years of training and experience in their respective fields of medicine. In addition to the present staff of physicians, surgeons and dentists, a larger group of associate members is available to serve in an advisory and consulting capacity, thus adequately providing for complete general health and diagnostic examination and treatment in all departments of medicine with resulting protection to the public.

Organized to Serve the Public and the Medical Profession

UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE is not competing with existing charitable, philanthropic, educational and tax-supported institutions, or physicians in private practice. It has been organized to serve that large majority of the public which is going untreated because of the high cost of existing medical facilities. Complete medical care is available to all persons, directly, or through their own family physicians. Particular attention has been given to the comfort, convenience and privacy of patients throughout all examinations and treatments regardless of the nature of the ailment to be treated.

Special Dental Service

Good teeth have much to do with your physical and mental well being. Whether they be vigilant guardians of your health or become active agents of disease and worry depends upon the kind of care you give them. Frequent examinations offer the greatest protection. A Special Dental Service includes full mouth X-ray of the teeth consisting of 14 films, urinalysis, complete blood examination and serological tests, and an examination by the dentist for $1.50. Cleaning teeth is $1.50

Special Eye Service

Defective vision is frequently caused by diseases in other parts of the body. Sometimes it is due to changes in the eye itself which may eventually result in blindness. A refraction alone is not sufficiently protective. To be thorough and complete, eye examinations should be made by a physician trained and experienced in diseases of the eye. This special eye service includes a medical examination of the eye by a physician, refraction, urinalysis, complete blood and serological tests for $3.00

A special optical service is available also, where glasses, when indicated, can be furnished, depending upon the type of lenses needed and frame selected, for as low as $2.50

Special Ear, Nose, Throat Service

Infections of the ear, nose and throat are a frequent cause of serious local and general disabilities. Head colds are responsible for a greater loss of time and money to people who work than any other sickness. Unless treated by a trained physician colds can become chronic sinus infections and may develop middle ear disease, eventually causing deafness. An examination of the throat and larynx, the nose and connecting sinuses, the ear and tests for hearing by a trained physician, including urinalysis and complete blood and serological tests will cost $3.00

Cost of MEDICAL SERVICES

These cost-controlled services are available to the public, directly, or through their family physicians. The charges are published to indicate their accessibility to all.

Special* HAY FEVER *Service. Hay Fever, Asthma and certain skin conditions belong to a group of ailments classed as allergic disorders. All are due to a disturbing reaction many persons show to pollen, food, dust and other foreign substances. Investigation shows that there are over two million Hay Fever sufferers in this country and at least a half million persons afflicted with bronchial Asthma. We have created a special department to study the cause and treat these and such other ailments as come under this classification. In cases where the cause of this allergic disturbance is discovered by means of appropriate skin tests, it can be effectively treated. Following these tests, from 80 to 90% of Hay Fever sufferers can be relieved. Treatment, however, should begin from 8 to 10 weeks before symptoms appear. The cost for this service is proportionately low.

Special* UROLOGICAL or GYNECOLOGICAL *Service. A Special Urological examination for men or a special Gynecological examination for women—includes a regional and clinical examination by trained physicians, microscopic examination of all secretions, urinalysis, complete blood and serological tests, diagnosing all ailments of an infectious or non-infectious character for $3.00

Six consecutive visits $4.00

Special* GENERAL HEALTH *Service. The most economical and reliable service medicine can render is prevention of disease through periodic health examinations. Preventive medicine can add years of health to the life of everyone. Such killing diseases as cancer, heart trouble, tuberculosis, kidney disorders, syphilis and others can be prevented or controlled by early examinations, diagnosis and treatment. Unlimited general health or diagnostic service is available now at low cost. Necessary examinations and tests for a complete health audit $20.00

Special* LUNG *Service. Serious conditions in the lungs and chest can be largely prevented from developing, especially tuberculosis, by early clinical attention of trained physicians, aided by X-ray and fluoroscopic studies. The complete service includes a physical and general medical examination, special clinical examination of the lungs, blood pressure, urinalysis, microscopic examination of sputum, a complete blood examination, serological tests, electrocardiogram, fluoroscopic examination when indicated, two 6-foot distance full size X-ray films of chest, for stereoscopic study. SIMMONS HITS HOME RUN: SOX BEAT CUBS, 1-0

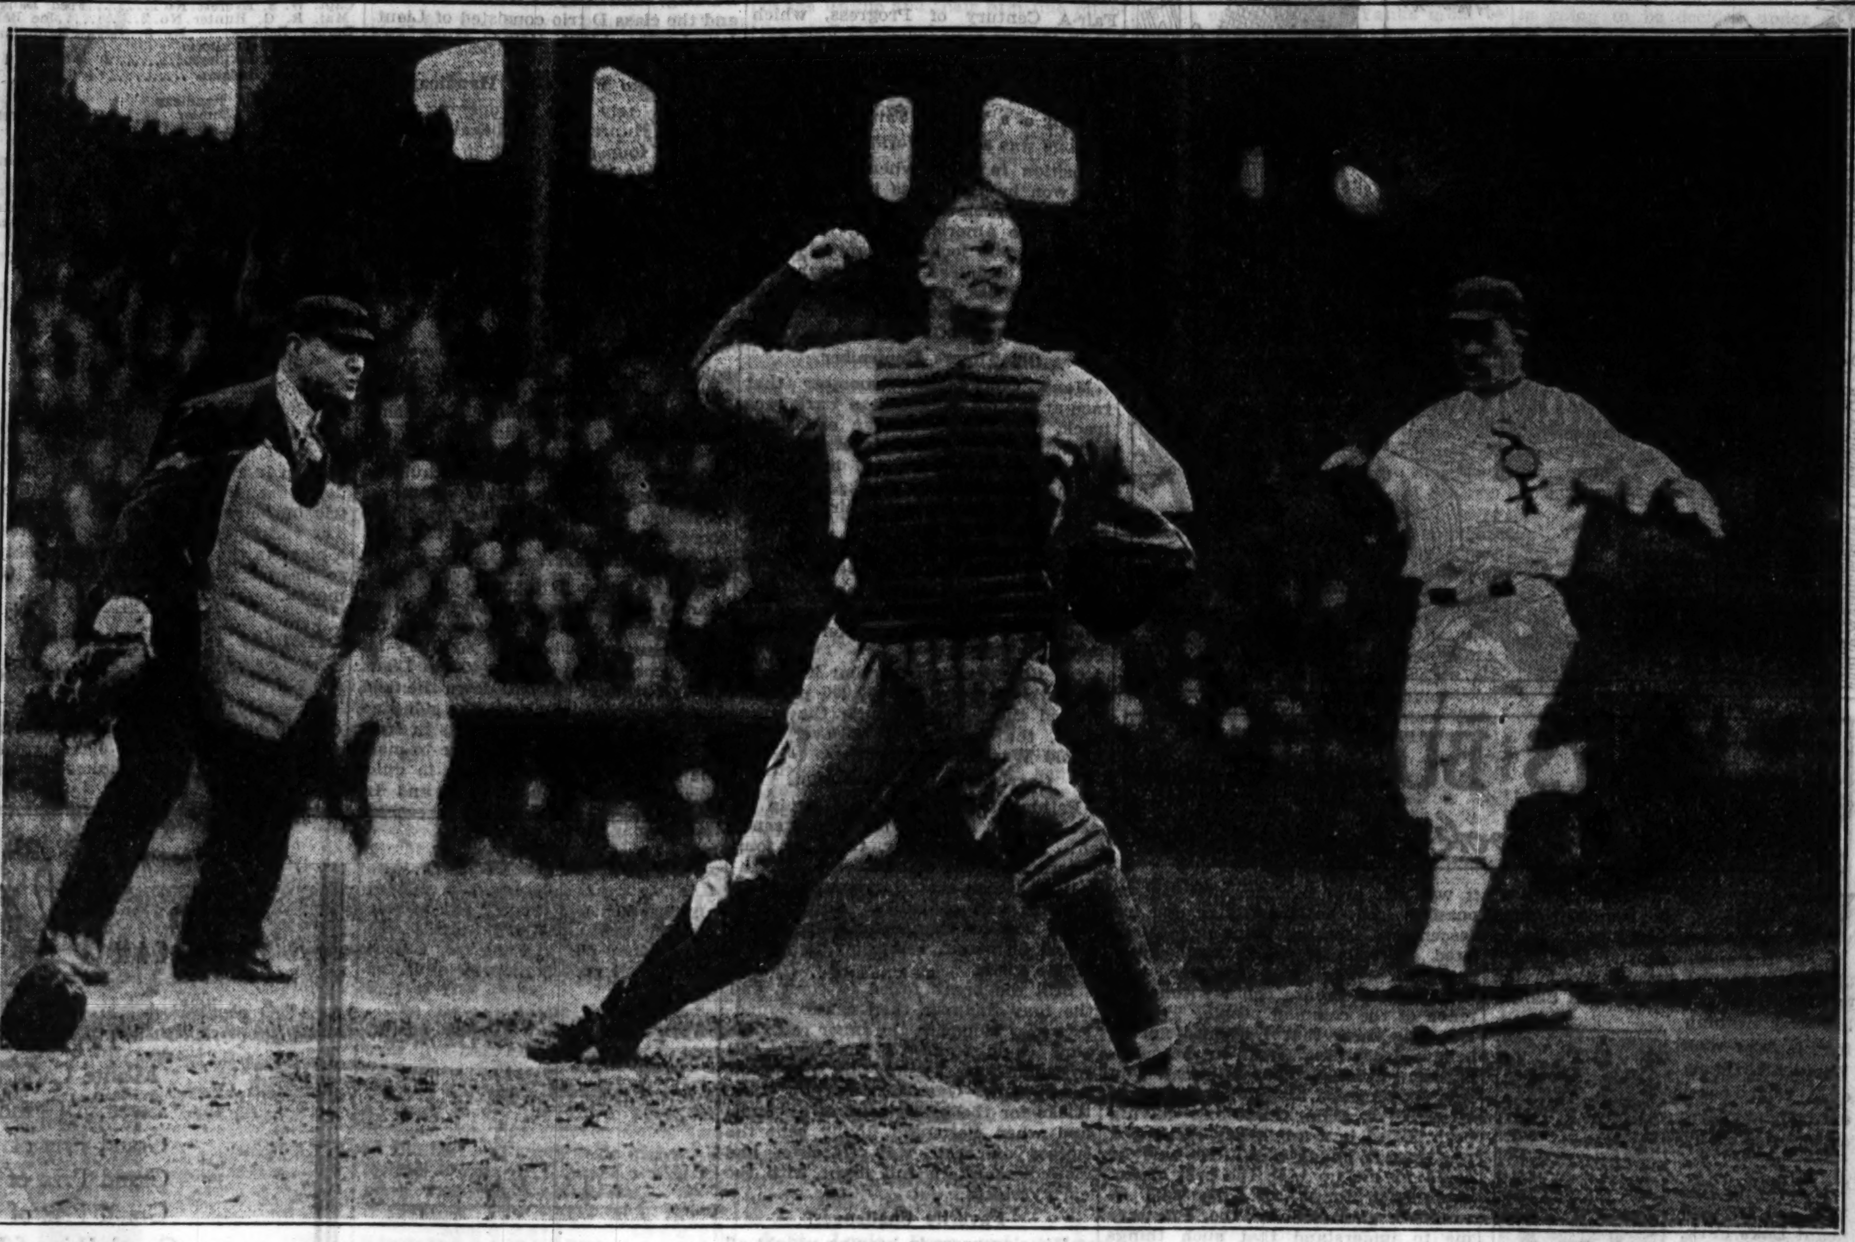
WHEN WEATHER WAS COLD, BUT SOX WERE HOT



Right in the middle of a double play. The White Sox filled in the bases in the sixth inning of yesterday's game with the Cubs at Comiskey park and then Jimmy Dykes grounded to English. Here is Al Simmons being forced at the plate and Catcher Gabby Hartnett all ready to throw to first to get Dykes, completing the double play and ending the inning. The White Sox won, 1 to 0, on Simmons' homer in the fourth. The umpire is Brick Owens.

RANGERS BEAT TORONTO, 3 TO 1, IN CUP GAME

Lead Leafs, 2 to 0, in Series.

TORONTO, Ont., April 8.—(AP)—The New York Rangers unleashed a driving attack to defeat the Toronto Maple Leafs, 3 to 1, tonight and go two up in the final five-game series for the Stanley cup, emblematic of professional hockey supremacy.

The New Yorkers, who lost in three straight games to the Leafs in last year's finals, came from behind tonight after the Leafs had scored in the second minute of play.

Ken Doraty scored for Toronto a minute and ten seconds after the start. But before the period was over the Rangers led 2 to 1.

Hellar Scores First.

Ott Heller, the Kitchener, Ont., youngster who plays either defense or wing for the Rangers, batted in Art Somers' rebound to tie the score. Bill Cook broke away to get goal No. 2 unassisted. As the Leafs ganged the Ranger net, he slipped away and skated right up to Goalie Lorne Chabot before lifting a backhander into the net.

The Leafs forced a terrific pace throughout the last two periods, but were held scoreless as Ching Johnson and Earl Seibert gave Goalie Aitkenhead excellent protection. Seibert made the triumph certain, scoring on a solo rush late in the third period.

Keeling's Goal Barred.

The Leafs stormed the Ranger net in the second period but the Rangers, waiting for openings, ripped through for the best scoring chances. Keeling snapped up a pass from Osmundson at mid-session and backhanded a shot that apparently landed in the upper corner of the Toronto net, but the goal umpire decided the puck had not gone in and no amount of Ranger argument could make him change his mind.

The furious back checking of the Rangers held off Toronto's assaults through the third period and the New Yorkers added another goal by the break away route to put the game on ice.

Rangers Need One.

Tonight's triumph made the Rangers heavy favorites to win the trophy and the title of world's professional hockey champions. They have a chance to win the necessary third decision here Tuesday night.

A crowd of 13,500, almost entirely pro-Toronto, saw the game. A handful of spectators sat together in one section of the arena cheering the Rangers, however. They came from Kitchener, Ont., to see Ott Heller and Earl Seibert, two Kitchener boys, play. In addition to scoring a goal, Seibert easily was the star of the New York defense, repeatedly stopping the desperate Toronto offense.

CARNERA PLANS BATTLE IN ROME WITH SCHMELING

ROME, April 8.—(AP)—Primo Carnera, who was declared heavyweight boxing champion of Italy last night by the Italian Boxing federation, today announced he was planning to promote a bout in Rome between himself and Max Schmeling, former world champion, in 1934.

Twins, 2, Put on Squeeze Play; It Ends Ball Game

Omaha, Neb., April 8.—(AP)—The baseball season was opened today with a "squeeze play" that brought out a blockful of fans and the fire department.

Pat and Mike Haller, 2 year old twins, decided to do a little battery work. Mike missed one of Pat's fire balls.

The Haller family and neighbors failed to free Mike. Some one called the fire department. As the chief's car raced around the corner, a neighbor tore away the steps, freeing Mike with only a scratch on his cheek.

PHILLIES BLANK ATHLETICS, 3-0; SHARE CITY TITLE

Philadelphia, Pa., April 8.—(AP)—The Phillies brought out the whitewash brush today and handed the Athletics a 3 to 0 setback to even the count at two all in the series for the city baseball title.

As a result both teams will share the throne of city champion this season, since the contest was the last scheduled in the series. The Phils in the seventh hit the As' pitchers for two runs and put another across in the eighth.

Consecutive doubles by Spud Davis and Chick Fullis brought home the first run in the seventh, the former crossing the plate. Fullis streaked home on Chuck Klein's hit to deep short. An error by Catcher Eddie Madjeski, who threw high to third, resulted in the eighth inning run, Mickey Finn dashing home. Score:

YANKEES, 5; DODGERS, 3.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 8.—(AP)—The New York Yankees spoiled the home debut of the Brooklyn Dodgers today, taking advantage of Glenn Wright's fumble with two out in the ninth to pound across three runs for a 5 to 3 victory before 10,000 fans.

With the Dodgers leading by one run and Chapman on second base, as the result of a double, Wright fumbled Tony Lazzeri's easy grounder. Bill Dickey promptly singled to score Chapman with the tying run and Frankie Crosetti followed with a triple to clean the bases.

Watson Clark and Joe Shaute held the Yankees to six hits, while their teammates were getting the same number off Lefty Gomez and Don Brennan, but two errors by Wright and another by Cuccinello paved the way for all of the Yankees runs.

Abandon Plans for U.S. Open Tennis Meet

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Because a suitable date could not be found, the United States Lawn Tennis association's executive committee today abandoned plans for holding an open tennis tournament this year.

Although the inability of the committee and the Germantown Cricket club of Philadelphia, which was to have staged the tournament, to agree on a suitable date was the paramount reason for abandonment, other factors undoubtedly contributed to the decision.

The Germantown club insisted that the tournament be held in September, but the executive committee, while agreeing that was the best month, pointed out that the national singles and doubles and the Pacific southwest meets all were scheduled for September and, therefore, there was no way to provide a place for the open tournament.

The result was a 15 to 4 vote in favor of abandoning the precedent setting tournament this year.

Authority for an open championship, in which such professional stars as Big Bill Tilden, Vincent Richards, Hans Nusslein and others, would have met leading amateurs, was given by a unanimous vote of delegates to the annual meeting of the U. S. L. T. A. two months ago.

Strong opposition to the plan, however, has developed, especially abroad. The International federation unofficially expressed disapproval at its meeting in Paris in March, and one member of the council of the English Lawn Tennis association has gone on record as stating that any amateur who competed in the open tournament would be barred from playing at Wimbledon.

Ellsworth Vines, national champion, announced recently that he would not participate in the open.

Dempsey Passes Up Shakespeare in College Talk

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey went to college to make a speech today, but he didn't talk about Shakespeare, as Gene Tunney once did at Yale.

"I understand he has been dead for some time," he said, "and I never speak about the dead."

The former heavyweight champion was guest of honor at the faculty club at Columbia university to urge support of the adopt-a-family movement. He indorsed the movement briefly and then offered to answer questions. One was whether he would rather be a boxer or a college professor.

President William Harridge of the American league last night announced umpires for the opening games of the season Wednesday as follows:

New York, April 8.—[U.P.]—Harvard's polo trio defeated the Army, 10½ to 1, to take the national intercollegiate indoor title tonight. The Cambridge team replaces Yale, winner of the 1932 trophy. In a class B semifinal for eastern representation in the national tourney Allenhurst, turned back the Crusaders, 9½ to 1.

Referee Defends Action in Awarding Fall to Savoldi

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

Manogoff, billed as the Terrible Turk during his wrestling days, was the only source of authentic information available in an all-day search for evidence calculated to clear up the surprising finish of the match, which left wrestling fans enmeshed in a maze of rumors alleging collusion.

"Londos' shoulders were pinned to the mat," Manogoff said. "He was down, and I called it as I saw it. As far as I am concerned, Savoldi threw him and is the champion. I made my decision without fear of partisan reprisals, so-called 'combination' interference, or personal gain. The rules say mine is the final word, and I say Savoldi was the better man. That goes."

New Developments Likely.

Manogoff's statement came in the wake of Londos' reiteration that he had not been thrown, Savoldi's challenge to all comers, the state athletic commission's promise to make a thorough investigation tomorrow at its regular meeting, and the National Wrestling association's refusal to recognize Savoldi's claim to the championship.

Among the Greeks Londos apparently had lost standing by being thrown by Savoldi, comparatively a newcomer to big time wrestling. The Greeks are said to have pooled their money to cover the wagers of Savoldi's Italian followers, offering 5 to 1 that Londos would win. No large individual bets were made, but a considerable sum of money changed hands.

One loser, a restaurant man, expressed the general sentiment of his countrymen when he said: "If Londos lose to Stecher, O. K. Stecher is good man, smart wrestler. But Savoldi—TERRIBLE! Londos can throw him twice every hour."

Hint at Double Cross.

Greek leaders in the neighborhood of Halsted street and Milwaukee avenue, where Manogoff had an ice cream cone manufacturing plant ten years ago, were convinced there had been some "double crossing," presumably, they thought, to build up a return match. The "double cross" explanation also was advanced by loop sport followers, who claim Savoldi, who has not been on the best of terms with the Londos-Ed White faction, will now jump to the Billy Sandow group, which includes Strangler Lewis, Jim Browning, and Don George.

Savoldi, in a statement yesterday, expressed a desire to wrestle these men after he had taken a short rest at his Three Oaks., Mich., home. He would give Londos a return match, he said, but not until he had wrestled some of the better men he had not been able to meet up until now, naming especially Lewis, Browning, George and Gus Sonnenberg.

"They advertised this match for the championship," Savoldi said. "I pinned Londos and that makes me champion. I'll meet all comers and I won't ask any $250,000 guarantee, either, like some of those socalled champions."

Londos asked $250,000 to wrestle Lewis in a charity bout for the Illinois Emergency Welfare Relief commission last year.

New Londos Build Up?

Many close followers of wrestling expressed the opinion that Savoldi's victory was a bit of strategy to reestablish Londos' drawing power by interrupting his four year record of consecutive victories. His winning had become too much of a foregone conclusion, they argued, and it was beginning to affect the gates throughout the country.

Londos' claim that Savoldi's feet were tangled in the ropes and that he thought the referee was calling them back to the center of the ring, as provided for in the rules when one competitor touches the ropes, was denied by Savoldi and Manogoff. At the time the fall was declared, Savoldi was standing on both feet, holding Londos between himself and the ropes. It is on this point, however, that White, Londos' manager, will make his protest to the commission tomorrow.

Manogoff, located in his apartment over a grocery store at 2557 West Division street, recalled that charges of dishonesty are not new to him. He said he was criticised for rendering a decision against Lewis in a 30 minute time limit match with Kola

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

One swing of his bat was all that Al Simmons, former Athletic slugger, needed yesterday to win a home among the south side's revived White Sox constituency. Like an old horse which knows what to do when it finds a new field, Simmons took a swing, sent the ball through a chilly, moist, gray atmosphere into the left field seats of Comiskey park, and that was the meat of a 1 to 0 victory achieved by the American leaguers over their enemies, the Cubs, in the first half of a preseason parade of Chicago baseball talent.

Today the athletes will shift over to Wrigley field to settle their differences for the time being, and the burden is all on the Cubs' shoulders. Including the two games at Los Angeles a few weeks ago, the Sox now have a 2 to 1 edge, and another win will give them an unofficial claim to the home town title until they meet again.

Lyons, Gaston Puzzle Cubs.

Details of the deed, or even deeds, of Simmons can be delayed for a moment while mention is made of a few other players who tried to crowd onto the hero bench as 12,000 watched a game that smacked of something having greater importance than a mere exhibition.

There was Ted Lyons, for instance. The prize member of the south side pitching staff stayed in there for five innings despite the cold, and did an excellent job of proving that he fears nobody. The Cubs, handicapped, of course, by the absence of Kiki Cuyler and Babe Herman, hit only two singles off Ted.

There was Milt Gaston, supposedly not a pitcher who attains good form this early in the season, who succeeded Lyons and yielded a similar potion of hits in four innings.

And in the middle of the Cub defense over the full route was Guy Bush, battling with his usual vigor and hoping during the closing half that something would happen to offset the ball Simmons had sent on a long ride.

Both Teams Bear Down.

The idea that the boys were giving a little more than is customary in exhibitions, grew from the apparent fact that they were figuratively breaking their backs to tie up a package satisfactory to their respective supporters. All hands were bearing down in their fielding, and while the Cubs have long been that way in their pennant scraps, it was something new for the Sox adherents to see their hopefuls stepping around with an enthusiastic, confident snap. The fans naturally accepted it as a sign that better days are ahead. The Simmons' homer had the same effect.

The fourth inning rolled around before Simmons properly introduced himself to the 12,000, the bulk of whom appeared to be American leaguers. In Al's first appearance in the opening inning Bush baffled him and he bounced an easy grounder to Billy Herman with Fonseca on base as the result of a single. In the fourth Bush threw one a bit too high for the average hitter, but not for Simmons. The Milwaukeean thrives on 'em, so he smacked it and that was the ball game.

Gets Single, Walks.

Even with his homer out of the reckoning Simmons was an active fellow for one who several weeks ago was pictured as having at least two dozen physical ailments. When he came back for another swing after exploding the homer, he drove a single directly over second. And when he made his final appearance he walked. Bush worked on him carefully, first throwing over a curve for a called strike. He came back with a slow ball so high that Simmons turned away from the plate before it reached him. Then Bush tried three low fast balls in succession, but Simmons refused to swing.

With hits as scarce as cash during the bank holiday the Cubs didn't have many opportunities to explore the base lines. Against Lyons two of them reached base. Demaree singled with two out in the first and stood still while McCarron, subbing for Babe Herman, perpetrated the first of three successive strikeouts. In the second Manager Grimm endeavored to get things going by singling to center with one out. He was doubled up on Hartnett's grounder to Appling.

Gaston Lets Three on Base.

Gaston, in his four inning workout, was just a bit more generous than Lyons. He gave up a pass besides the two hits. The pass went to English to start the seventh, but English was forced at second on Demaree's grounder to Fonseca. Demaree was out stealing and McCarron fanned. Stephenson started the eighth with a single neither Dykes nor Appling could reach. A sacrifice and two fly balls ended that. Then Pinchman Koenig singled to start the ninth. A double play and a fly to Haas concluded the game and gave the Cubs a record of having put five men on first base and only one as far as second.

Until Simmons' homer the Sox' threats were as mild as those of the Cubs, but the American leaguers became tougher as the game progressed. Simmons' single with one out in the sixth was followed by Appling's safe hit to right, putting Simmons on third. Appling stole second and a walk to Kress filled the bases but Dykes bounced into a double play by way of the plate. Then in the eighth, with two out, Simmons' walk and Appling's second hit gave Red Kress a chance for the spotlight, but he fanned.

PAT MALONE AND DURHAM TO PITCH TODAY'S BATTLE

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Today the scene of the Sox-Cubs feud shifts to Wrigley field. Ed Durham, who held the Pittsburgh Pirates to 3 hits last Tuesday, will pitch for the Sox, and Pat Malone will perform for the Cubs. The game will start at 3 o'clock.

Rain started to fall a half hour before game time yesterday and an intermittent drizzle hung on throughout the contest except for a few dashes of sunshine in the eighth and ninth. The crowd of 12,000 was considered excellent in view of the rain and cold.

Babe Herman, who injured his left ankle in one of those Old Aunt Kate slides at Kansas City Friday, was not in uniform. X-ray negatives taken immediately after Babe's arrival yesterday showed no bone injury.

Immediately before the game the local chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America met and elected Irving Vaughan, TRIBUNE veteran sports writer, Chicago's representative. Mr. Vaughan succeeds Harry Neily, resigned, who had headed the Chicago chapter for nine years.

The playing field at Comiskey Park never looked handsomer. More greenery than the players have seen in the so-called land of sunshine.

The Sox new billiard cloth jackets made a big hit with beauty lovers among the spectators. Many bemoaned the return to the all white stockings, however. Maybe a green stripe would be nifty.

The umpires, Brick Owens of the American league and George Magerkurth of the National league, did not get into the new uniform spirit. Both looked a bit baggy and dusty.

President Lou Comiskey set out beer at 15 cents a copy, including sales tax, and it was free to those able to crash the old Woodland Bards' rendezvous.

PACKERS GET PINCKERT; SEND NASH TO BOSTON

Green Bay, Wis., April 8.—(AP)—Ernie Pinckert, former All-American half back of the University of Southern California, has been obtained by the Green Bay Packers from the Boston club in a trade that will send Tom Nash to the east, E. L. Lambeau, coach of the Packers, announced today.

The trade will be called off if the Boston and Packer clubs cannot come to salary terms with Nash and Pinckert, respectively, Lambeau said. Nash has been with the Packers five years, coming here from Georgia.

Charley Grimm to Talk Baseball on W-G-N Tonight

Charley Grimm, manager of the Cubs, will be the guest of Bob Elson, W-G-N baseball announcer, in a special broadcast over THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station at 9 o'clock tonight. Elson, who spent several days with the Cubs during their training days on the Pacific coast this spring, will ply the Cub manager with questions which should provide baseball fans with some interesting information.

This afternoon, starting at 1:45 o'clock Elson will be in the broadcasting booth at Wrigley field to describe the second game of the series between the Cubs and Sox.

Lead Remains Unchanged in Day's Competition.

Columbus, O., April 8.—[Special.]—Chicagoans again failed to place among the American Bowling congress high ten leaders today, though they registered several sparkling totals which will be good for prize money.

Jack Bishop and Matt Luecker topped the matinée card in the doubles division with a total of 1,279. The Chicago pair chalked up games of 447, 430 and 402, Bishop rolling 246, 226 and 225, and Luecker 201, 204 and 177.

Art Gerstein and Lloyd Strouse checked in with 1,220. They started slowly with 342, but finished strong, counting 392 and 486. Eddie Zajac and Rudy Pherson, members of the same team, connected with 1,223.

Arcades Get 2,836.

Samuelson's Arcades led the ten Chicago teams tonight. Most of the lineups were off stride. The Samuelsons totaled 2,836 on games of 936, 980, and 920. S. and L. Motors, former champions, counted only 2,753.

Barney Svedja topped the Chicagoans in the singles class with 614. The five man division will wind up tomorrow night and the tournament will be concluded late Monday afternoon with the windup of the minor event schedule.

This tournament will go down as one of the most spectacular in the history of the national association.

While the entry of 1,597 teams, 2,329 sets of doubles, and 4,687 singles was not so large as in the last five tournaments, the scoring has been sensational.

Two Records Established.

Two new all-time records, Benkovic and Zunker's 1,415 doubles count, and Zunker's 2,060 figure in the all-events, have been established. Al Brandt of Lockport, N. Y., scored the second highest total ever made in A. B. C. competition, 2,024.

Some of the country's greatest bowlers will be in action on the windup card and the leading 3,021 total, registered by the Flaig Opticians of Covington, Ky., is likely to be exceeded.

Chicago Scores Low.

Chicago, with the largest out-of-town entry—80 teams—has failed to produce any really high totals. The Mineralites of the Randolph league are leading the Chicago teams with 2,916. Frank Muza and Johnny Kintgen's 1,308 total is high in the doubles, while Wally Lundgren's 1,909 is best in the all-events. There are no Chicagoans among the singles leaders.

ILLINI POLOISTS ARE DEFEATED BY MISSOURI, 21 TO 1

Columbia, Mo., April 8.—[Special.]—The University of Illinois varsity polo team was defeated by Missouri here today, 21 to 1. The Illinois goal was scored by accident by one of the Missouri players, Coates in the second chukker.

Joe Gregg of Kansas City led the Missouri onslaught accounting for 10 goals. The Illini defeat was not unexpected inasmuch as it was their third outdoor intercollegiate polo contest and the Tigers have a veteran team. The game opened the spring season for the Tigers. John Lehman of Olympia Fields got back into the running with a fine round of 74 for a total of 154. His incoming nine of 35 was beautifully played and he finished with a 2, 3, and 4. Young Phil Talbott of Bloomington, Ind., duplicated his first round of 77 to tie Lehman at 154.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By Westbrook Pegler

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—Among the beautiful gems with which my memory of the sport industry is studded there is a perfect little dandy having to do with the time when Max Schmeling was training for his fight with Willie Stribling at a rundown amusement resort called Conneaut Lake Park, Pa. The weather was very hot at Conneaut Lake Park, and a provincial convention of war veterans had just been concluded and the debris swept away when a parade of hearses began to move into the hotel grounds, where they parked under the trees. They were followed by a train of freight trucks which set down great cargoes of coffins and other mortuary goods.

YOUNG STRIBLING.

An undertakers' convention was moving in and by evening those guests of the hotel who had been away all day golfing or baiting the phantom fish which was said to reside in the lake were astonished to find their lobby and the other public rooms of their inn crammed with attractive displays of wares the very existence of which most people would never even suspect.

You Should Have Seen Those Rubber Roses.

There were clothing stores hung with long racks of attractive dresses and gentlemen's suits, displays of shoes which laced down the back, portable stained glass church windows of a kind to impart a glow of religion to any ordinary room, and artificial flowers made of rubber and wrought into all the conventional designs such as the broken wheel and the gates ajar, and adorned with all the conventional mottoes and lodge emblems made with the same material.

And there were some of the most beautiful coffins ever created for the more peaceful repose of the hollow shell of man. The soft, cozy interiors, tufted and quilted in satin and silk, were far more inviting than the beds in the hotel, and there was a scandal one morning when it was reported around the resort that one of the undertakers, coming home late from a social occasion and finding his room unbearably hot and his helpmeet captious, had returned to the hotel grounds and made himself comfortable in a beautiful box, the masterpiece of a leading manufacturer and the leader of that manufacturer's new fall line.

Explodes Reports of O'Banion's Box.

It was a bronze coffin of the kind known as Hoodlum's Delight, and yet it was not bronze either, but tin, or possibly iron, but made rich and iridescent with bronze paint and calculated to sell for $750 retail, fully equipped. The manufacturer was bringing the bronze coffin within the reach of the common people.

It was there that I learned not to believe everything I read in the newspapers, for a courteous salesman who was showing me his line insisted that all talk of Dion O'Banion's having been buried in a fabulously costly box was just so much bosh. He said he could fix me up with the best casket ever made for $3,500. He said he would be glad to do so, too, and gave me to understand that such things come in standard sizes. If I did not get fat I would probably take about a No. 6 long, in a B width.

"This would be a very pretty one for you," the salesman suggested, throwing back the window of a lovely crate lined in light blue. "You would look very nice. It goes with your complexion. But whatever you do, my friend, stay away from pink or white. Now, your big friend here," indicating Mr. Paul Gallico, who stands six feet three and is of dark complexion, "I think he would be an outsize, although he might scrunch. But he would look very nice on white."

We strolled away, inspecting marvel after marvel, including the complexion card, which is something like a color card, listing such subtle graduations as olive No. 2, florid No. 6, and sallow, and the electrical portable pipe organ which played "Nearer, My God, to Thee" with shuddering fervor, endlessly day and night. It was still pealing "Nearer, My God, to Thee" that evening when, their business session having been concluded, the assembled undertakers threw off their cares and their professional restraint and became, for one night in the year, just American good fellows away on a convention trip. This is to say that they filled up on hootch, got tight, paraded the halls in their nightgowns [wearing ladies' hats, of course], banged on doors, and sang "Sweet Adeline."

Somebody Has an Idea for a Joke.

That was the night that some roguish one, possibly a mischievous undertaker, stole into a room where one of our press party lay sleeping the sleep of the pure in heart after a hard day's work watching Schmeling go through thirty minutes of light, conventional exercise, and placed upon his bed a rubber wreath with the motto "To Our Pal."

Our colleague was very seriously disturbed when he woke up and saw this, for he was sensitive in the presence of the undertakers anyway, with all their trappings and tools of a grisly trade, and the funeral wreath on his bed he took to be an omen.

This was very foolish, of course, and we told him so. It was only a coincidence that a few months later he was dead.

CROWDS AT FAIR AGAIN TO ENJOY DERBY THRILLS

Remember in '93 When Boundless Won?

Thoroughbred horse racing will play an important part in the entertainment of visitors to Chicago's World's Fair-A Century of Progress, which opens on June 1.

This year's American Derby, to be run June 3 to June 10 is the second running of a World's Fair Derby. The last one was at the World's Columbian exposition in 1893, when the classic was won by Boundless in one of the most memorable struggles in the history of the American turf.

The famous jockey, Snapper Garrison, who died less than a year ago, rode Boundless, coming through with one of those great rides that created the expression "Garrison finish."

Old Timers Remember.

This year the race will be run at the new Washington Park, less than 30 minutes' ride from the fair grounds, and will bring to the post a large field of the best 3 year olds in training.

In the race in 1893 there was a delay at the post of one hour and 55 minutes because of the large and unwieldy field that faced Starter Charles Pettengill.

Old timers will recall that it was a fearfully hot day and 55,000 persons clicked their way through the turnstiles, the greatest crowd ever seen at old Washington park.

Garrison Saves His Mount.

Pettengill tried time and again to get the field lined up for a good send-off. Always, however, three or four horses were out of line.

It was then that Garrison began to pull his bag of tricks. Seeing that there was no chance for a break, he would dismount, ostensibly to fix his saddle girth.

Still the break failed to come, and the foxy Snapper then eased Boundless over alongside the inner rail. He thus could stand on the fence rail with one foot, keeping his weight off his mount. Garrison kept up these tricks for the better part of an hour, and when Pettengill finally sent the horses on their way Garrison had Boundless off in full flight with the early leaders.

Favorite Challenges.

His cleverness in keeping weight off Boundless left his horse comparatively fresh for the long grind of a mile and a half. He rushed into the lead a half mile after the start and was responding well to light urging.

As they neared the finish St. Leonard and Clifford, the latter a strong favorite, charged at the flying leader, and it was then that Snapper staged one of his famous Garrison finishes.

Leaning far over Boundless' neck, he went to work with whip, boot, and spur.

The big horse was tiring badly in the last furlong, but Garrison, always with something in reserve, kept the big horse running until he passed the wire with a safe lead over St. Leonard and Clifford.

Picks Purse Off Wire.

It was a smiling Garrison who rode Boundless back to the judges' stand. After saluting the stewards, he rode Boundless to the center of the track, stood up on the horse's back and plucked the purse of gold from the wire stretched across the finish line, an old turf custom that may be revived this year.

The Derby is only one of the many rich stakes that will be renewed during the Chicago racing season this summer. The sport begins on May 1 and does not end until the last day of the exposition, Oct. 31.

Arlington Park, the largest and one of the most beautiful racing plants in the world, in July will conduct one of the most pretentious racing programs ever seen in the United States. The Arlington Classic will be the feature.

During the Hawthorne meeting, in August, will be run the famous Hawthorne Gold Cup race.

N. U. Alumni to Oppose Varsity Eleven April 29

Northwestern's football team will meet an alumni eleven Saturday, April 29, at Dyche stadium. The game will be the feature number on a sports day program which will include a varsity baseball game and a freshman track meet.

A small admission fee will be charged, all proceeds to be turned over to the band fund to aid in buying new uniforms for next year. Director Glenn Cliff Bainum will have his bandsmen on hand to lend a real fall atmosphere to the occasion.

The football game will wind up spring practice and will show how far Coach Dick Hanley has progressed in rebuilding the Wildcats for next season.

The alumni back field will be picked from Pug Rentner, Yatz Levison, Lee Hanley, Walt Holmer, and Bill Calderwood. Luke Johnsos and Dick Fencl will appear at the ends. Other linemen are Tiny Engebretsen and Bob Gonya, tackles; Red Woodworth and Jimmy Evans, guards, and Mickey Erickson and Bob Clark, centers.

Numerous sophomores who are counted on for first string duty next fall be seen in action. Among them are Walter Cruice, southpaw passer from Milwaukee; Bud Gonya, brother of last year's tackle; Bob Schwartz, Oak Park; Fred Hedblom, Evanston, and Ralph Mack, Stan Mondela, and Chuck Dugal, all of Chicago.

Last year's backs who will play are Jakie Sullivan, Harry Leeper, Walt Stanul, Freddy Lind, Chet Sutton, and Bill Lehnhardt. Ollie Olson, George Potter, and Roy Auguston are out for other sports. The two returning regulars from last season's line are Eggs Manske, end, and Al Kawal, guard.

Artillery Polo Teams Win; Qualify for National Meet

Two of the 124th Field Artillery's polo teams won western championships in final elimiation games played last night in the Armory at 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue.

One artillery trio took the class C title by defeating Milwaukee, 11 to 7 and another came out on top in class D, by whipping a Chicago Riding club team, 10½ to 5. The two winners thereby qualified for the national tournament which will begin Wednesday night at the Armory.

The victorious class C team was made up of Maj. R. G. Hunter, Barney Balding, and Capt. W. S. Everett, and the class D trio consisted of Lieut. Lou Levine, Lieut. Romeo Mura, and Lieut. C. M. Schuh.

Cut Into Four Goal Handicap.

Immediately after the opening whistle Maj. Hunter's team began cutting into the four goal handicap which it conceded to the Milwaukeeans. Capt. Everett poked in a short one to start the scoring and then Maj. Hunter drew a rousing cheer from the galleries with one of the most spectacular shots of the evening. Riding at a full gallop he leaned out of his saddle and walloped the ball to the goal from nearly half the length of the arena.

Then Barney Balding took the white sphere in midfield, nursed it along to within 20 yards of the goal and slapped it home. His backhand shot from far off to one side provided the other point to make up the four goal handicap early in the second chukker.

From that point the issue was never in doubt, Milwaukee being unable to score at all until the third chukker.

Others Start from Scratch.

In the class D game both teams started from scratch and played on fairly even terms until the end of the third chukker, when the Artillery led by a score of 5½ to 4½. Then Lieut. Levine brought the ball down the field, lost it momentarily near the side line, but recovered. Riding across in front of the goal he pushed it over to make the score 6½ to 4½. Goals in quick succession by Schuh, Mura, and Levine, gave the Artillery a more comfortable margin, although Bowers made one for the Riding Club. Just before the last bell Schuh took the ball 20 yards out and drove it in from an angle.

Schuh made one of the most remarkable shots of the evening early in the second period, scoring on a long backhand drive under the belly of his horse.

Two horses suffered broken legs in the games. One was ridden by Lieut. Levine and the other by Joe Bell of the Milwaukee team.

CALIFORNIA'S 3 CREWS BEATEN BY WASHINGTON

Oakland, Cal., April 8.—(AP)—University of Washington's Huskies swept to three thrilling victories over the California Bears on Oakland estuary today in the annual regatta established thirty years ago.

After being beaten in the freshman race by three lengths and in the junior varsity when the bow oar "caught a crab" fifty yards from the finish, the Bears were humbled by Washington's varsity boat by a margin of seven lengths.

Manned by Champions.

The California shell was manned by several oarsmen who helped their alma mater turn back the nation's best in 1932 and climaxed the season by winning the Olympic games championship.

The Huskies astounded some 50,000 spectators assembled along the banks of the estuary with a smooth stroking varsity crew that took the lead from the start and maintained it throughout the three mile test. The Washington varsity crossed the finish line in 15 minutes 9.2 seconds. California was timed in 15 minutes 30 seconds.

The race brought the record to nineteen victories for the Washington varsity to eight for California. In two earlier regattas, Stanford, no longer a competitor, claimed the honors, while in 1907 all three shells swamped to make it a "no contest."

Victim of Ill Fortune.

The Bear junior varsity shell was the victim of ill fortune in its three mile test. After leading until the last 50 yards, the Bear Jayvee oarsmen were forced to concede defeat when George Vinehorn, bow, lost his oar. Washington was timed in 15 minutes 47 seconds, while the Californian craft coasted over minus the aid of its bow oar in 15:54.8

The Washington freshmen won the two mile race rather easily in 10 minutes 54.8 seconds. California's yearlings were timed in 11:04.

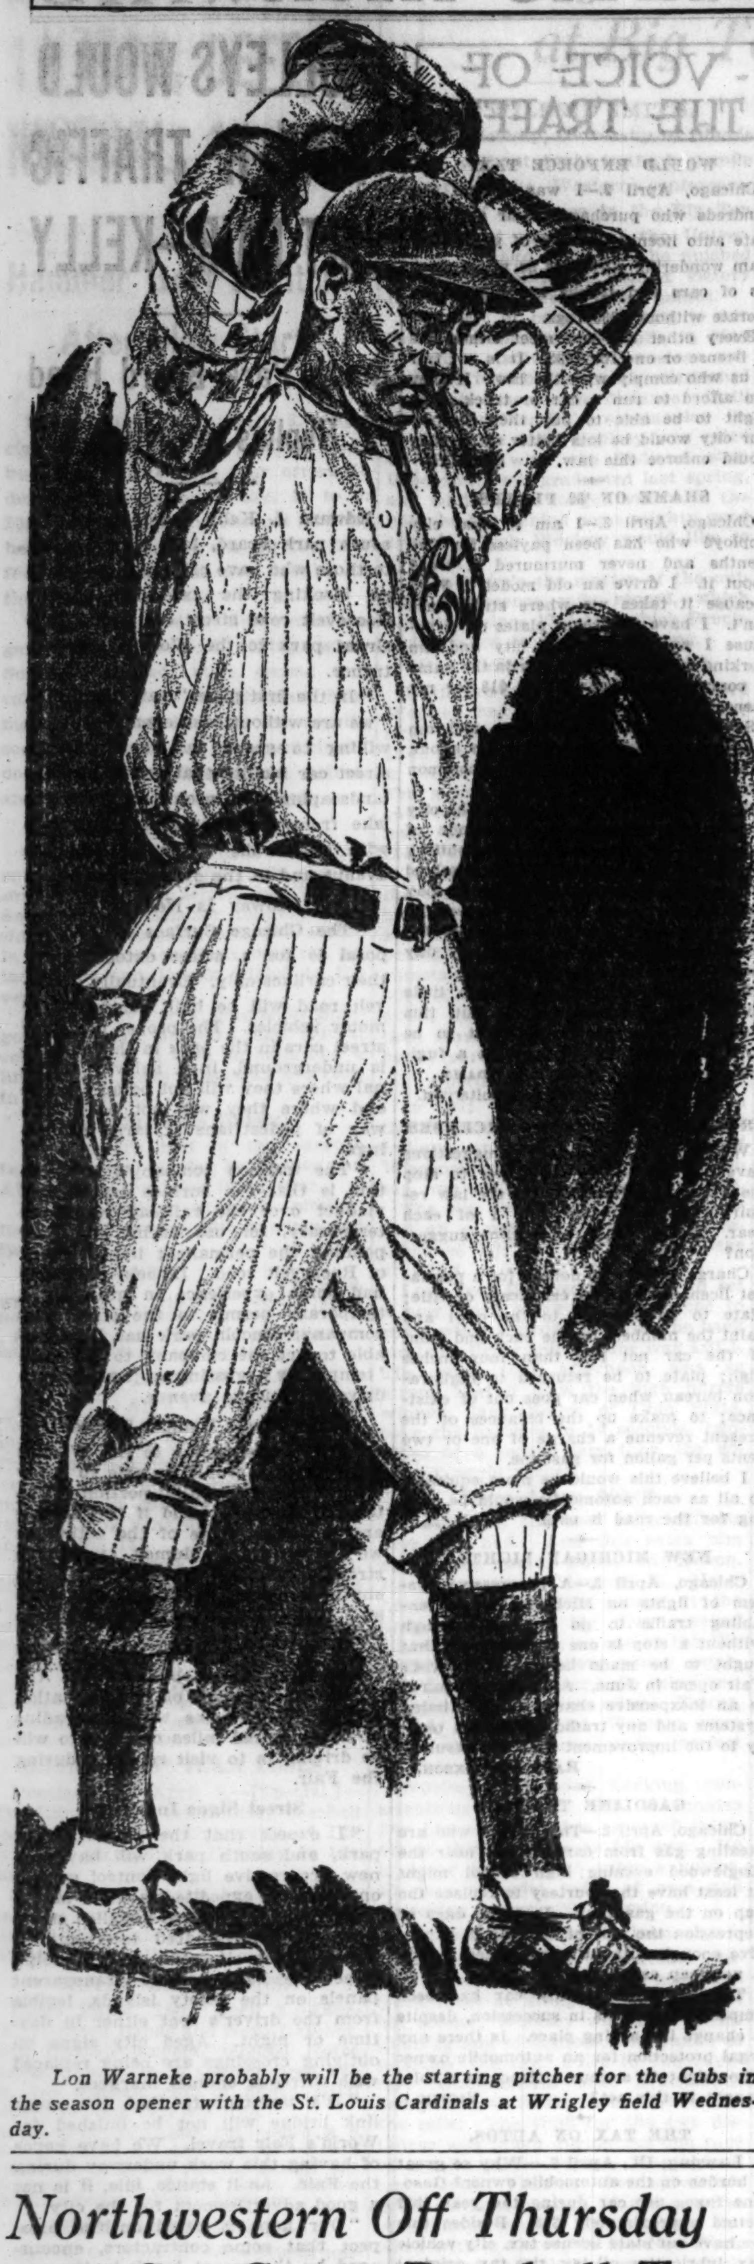
WHEN CUBS BATTLE—



Lon Warneke probably will be the starting pitcher for the Cubs in the season opener with the St. Louis Cardinals at Wrigley field Wednesday.

Northwestern Off Thursday on Six Game Baseball Tour

Northwestern's baseball team will take advantage of the spring vacation to play a schedule of six games with teams in Illinois, Michigan and Indiana. The trip will start Thursday and end April 19.

The trip will take the place of the usual southern training trip, which has been discontinued due to lack of funds. After the trip, the team will play five home games before opening its conference season April 27 against Illinois at Urbana.

Make Trip by Automobile.

The team will make the trip by automobile and will be housed in dormitories at the various schools. The first stop will be at Peoria, Ill., where Bradley Tech will be met in a two game series Thursday and Friday.

From Peoria the team will make the hop to Lansing, Mich., for a game with Michigan State next Saturday. Two games will be played with Western State Teachers at Kalamazoo, April 17 and 18. The last game of the jaunt will be against Notre Dame at South Bend April 19.

Roy Auguston Out.

Coach Paul Stewart's hopes of starting the season with a veteran infield was struck a blow when Roy Auguston, hard hitting shortstop, underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis. He will be out for the greater part of the season.

Auguston's place will probably be filled by one of several sophomore infield candidates. Benny Arnquist seems to have the inside track for the job.

April 13—Bradley at Peoria.
April 14—Bradley at Peoria.
April 15—Michigan State at Lansing.
April 17—Western State at Kalamazoo.
April 18—Western State at Kalamazoo.
April 19—Notre Dame at South Bend.
April 21—Armour at Evanston.
April 22—Michigan State at Evanston.
April 25—Western State at Evanston.
May 3—Lake Forest at Lake Forest [tentative].
May 6—Notre Dame at Evanston.

RUTH GIVES NEW BREW A TRIAL AND APPROVAL

New York, April 8.—(AP)—George Herman Ruth, the baseball fellow, wandered out of the Yankee exhibition game with the Dodgers in Brooklyn in the fifth inning today and straight into the hands of the first bottle of 3.2 beer he has encountered since the brew became legal Friday.

The Babe, a connoisseur of beer in the old days, appraised with a careful eye the bottle offered him by the locker room attendant.

"Hmmm," he said, "it looks like beer."

The attendant removed the cap and the Babe tilted back his head. Finally he set down the bottle and nodded wisely.

"All right," he said, "for quenching your thirst. A couple of those won't go bad after a tough game in July."

GIANTS, 5; TIGERS, 4.

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Johnny Vergez's double followed by Tom Bridges' wild throw over first base gave the New York Giants a 5 to 4 victory over the Detroit Tigers in 11 innings today. With the final game of the series scheduled for tomorrow, the Giants lead in games, 5 to 4.

For five innings the game was a pitchers' battle between Lyn Rowe and Fred Fitzsimmons with Rowe holding a slight advantage as the result of the Tigers' one run scored in the third. The American leaguers scored two more in the sixth only to have the Giants get four runs in their half of the inning.

The Tigers tied up the score again in the seventh before Rowe tripped over first base and was forced to leave the game. In the eleventh Vergez led off with a double. Mancuso laid down a bunt along the third base line. Bridges, who had relieved Rowe, fielded the ball and threw wide of first, allowing Vergez to scamper across the plate with the winning run.

Boston, Mass., April 8.—(AP)—The Boston Red Sox gave Ivy Andrews and Bob Kline some timely hitting today and the American leaguers defeated the Boston Braves, 7 to 0, in the opening game of the annual city series at Fenway park.

Ben Cantwell started on the mound for the Braves, and his wildness, plus singles by Manager Marty McManus, Johnny Watwood and Smead Jolley, accounted for the four runs pushed over by the Sox in the opening inning.

Dale Alexander, American league batting champion, played the first half of the game and had a perfect day at bat, drawing a pass before connecting for a double and single on his three trips to the plate. The Braves threatened to score several times but three fast double plays spoiled their chances. The contest drew 2,500. Score:

Cubs and Yankees Are Picked to Win Major League Races

Babe Herman, 4 Star Pitchers to Carry Bruins Along.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

It's the Cubs to repeat. No civic pride this, nor even a declaration that the Cubs lads form a great team. The Cubs again will win the pennant because they have as much power as any other team in the National, save Philadelphia; they have the best infield in the league and their first line pitching staff is second only to that of the Cardinals, who are eminently disorganized in all departments excepting the battery positions.

With a minimum of apologizing about one man's guess being as good as another's, etc., etc., we desire to set down the following ratings on the National league pennant race:

1. Chicago. The Cubs' spirit is perfect; their nerves and courage are O. K. Their batting power has been bolstered by the acquisition of Babe Herman. Bill Jurges and Bill Herman, great infielders last year, will show the result of added experience; Warneke, Bush, Malone, and Root will again form a tough big four. The Cubs' weakness is in reserve pitching and catching.

Pirates Dangerous.

2. Pittsburgh. If the Cubs slip the least bit the Pirates will take charge. Any team that has the Waner brothers working for it is dangerous. And the Pirates have other assets in abundance. Freddy Lindstrom is a fine addition, but those who say he will supply the extra talent for a pennant are optimistic. Lindstrom never has been a good team man and the Pirates were susceptible to individualism even before Lindstrom arrived. No one should underestimate the ability of Meine, French, Swift, and, on his great spring rejuvenation, Hoyt. The Pirates' weakness continues to be the erratic play at short and second.

3. Philadelphia. The power of this outfit can't go on being wasted. Strengthened in the infield with the acquisition of Mickey Finn and with the pitching improved, the bats of Chuck Klein, Don Hurst, Virgil Davis, et al, can't be denied.

Dodgers Picked Fourth.

4. Brooklyn. The Dodgers will be the same kind of an outfit as heretofore, which should assure them the fourth spot. If O'Doul slips it may be another story.

5. St. Louis. Dean and Carleton seem to be going better than ever, Hallahan has pitched some fine spring games and Derringer has been showing symptoms of a comeback. Superb pitching will have to offset a creaky infield and an uncertain outfield.

6. New York. Limited pitching talent will hamper the work of an otherwise first class team. Hubbell is magnificent, Fitzsimmons is good, and Schumacher is fair. You go on from there.

Braves Have Pitchers.

7. Boston. Good pitching, but otherwise mediocrity abounds.

8. Cincinnati. Every one seems to want the Reds to get out of the cellar. But if they make it, Chick Hafey, Jim Bottomley, and Ernesto Lombardi will have to bat them out.

Want to Know Nature? Read Tribune Books

BY BOB BECKER.

With all outdoor sports about to swing into the spring schedule, fishermen, bird fans, campers and nature lovers of all classes will find THE TRIBUNE'S trio of outdoor books now on sale mighty handy companions on trips afield.

Three illustrated handbooks make up this inexpensive outdoor library. They are: "Birds and Bird Houses," an 80 page manual on birds of the central states; "The Fisherman's Guide," and "Practical Woodcraft," a profusely illustrated manual for campers and nature students.

"Birds and Bird Houses" sells for 26 cents at THE TRIBUNE Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago, or 31 cents by mail. The other two handbooks are priced at 16 cents per copy or 19 cents by mail. All mail orders should be sent direct to the public service office.

"Birds and Bird Houses" is a new edition with a handsome spring cover of bright blue. It is packed with information on how to build bird houses, where to place nesting boxes for various summer residents, how birds migrate, how to identify some of the middle western song birds, and how to protect songsters from their "racketeer" enemies. It is an all-year book for the bird fan, because there are complete chapters on feeding winter birds.

The second book of the trio, "The Fisherman's Guide" [19 cents by mail], contains 72 pages of fishing tips and information on popular game fish. A series of 17 full page pictures of fresh water fish makes it possible for any fisherman to settle arguments about the muskie-pickerel question, and easily identify the species which most of us fish for. This is one of the big practical features of this handbook. Brook trout, wall-eyed pike, pickerel, muskies, black bass, tackle tips, and other subjects are covered in this little volume, which now is in its third edition.

"Practical Woodcraft" [19 cents by mail], the third handbook, gives the nature lover scores of interesting and valuable tips on how to build cooking fires in the woods, how to use a compass, how to build a camp crane for a cooking fire, how to read nature's signposts in the woods, suggestions on camp rations, and other similar topics.

Inexperienced campers and woods travelers will find this illustrated handbook extremely helpful in mastering the fundamentals of woodcraft and campcraft. Mail orders, with remittances for one or all three of these handbooks should be sent direct to THE TRIBUNE'S Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

White Sox, with Added Strength, Likely to Be Fifth.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The American league still is a slave to the power of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, not to mention the players who, with this pair, make up the world champion Yankees.

So long as Ruth and Gehrig are swinging in the way that during recent seasons has broken the hearts of the opposition, the Yanks must be regarded as the superior entry in the American league. It was that way in the last campaign. And it promises to be that way in the six month race which opens next Wednesday.

It is a sort of dismal prospect for the seven other starters, but so long as the home run ball, in which Ruth and Gehrig specialize, is permitted to dominate the game, just so long will such a situation exist. The removal of either of this devastating pair through illness or mishap would alter the pennant complexion considerably, but at this time both appear to be in excellent health for their age.

Yanks Not Great Team.

If you pick the Yankee club to pieces you'll make the startling discovery that it is not a great ball team from an all around standpoint. Some of the regulars are not above the level of mediocrity, especially in fielding. Some of their pitchers would have trouble winning with an ordinary team. But because of that great power at bat all these weaknesses that would wreck a light hitting team are overcome. The Yanks can give away a half dozen runs on errors and grab them right back, with a few more, by swinging their bats.

If Ruth's and Gehrig's home run skill didn't have to be reckoned with, the pennant choice undoubtedly would be the Washington Senators. Trades during the winter added balance where it was needed, with the possible exception of the pitching. The added hitting will help to overcome some of the pitching weakness which seems likely to develop. However, there is the matter of a youthful manager who besides is one of the important cogs in the machine. If the Senators aren't a second place contender or better it will be charged to him.

Cronin's Selection Puzzle.

Joe Cronin, the manager, is a mere kid without previous experience except as a man in the ranks. As short stop and one of the team's best hitters, he has his load of responsibility. He's the fidgety, nervous type. With his added duties his actual play may be affected.

That he even was picked for the job still puzzles a lot of baseball men, who figured Owner Clark Griffith would have guessed better had he named one of the two veterans—Sam Rice or Joe Judge—who had been faithful employés. But Griffith made a surprising pick in Bucky Harris back in 1924 and the Senators won the world's championship. Griffith probably thinks it will work a second time. It might if Babe Ruth should happen to be missing for about half a season.

Athletics Are Made Over.

The team the Senators appear destined to fight with about second place is the Athletics. Connie Mack will present a madeover layout, made necessary by the sale of Al Simmons, Jimmy Dykes, and George Haas to the White Sox. Great things are being said of the lads who will fill the spots vacated by the trio of veterans. The youngsters might be good but they'll certainly be no better than Simmons, Dykes and Haas. Mack's pitchers will miss the help given them by Simmons' bat. And Mack himself will miss the field directing skill of Eddie Collins, his coach in recent seasons.

1. New York—Powerful hitting, ordinary fielding and fair pitching. Almost a cinch to repeat by a large margin if Babe Ruth's brittle legs don't crumple.

2. Washington—Good hitting, excellent fielding and fair pitching. A pennant possibility if injuries slow down the Yankees on attack and Cronin's shortstop skill isn't affected by his managerial duties.

3. Philadelphia — Excellent pitching that may be adversely affected by lighter hitting than prevailed in recent seasons. Fielding of new men reputed to be of a high order, but that remains to be seen.

4. Cleveland — Fair hitting, fair pitching and fair fielding.

New Park to Bother Indians.

The Cleveland team, which at one time last season threatened to march right into first place and stay there, faces a hazard in its new stadium. The Indians hit like wild men while they were in their own little park last season. But when they moved to the big municipal field there was no short right field fence to use as a backstop for ordinary fly balls.

Picking the White Sox for the top of the second division may be giving them a break, and then again may be the opposite. With Simmons, Haas and Fonseca they certainly have the nucleus for an attack. Later on Billy Sullivan, who hit well last year, can be added. He doesn't want to catch, but probably will have to unless Fonseca finds himself unable to continue at first base. The real hitch in the layout, however, is that the pitching may be none too steady and that trouble is going to be encountered at least for a time, around second base.

ARGENTINA LEADS CHILE, 2 TO 0, IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

BUENOS AIRES, April 8.—(AP)—Argentina gained a 2 to 0 lead over Chile, as play in the final round of South American zone Davis cup tennis competition opened here today.

Hector Cataruzza of Argentina defeated Elias Deik in the opening singles match, 6-2, 6-8, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, and Guillermo Robson of Argentina conquered Salvador Deik, 6-1, 6-0, 6-1, in the second.

An Argentine victory in the doubles tomorrow automatically would clinch the series and the zone championship.

COLUMBUS RATED STRONGEST CLUB IN ASSOCIATION

New Playoff Plan Makes Guessing Hazardous.

BY CHARLES NEVADA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., April 8.—The pennant race in the American association is going to be decided under a new plan this season. Under the bonus playoff system adopted in December, it is within the realm of possibility for the fifth place club to become the A. A. pennant winner. The season opens Tuesday.

Instead of awarding the pennant to the team with the highest percentage, it has been decided to have a winner in the western half of the league, composed of Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Kansas City, and St. Paul, and also a winner for the eastern half, which includes Columbus, Indianapolis, Toledo, and Louisville. The highest ranking western club will be eligible to meet the highest ranking eastern team in a post-season series of seven games. The winner will be recognized as the league champion and will qualify for the little world series with the International league title holder.

Columbus Appears Best.

Columbus appears to be the choice of a majority of critics for top position in the standings on Sept. 10, when the American association concludes its first 154 game schedule since 1930. Anything can happen in the playoff with the western leader.

Although the Redbirds lost the league's most valuable player of last season when Pat Crawford went to the St. Louis Cardinals for another major league trial, they still appear mighty formidable. With Manager Ray Blades, Nick Cullop, and De Witt Le Bourveau available as keymen in the batting department, and Paul Dean, Bud Teachout, and Bill Lee fit and ready to carry the pitching burden, and with the Cardinals ever ready to help with surplus talent, it is small wonder Columbus is the pre-season favorite.

May Be Indians' Year.

Owner Norman Perry has been promising Indianapolis fans a winner now for nearly three years, and it begins to appear that he might fulfill his promise this season. The Indians are stronger this year than last, judging rom reports, and records show they were in the thick of the flag fight until the closing days of the 1932 schedule. This first class talent, plus the presence of a new and experienced leader in Wade [Red] Killefer, and Perry's willingness to buy and trade players whenever he spots a weakness all go to create something more than mere hope.

Loss of Pitcher Jack Knott and Outfielder Ted Gullic, who were taken over by the St. Louis Browns, caused gaps in Milwaukee's ranks that have not been filled and will not be filled without considerable trial and effort. The Brewers, however, have been strengthened at shortstop, where Eddie Grimes will replace Jack Tavener, who has been shipped off to the Texas league. Larry Bettencourt may provide the long distance hitting punch Milwaukee lacked last season. If he delivers and the pitchers have a little luck the Brewers have visions of duplicating their accomplishment of a year ago, when they were third.

Millers Rated Fourth.

Minneapolis, the 1932 champion, is figured to do not better than fourth. The Millers, at this writing, appear the most changed club in the league. They lost their aggressive leader, Donie Bush. Gone from their pitching department are Rosy Bill Ryan and Carmen Hill, who despite their years accounted for nearly thirty victories in the last season. And they can't hope for Rube Benton to go on much longer. Benton, who probably is older than John Picus Quinn, the patriarch of the majors, turned in eighteen victories in 1932.

With Tris Speaker to lead them, the Kansas City Blues are expected to prove more impressive than a year ago. Louisville, St. Paul, and Toledo probably will trail at the bottom. The Mudhens have been crippled by raids on their ranks by the Cleveland Indians. General Manager Billy Evans recalled Bill Knickerbocker, who set a new all-time American association record for two baggers last September; Ralph Winegarner, dependable pitcher who was available in other rôles because of his hitting, and Bib Falk, whose timely batting won more than one game.

Unorthodox training methods are expected to militate against the chances of the Colonels and the Saints. For reasons of economy managements of both clubs deemed it unwise to go farther south than Louisville for conditioning. Spring climate in the Kentucky city can be just as raw and as hard on untried pitching arms as in more northerly spots during the same season of the year.

Umpires Are Assigned.

President T. J. Hickey has announced the following opening day assignments for umpires: Larry Goetz and Ben Tincup at Indianapolis; C. E. Johnston and Al Devormer at Louisville; E. J. Pfeffer and Thomas P. Dunn at Toledo, and George Johnson and Edward J. McLaughlin at Columbus. Dunn and McLaughlin, serving their first terms in the American association, came from the Pacific Coast league in exchange for Joe Rue and R. W. Snyder.

AWARD CHICAGO NATIONAL CLAY COURT TOURNEY

For the first time since 1921, Chicago has been awarded the National clay court championship tournament by the United States Lawn Tennis association. This was revealed yesterday when M. C. Rassmussen, secretary of the Chicago Town and Tennis club, received a telegram from New York awarding the tournament to his club sometime this summer.

TURF STARS OF OTHER LANDS TO RACE IN CHICAGO

Pillow Fight, Boy Painter at Washington Park.

BY FRENCH LANE.

The two imported horses—Pillow Fight from Australia and Boy Painter from England—of which so much was expected in the rich winter stakes, may yet make amends in America for their failure to get to the post in the Agua Caliente handicap.

Word has just come from the Pacific coast revealing the summer racing plans for the two outlanders. They are to be named for most of the stakes to be run in Chicago during June and July, and will more than likely campaign at Saratoga in August and in Maryland during the autumn and fall racing.

Recovering from Ailments.

Pillow Fight still is in Lower California, where illness kept him out of the Agua Caliente handicap. Boy Painter, which represents some of the most fashionable blood lines in England, is at the Tanforan track near San Francisco. He is fast recovering from a leg ailment sustained at Agua Caliente early in the winter, but it is hardly likely he will be asked to race until he reaches the Washington Park track in June, and it may be that his debut will be delayed until the series of rich stakes at Arlington Park get under way.

Both these horses were brought here primarily to try for the Agua Caliente handicap, the value of the stake at the time having been advertised as $50,000. Boy Painter went wrong soon after he began to train for the race. Pillow Fight went along and made a few starts at Agua Caliente.

May Be Great Horse.

The showing he made was not impressive, yet horsemen who watched the big Australian champion in motion believe he is a much better horse than those races indicated. He was never himself from the time he landed in America, it is claimed, until he was thrown out of training a few days before the running of the Caliente handicap.

Capt. Cuthbert Morse, noted New Zealand trainer, believes that possibly within two months and surely within three months Pillow Fight will be entirely acclimated. "Then he will prove his greatness," Capt. Morse said.

Capt. Morse has rented a small place near the Tanforan track, where Pillow Fight will be turned out in the grass for a few weeks before any attempt will be made to train him again.

Wants to Run Wrong Way.

Boy Painter, taught his racing lessons the English way, at first refused to run over an American track. He insisted on going in the wrong direction. Jockey Johnny Maiben finally broke him of that habit and just about the time he was ready to settle down to the serious business of training, one of Boy Painter's legs was injured so severely he was thrown out of training.

The two foreign invaders will not have an easy time of it in the big stakes in Chicago and in the east this season.

Our handicap division will be headed by such stars as Equipoise, Gallant Sir, Mate, Plucky Play, Clock Tower, Burgoo King, Gusto, Faireno, Tick On, Brother Joe, Top Flight, Larranaga, Boatswain, Osculator, and Tred Avon. It has been a number of years since the American handicap division included so many good performers.

Coldstream Horses Point for Arlington

Lexington, Ky., April 8.—[Special.] Coldstream Stud, the name under which Charles B. Shaffer, Chicago oil man, maintains his racing stable and breeding establishment here, promises to play a more important part than ever in the sport this season, judging by the number of promising horses in training at the farm course.

The high spots of this stable's campaign may occur during the five weeks of racing, June 26 to July 29, at Arlington Park, which again this year may lead all other American tracks in the value of its stakes and purses.

The Coldstream horses, numbering 27, will be divided within a week or two, it was announced by Dr. John Baird, manager, with a division going to New York in charge of the veteran Frank Taylor and a division remaining in the west under the direction of Jack Howard.

Futurity Is Goal.

For the Arlington meeting, however, Taylor probably will bring his division from the east and it may be joined by some of the more promising members of Howard's string. Whatever the case, Coldstream is planning an intensive drive on the Arlington purses and especially for the Arlington Futurity, whose value will approximate $50,000.

Taylor will have the training of Bertrano, Coldstream's outstanding 3 year old hopeful, and if the son of Pot au Feu from Fleeting Moments continues to improve he will be Shaffer's dependence in the Arlington Classic. Glen Feu, by Pot au Feu from Glen Lass, may develop into a Classic prospect. He has never started, but displayed a fine burst of speed as a juvenile. He is a good sized horse and is not being rushed in his work this spring. He may arrive at his peak during the Arlington session.

Corbett, Lewis to Ride.

A majority of the 2 year olds, which Dr. Baird says are the best ever raised at Coldstream, were sired by Pot au Feu, a French stallion, but other promising ones are by Swift and Sure, Hunting and Strolling Player.

Jockey Charles Corbett will be affiliated with Howard's section and Melvin Lewis will do the riding for Taylor.

Harness Race Meet Planned on Fair Card

Revival of trotting and pacing races in Chicago and restoration of the city to its former place on the Grand Circuit is an early probability. A World's Fair trotting meet in September at a track yet to be selected is now being planned by a new organization of harness horse enthusiasts, which will guarantee purses large enough to make the event rank with the best in the nation. The new organization probably will be known as the Chicago Harness-Horse association.

Henry H. Knight, one of the leading owners and breeders in America, is fathering the movement. Knight has recently taken up residence in Chicago. His father, G. L. Knight of Nicholasville, Ky., is the breeder of Exterminator, a noted runner and high money winner which won the Kentucky Derby in 1918.

Among those who are supporting the movement are Dr. Anson Cameron of Chicago, long identified with breeding and racing and present owner of Emma Magowan, 2.05½, former world's champion 2 year old trotter; C. K. G. Billings, California breeder, and Warren Wright of Chicago, owner of Calumet farm, regarded as one of the foremost trotting horse farms in the country.

Others interested in the movement are A. T. Cole of Wheaton, for many years a breeder and owner of world's champions; E. J. Baker, owner of one of the most successful stables on the Grand Circuit; Thomas Hogan, president of the Yellow Cab company; Charles B. Schaeffer, owner of the famous Cold Stream Stock farms at Lexington, Ky.; F. G. Hartwell, prominent years ago as one of the best amateur drivers in the country when the Chicago Gentlemen's Driving club was at its peak; George B. Dryden of Evanston, who owns a large stable of turf stars, and F. E. Marsh, whose celebrated stallion Grattan, 2:13, is the grandsire of many of the present day champions.

NEW YORK HOUSE PASSES SECOND BETTING BILL

Albany, N. Y., April 8.—(AP)—With defeat promised in the senate, the assembly today passed the Breitenbach bill proposing to amend the state constitution to legalize betting on horse races. The vote was 98 to 45.

This was the second race bill to be passed in the lower house within the last 24 hours. The assembly yesterday passed the Wallace bill to permit betting, by striking out the penalty for violation of the anti-betting law.

Senate leaders, however, have indicated they will not pass the bills. The Wallace bill was sent to the senate finance committee today when it came over from the assembly and has not yet been reported out.

Senator Jeremiah F. Twomey, Brooklyn Democrat and chairman of the finance committee, objected to immediate action on the bill. He has had a companion measure in his committee for several weeks and has not reported it out.

The Breitenbach bill would have to be passed again next year and then approved by the voters before it would become effective. He planned, however, to get around this by removing the penalty from the present law and permitting betting at once.

South American Drivers Sail for 500 Mile Race

BUENOS AIRES, April 8.—(AP)—The racing car drivers, Paul Riganti and Juan Gaudino, today sailed for the United States on the American Legion en route to the 500 mile race at Indianapolis, Ind., May 30. Both Riganti and Gaudino have raced at Indianapolis before, Gaudino last year and Riganti as a member of an Italian team several years ago.

Illinois Tennis Squad Shuts Out Normal, 9 to 0

Champaign, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—The University of Illinois tennis team defeated Illinois State Normal, 9 to 0, today. The Illini swept through the six single and three double events without losing a set.

Sam Atcheson Wins National Handball Title

After 12 years of playing, the title fell to him at the Lake Shore Athletic club yesterday when he defeated Sam Hobelmann of Baltimore, the giant of the handball courts, 21-11, 21-6, in one of the best exhibitions ever witnessed in the national tournament.

Hobelmann, a fast man for his 6 feet 4 inches, didn't have a chance against the star from Dixie. Atcheson went ahead at the first exchange and drew away to win with comparative ease.

Sam Is Consistent Winner.

In winning the title, Atcheson extended a winning streak seldom equalled in handball. He has won the national Y. M. C. A. championship three years in succession without loss of a single game. In this week's national tournament, he broke through a fast field without losing a struggle. His last defeat was in the finals of the national championship in 1932 when Angelo Trulio of New York defeated him for the title in a three-game match.

Dick Bruck of New York won third place in the singles field with a 21-17, 21-7 victory over Trulio, who was defeated in the semi-finals by Hobelmann.

Chicago Pair Loses.

Jack Endzvick and Joe Goudreau of Cleveland won the national doubles title by defeating the Chicago pair, Dr. William Serritella and Maurice McCarthy, 21-6, 21-13.

C., April 8.—(AP)—Four members of the Regina Patricas, junior hockey champions of the west, were suspended today by the Canadian Amateur Hockey association as a result of an attack on a referee after the Memorial cup final game at Toronto Thursday. The Pats lost two straight to Newmarket.

Referee Tells His Version of Debated Fall

Receives $50 for Officiating.

"They said I got $500 for that one," he said. "But, if it was as easy as that, I wouldn't be living like this, drawing $17.50 a week as an assistant manager of the Division theater and picking up what I can acting as interpreter for Armenians in the courts downtown." His fee for working on Friday's card, on which he officiated in three bouts, was $50.

While his wife and daughter, Armen, the oldest of the four Manogoff children, plied the interviewers with refreshments, Manogoff recited bits of his career to substantiate his declaration that he was well qualified, technically and morally, to referee. In 1915 he broke Frank Gotch's leg at Kenosha, Wis., in a bout.

"And the people booed," he mused. "They said Frank was faking."

He gave Strangler Lewis his ring name, he said. His right name is Bob Fredericks. Fredericks failed to show up at a match down south, and Manogoff, who had prepared to challence the winner, took his place.

Wrestles as Fredericks.

"The next week Fredericks came in to wrestle and we couldn't call him by his right name because I had used it a week before," Manogoff explained. "S I named him Strangler Lewis, because the original Strangler was dead. A short time later, in Lexington, Ky., I wrestled Fredericks. He was billed as Strangler Lewis and I as Bob Fredericks. I beat him. Have some more cake?

"O, Friday night's match? Well, you can say for me Savoldi threw him and Savoldi is champion as far as I am concerned. And another thing: I didn't run away from the Stadium. When reporters were looking for me I was in the boiler room. They made me dress down there."

Manogoff exhibited a cut on the leg he received when Savoldi's foot struck him in Friday's bout and he will exhibit it to the commission if he is called when the investigation is opened tomorrow, he said.

Counted Three Silently.

Manogoff also read aloud the rule governing falls, in which the state code says a fall occurs when "both shoulders are momentarily pinned to the mat. Rolling falls shall not count. By momentarily is meant, pinned for the referee's silent count of three."

"That's what I did. Counted silently for three seconds," he explained.

It was expected tomorow's investigation will result in a wrestling vacation in Illinois, with the commission taking no formal action to ban the sport, but merely withholding sanction of shows for an indefinite period.

OOF! LEWIS TO TRY SQUEEZE ON JIM BROWNING

Krone Shudders to Think of Tuesday Bout.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

It appeared that the situation would be much the same as that which would prevail if an irresistible force were to encounter an immovable object. For Doc Krone's description led his listeners to believe that Browning's shovel scissors is capable of squeezing the life's breath out of a Neanderthal man, while Lewis' headlock is a grip which can crush the skull of an arboreal anthropoid ape.

They're Both Champions.

In short, these two ferocious grapplers are likely to reach an impasse. But as a matter of fact they already offer a contradiction in terms. For Browning claims to be champion of the world in New York and Lewis claims to be champion of the world in Illinois.

To the neophyte this is all very confusing, but the mind of the experienced wrestling fan can grasp these apparently contradictory statements and still be capable of mentally digesting the assertion that Jim Londos and Joe Savoldi are champions of the world elsewhere, and sometimes in the same places.

Of course this is very involved, but if the tyro stops to consider that rassling is primarily an intellectual occupation, he will not despair when his mind fails to grasp all these points readily at first. With training and discipline he will learn to take these statements for all they are worth.

Doc's Gentle Nature Revealed.

The ferocity and courage of Strangler Lewis is a subject upon which Doc Krone likes to discourse. His eloquence on such occasions might lead his listeners to think that the doctor himself is a fierce, sinister and forbidding character. But do not be deceived. At heart he is almost of a beatific disposition.

This point was illustrated last night in the course of one of his informal talks in his Sherman hotel headquarters. He was describing how the Strangler had perfected his famous headlock by practicing on a wooden block, shaped like the head of one of his opponents. The doctor had brought his listeners to the edges of their chairs as he was telling how the implacable Strangler would put the pressure upon this blockhead, when suddenly the strains of romantic music drifted across the room from a radio on the desk.

Immediately the doctor paused in his ferocious description and a smile suffused his red cherubic countenance. His listeners expected him to quote, "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast," but instead he remarked, "Radios are nice, ain't they?"

Well, to go on with the story, Browning threw Lewis at their last meeting in New York and the Strangler is out to thump his rival roundly in return.

In other matches on the program Len Macaluso, former Colgate football player, will grapple Matros Kirilenko; Gus Sonnenberg will oppose Leon Pinetzke, and Tiny Roebuck will meet Glenn Munn.

Proposed Laws on Auto Trucks Bring Protests

BY HAL FOUST.

Farm organizations are protesting to President Roosevelt against proposals to regulate and tax highway trucks for the benefit of railroads. A memorandum outlining the position of agriculture on the transportation question was addressed to the White House by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation; John A. Simpson, president of the National Farmers union, and Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange. They made four recommendations:

1. That in case you decide to set up a federal agency to supervise or regulate truck and bus operations in interstate traffic, an agency be provided separate and distinct from that supervising railroad, waterway or aerial transportation, although all such agencies might be correlated under a common head.

Ask No Rate Regulation.

2. That no attempt be made at this time to regulate rates of contract or private motor carriers, and that this policy be continued until such time as it can be clearly shown that such regulation is necessary in order to reduce rates in the interest of the shipper and the consumer.

3. That in any type of regulation of motor vehicle transportation that may be undertaken the question of "equalizing conditions of competition" with another carrier engaged in a different kind of transportation shall not be a consideration. Free competition between the different transportation agencies must be maintained.

4. That for a period of at least one year any federal agency set up to supervise interstate truck and bus operations, shall function solely as an agency to collect data which will give a clearer idea of the kinds of regulation needed, if any, in order properly to safeguard the interests of the public.

Farmers State Stand.

The farmer representatives signed the following statement as their position on truck regulation:

1. We insist that this newer form of transportation by motor vehicle must be given every reasonable opportunity to develop.

2. Regulations of size, weight, and speed of trucks are state police power matters and should be drafted from the viewpoint of promoting the safety of the highways and protecting property. The uniform standards recently adopted by the American Association of State Highway Officials seem fully to cover this phase of the question.

3. No taxation or regulation of motor vehicles should be permitted which has for its purpose any increase in cost or restriction in use in order to "equalize competition" between motor transportation and other forms of transportation. In most states trucks and buses are already paying their full share of the cost of the roads they use.

4. Rather than to approach the transportation problem by laying additional charges and restrictions on motor vehicles, we believe that the time has come to remove from the railroads some of the restrictions that were necessary when they had a monopoly of land transportation. We might observe also that substantial reductions in present excessive freight rates would go a long way toward restoring to the railroads large quantities of freight which at present rates cannot be moved at all.

No Public Demand.

Furthermore, a drastic revision of the capital structure and all expenses of the railroads seem to be badly needed. In this connection we commend to your attention two paragraphs of the report of the interstate commerce commission for 1932, as follows:

"There is substantially no demand for public regulation of the charges of motor trucks to protect shippers against exorbitant or discriminatory charges. The demand has been chiefly from the railroads, and for the prescription of minimum rather than maximum charges.

"Indications are that the number of motor truck operators is very large and that their operations are mostly on a small scale. Regulation which is appropriate and practicable in the case of a comparatively few large well organized companies may be quite impracticable in the case of a multitude of individuals or small concerns."

The farm leaders also quoted the following paragraph from the recent report of the national transportation committee:

"One thing is certain. Automotive transportation is an advance in the march of progress. It is here to stay. We cannot invent restrictions for the benefit of the railroads. We can only apply such regulation and assess such taxes as would be necessary if there were no railroads."

CHEVIGNY ENDS SPRING PRACTICE AT ST. EDWARD'S

Austin, Tex., April 8.—[Special.]—Coach Jack Chevigny, formerly with the Chicago Cardinals, has brought the spring football period to a close at St. Edward's university, Austin. For three weeks the former Notre Dame star, assisted by Bill Pierce, also of Notre Dame, put a group of about 60 men through an intensive session of field work.

FIVE CHICAGO CO-EDS MANAGE ILLINOIS SPORTS

Urbana, Ill., April 8.—[Special.]—Five co-eds from Chicago and suburbs are among the twelve selected by the advisory board of the Woman's Athletic association at the University of Illinois to manage the association's sports events next year, it was announced today. Among those named managers are the following:

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

WOULD ENFORCE TAX.

Chicago, April 2.—I was one of the hundreds who purchased their city and state auto license the first of year, 1933. I am wondering why it is so many owners of cars and trucks are allowed to operate without 1933 tags.

Every other car you meet either has no license or one for 1932. It is not fair to us who comply with the law. If they can afford to run a car or truck, they ought to be able to buy their license. Our city would be lots better off if they would enforce this law. S. P. H.

SHAME OF '32 PLATES.

Chicago, April 3.—I am a loyal city employé who has been payless for five months and never murmured a word about it. I drive an old model T Ford because it takes me where street cars can't. I have no license plates on it because I am loyal to the city and am working without pay, so how in the name of common sense can I pay $18 for my license?

Still, I feel like an outlaw, and am ashamed of myself when I drive about, although I know no judge with common sense would fine me.

So why can't some member of the city council earn himself the gratitude of thousands of city employés by putting over a bill to enable the city and school employés to get their licenses by pay assignments, same as the stores did when they took our future checks because they could wait for the pay day easier than we could?

So let's have some one with a little spunk down in that council put this over. We, the employés, want to be loyal but it's funny feeling like a fugitive being loyal. JOSEPH E. ADAMS,
Municipal Tuberculosis Sanitarium.

PROPOSES PERMANENT LICENSES.

Wheaton, Ill., April 4.—No suggestions have been made in your paper to stop the worry and disregard for the law requiring license plates Jan. 1 of each year. May I make an outline suggestion?

Charge one or two dollars for a permanent license plate and certificate of title; plate to be fastened to the cowl and paint the numbers on the back and front of the car not less than four inches high; plate to be returned to registration bureau when car goes out of existence; to make up the balances of the present revenue a charge of one or two cents per gallon for gasoline.

I believe this would be more equitable to all as each automobile would be paying for the road it uses. P. B. M.

NEW MICHIGAN LIGHTS.

Chicago, April 3.—A progressive system of lights on Michigan avenue enabling traffic to go straight through without a stop is one improvement that ought to be made before the World's Fair opens in June. All that is required is an inexpensive change in the timing systems and any traffic expert will testify to the improvement that will result.
RALPH ERICKSON.

GASOLINE THIEVES.

Chicago, April 2.—The thieves who are stealing gas from cars parked near the Englewood evening high school might at least have the courtesy to replace the cap on the gas tank. In these days of depression the loss of the gas is expensive enough without being forced to buy a new cap each time.

The gas tank on my car has been emptied two nights in succession, despite a change in parking place. Is there any legal protection for an automobile owner who might do serious violence to a thief caught in this act? VICTIM.

THE TAX ON AUTOS.

Lansing, Ill., April 2.—Why so great a burden on the automobile owner? Gasoline taxes per car during the year 1932 netted approximately $48. Besides this we have our state license tax, city vehicle tax, lubricating oil tax, tire tax, original sales tax, etc.

We understand that the petroleum refiner gets only 2 to 3 cents per gallon for gasoline or about two-thirds as much as do the state and federal governments in taxes. It is a wonder that some people doubt the necessity of a government when a commodity is taxed to such an extent?

Why kill the automotive and petroleum industries when they are keeping our wheels going. Just because the other cows have been milked dry, does not mean that "Old Bess" must supply all the milk for our babies in Washington and Springfield. J. A. B.

CERMAK ROAD.

Chicago, April 5.—If the city council had to name a street in honor of our deceased mayor, why didn't they pick out a street that would be an honor to his name? I have occasion to drive down 22d street, now Cermak road, and I believe it's the roughest and bumpiest street in the whole city of Chicago, especially from the city limits to Crawford avenue.

I suggest that the council appropriate funds to put Cermak road in condition and make it a pleasant street to travel on and an honor to his name.
BEN JACKSON.

ABLE COLORED POLICEMAN.

Chicago, April 2.—I drive by the intersection of Canal and Harrison streets two or three times daily, like hundreds of others, and feel that one of us should voice our approval, through your paper, as to the wonderful way the colored traffic officer performs his duties.

I truly believe that some of our traffic officers would learn a great lesson if they would spend a minute at his corner.

Let's give praise where praise is due.
A. W. ALMQUIST.

MIKE LEDING WINS HIGHEST HONORS AT NOTRE DAME

Notre Dame, Ind., April 8.—[Special.]—Mike Leding, Notre Dame left tackle in 1932 won highest scholastic honors in the senior class with an average of 96.5 for four years in the college of engineering, one of the hardest courses offered at Notre Dame, it was announced today.

Leding will receive maxima cum laude honors and probably will deliver the valedictory address. His home is in South Bend.

The following will receive cum laude honors: Ed Kosky, end; Churck Jaskwhich, quarter back; Bernard Cousino, tackle, and Joe Foley, quarter back in football; Arnold Seidl, baseball player; Leo Keating, basketball reserve, and Capt. Fred MacBeth of the track team.

TROLLEYS WOULD HINDER TRAFFIC AT FAIR—KELLY

South Park Board Head Replies to Critics.

Edward J. Kelly, president of the south park board, last week replied to those who have criticized the board as blocking the extension of the Roosevelt road street car tracks into Grant park to the World's Fair entrance.

"In the first place," said Mr. Kelly, "we are without cash even if we were willing to spend tax money for a street car facility that would blot the landscaping and architecture of the lake front and that would interfere with automobile traffic in Michigan avenue and in the outer drives.

Subway Is Needed.

"The Chicago Surface Lines' proposal is for a street extension for their carlines only. Eventually Roosevelt road will be built eastward for motor vehicles. The proper place for street cars in the park in this scheme is underground, in a subway terminal where they will not be an eyesore and where they will not be in the way of pedestrians at large gatherings.

"The traction company's reply to this is that the surface tracks and viaduct over the railroad would be temporary, for use during the Fair pending the permanent improvement of Roosevelt road. Lincoln park has had some experience in granting a temporary permit to the street car company; Lincoln park has been unable to get the company to move its 'temporary' crossing of Lake Shore drive at Chicago avenue.

Cars Would Hamper Traffic.

"The single carline to the World's Fair entrance would be able to carry only an inconsequential portion of the total attendance. And if the crowds are as big as some of the estimates we won't want clumsy, unflexible street cars close to the gates. Bus shuttle lines can change their routes and their schedules to meet conditions.

"It is my personal opinion that the private automobile will be the outstanding means of transportation at the Fair. Folks within a radius of five hundred miles of Chicago will be driving in to visit relatives during the Fair.

Street Signs Installed.

"I expect that the city, Lincoln park, and south park will have the new progressive light control system operating to expedite travel in Michigan avenue. We have installed street signs at five hundred intersections. From Roosevelt road to Randolph street we have erected transparent panels on the safety islands, legible from the driver's seat either in daytime or night. Aged city signs on outlying crossings are being replaced with vitreous enamel markers.

"It's unfortunate that the outer link bridge will not be finished for World's Fair travel. We have hopes of having this work underway during the Fair. As it stands, idle, it is not a good advertisement for the city.

"Our hope is based on the prospect that some contractors, encouraged by the recent break in the economic clouds, will be willing to accept our bonds for work on the job. We're also making another effort to sell the bonds to finance the bridge."

NEWS AND VIEWS

Legalized beer is benefiting the automobile industry. It is estimated that 5,000 trucks and an equal number of passenger cars will be employed in merchandising and distributing the brew when it starts to flow in all wet states. The U. S. department of commerce estimated that $20,000,000 a year will be spent in operating this equipment.

Department of commerce figures on automobile production list 205,678 units for the first two months of 1933 as compared with 200,397 for the same period of 1932. April and May form the heavy sales season for the industry.

Plymouth will soon announce a de luxe six with longer wheel base and a higher price than the current models.

M. J. Lanahan last week announced the appointment of B. P. Sheehan as sales manager of the newly organized M. J. Lanahan, Inc., Dodge and Plymouth dealers in South Michigan avenue.

PARKER DEFEATS SUTTER; MEETS LOTT FOR TITLE

Houston, Tex., April 8.—(AP)—Frankie Parker, brilliant youngster from Milwaukee, upset Clifford Sutter, New Orleans, former intercollegiate champion, today to enter the men's singles finals of the fourth annual Houston invitation tennis tournament.

Parker, 18 years old, won the semifinals match with Sutter, 6-1, 2-6, 6-0, 9-11, 8-6. He plays George Lott of Chicago tomorrow for the invitation championship, won last year by Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex.

Sutter's occasional lapses were costly. The 20 game fourth set was a masterpiece, won by Sutter in a burst of energy about the net.

Miss Bonnie Miller of Los Angeles won the girls' single championship by defeating Miss Genie Sampson of Chicago, 6-1, 6-3.

BADGERS POUND 12 HITS, DEFEAT NORMAL, 11 TO 6

Hammer Goff's Pitches After Slow Start.

Bloomington, Ill., April 8.—[Special.]—The Wisconsin baseball team bunched 12 hits with four errors to defeat State Normal today, 11 to 6. Pim Goff, the starting Normal pitcher, held the Badgers to one hit the first four innings, but ran into trouble in the fifth and seventh.

Wisconsin scored the first run of the game in the second inning when Schendel singled, stole second and came home on an infield error. Normal took a 3-1 lead in the fourth, scoring three runs on Kuhfuss' single, doubles by Van Gundy and Alfred, and singles by Fowler and Goff.

Vascek Leads Hitters.

In Normal's half of the seventh two walks and singles by Fowler and Ahern were good for three runs.

Woolsey of Illinois Aims at Big Ten Mile Record

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Dean Woolsey, University of Illinois senior, without doubt is the best mile runner in the Western conference. Winner of this race in the Big Ten indoor meet recently at the University of Chicago fieldhouse, he finished the indoor campaign with a victory in the Armor Tech relay games.

Woolsey, of course, expects to win the conference outdoor mile in May at Dyche stadium, Northwestern university, but he is more concerned about his time for the distance. Until Henry Brocksmith's spectacular indoor mile in 1932 Woolsey was rated on a par with the Indiana star. Brocksmith was graduated last spring, and while he no longer will be in the field, he left behind some mighty good records which Woolsey would like to surpass.

Then there's the matter of the outdoor conference mile record, which has stood since 1917 and which Brocksmith failed to beat last spring.

Has Victory Over Brocksmith.

Until Brocksmith's 1932 mile record Woolsey had run the fastest indoor mile in Big Ten competition. The Illini star beat Brocksmith a year ago in 4:17.2, but in the 1932 indoor Big Ten games Brocksmith set the present record of 4:12.5, breaking the mark of 4:21.6 which Dale Letts of Chicago had established.

Woolsey failed to beat this mark in the conference indoor meet this year, but he was timed in 4:15.2, which is an indication of what may be expected later on under favorable circumstances. Woolsey's time in the mile at the Armour Tech games was 4:19.7, and he won without competition, Hurd of Michigan State trailing by 50 yards.

Oberlin Man Holds Record.

In 1931 Woolsey finished third in the outdoor conference mile. Leas of Indiana won in 4:18.6, with Kirk of Wisconsin second. Last spring Woolsey was unable to compete outdoors.

The Big Ten record, which has defied all comers for 16 years, was established by Fall of Oberlin college at 4.15.8.

Last year Brocksmith failed to set a new mark when he was forced to run against a strong wind on the back stretch. Brocksmith's time was 4:21.1. The wind that afternoon was so strong that it blew the high hurdle winner, Jack Keller of Ohio State, over the barriers in 14 seconds, two-fifths of a second less than the accepted world record.

Rates Above Abbott.

Woolsey is the best miler Illinois ever has had. And this rates him above such men as Abbott and Mason. He is a native of Maquon, Ill. He is finishing a pre-medic course at the state university. He first reached athletic prominence as one of the Illinois quartet of milers which established a national four mile relay record at the 1931 Kansas relays. Evans, Gould, Carrison, and Woolsey were timed that afternoon under perfect conditions at 17:37.8.

Woolsey is a hard working, conscientious athlete. His teammates like him and he takes as much interest in their success as his own. He is never too busy to tutor a novice. He is a splendid judge of pace and possesses remarkable stamina.

Will Meet Cunningham.

Some time during the outdoor season, at least in the national collegiate track meet at Stagg field in June, if not sooner, Woolsey will meet Glenn Cunningham of Kansas, who ranks as probably the best miler in the country. Cunningham beat Brocksmith last year both in the 1,500 meters and the mile. The time for the two distances was taken during the one race of a mile. This winter Cunningham and Gene Venzke, Pennsylvania's great distance runner, staged a series of brilliant races. Cunningham finished with a victory in the New York Knights of Columbus games in which Venzke was fourth.

Cunningham's great performances are the more remarkable because as a boy of 8 years he was badly burned about the legs in a country schoolhouse fire at his home town of Elkhart, Kas. As a result he does not have normal muscular protection on his leg bones and must train carefully.

OLD TIMERS WIN FOOTBALL GAME AT NOTRE DAME

Notre Dame, Ind., April 8.—[Special.]—The Notre Dame Old Timers football team defeated the Newcomers, 7 to 0, today. The touchdown was scored in two plays.

After the kickoff, Mike Koken passed to Joe Sheeketsi for 25 yards. Then George Melinkovich took a lateral from Koken and ran 40 yards to the goal line. Chuck Jaskwhich kicked the extra point from placement.

The Newcomers made only one serious scoring threat. They had a first down on the one yard line but lost yardage.

ILLINI PRACTICE ENDS.

Champaign, Ill., April 8.—(AP)—Football Coach Bob Zuppke spoks words of encouragement to University of Illinois gridiron followers when he disbanded a 60 man squad after spring drill today.

"It's the best spring practice we've had in three years," the Illini coach said.

SHAUGHNESSY PUTS NEW PEP IN MAROON SQUAD

Five days of coaching by Clark Shaughnessy, the University of Chicago's new football leader, has catapulted the enthusiasm of Maroon players to an all-time high. At the end of the first week of spring practice, yesterday fifty candidates for the 1933 Midway team, including many who had petitioned for the retention of A. A. Stagg as coach, were unanimous in their praise of Shaughnessy.

The turnout for spring drill is more than double that of previous years. "The fellows have a keen spirit," Captain Elect Pete Zimmer said yesterday. "Not a minute is wasted, and the two hours are over in a hurry. Everybody is practicing some specialty. I've learned plenty of football in the last week."

One hour every day is devoted to a blackboard session and every man has a notebook. In the other hour Shaughnessy has found time to run the squad through sixteen new plays, to give them a preview of what the future Maroon tactics will be like, and to run through periods of blocking, tackling and kicking. The first duty of every man is to hit the tackling dummy six times with each shoulder.

Berwanger and Bob Perretz, who captained the Hyde Park High team in 1931 and is now a leading candidate for a guard position, were enthusiastic in their praise of Shaughnessy's methods. Bill Cassels, voted the most valuable Maroon team player in THE TRIBUNE's competition last year, remarked of Shaughnessy, "I've never seen a fellow so full of football."

Local alumni of the University of Chicago will honor Shaughnessy at a dinner to be held early in May. Shaughnessy will be the guest of honor given by University of Minnesota alumni tomorrow at the Mandal tea room.

FOUND

A NEW Economy in Smoking

Yes, smokers of expensive cigars have discovered that White Owl literally cuts their smoking cost in half without the slightest loss of smoking satisfaction.

Their patronage has made White Owl the country's largest selling cigar at 5 cents straight. Over 700,000,000 smoked since its reduction to 5 cents.

Anyone can reduce the price of a cigar, but reduced price and maintained quality is the key to the success of White Owl.

We thank the millions of smokers who have expressed their confidence in our promise that we would never cheapen the quality of White Owl.

We give them this further assurance: For three years our experts have been buying up the choice of each season's tobacco crop, accumulating the greatest store of select leaf ever assembled for a 5-cent cigar.

This is the tobacco you enjoy in the 1933 White Owl. Our vast supply guarantees quality for years to come.

You can BANK on this nation-wide fact: Tens of thousands of smokers of higher priced cigars have found in White Owl real pleasure and a new economy in smoking.

New York, April 8.—Sustained rallies in German loans featured an otherwise prosaic market for bonds on the stock exchange today. The German issues responded to the reassuring statement given by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the Reichsbank, in the matter of continued payments on Germany's commercial debt, with the inference that the bonded debt would perforce be safeguarded.

German government 7s recovered 2½ points during the two hour trading period, and the 5½s 1¼ points. A number of other German issues advanced 1 to 4 points in moderately active trading for a Saturday. Austrian government loans moved up fractionally, as did United Kingdom 5½s, and most of the Belgian government loans. Continued strength in Japanese government bonds was also a feature of the day.

Domestic corporation bond averages failed to show the improvement noted in the foreign list. Advances and declines in the rail issues were about a standoff. The strongest spots in this group included the bonds of the Chicago and Northwestern, Chicago Union Station, the Erie, Union Pacific, and Wabash. Alleghany corporation issues advanced fractionally in fairly active dealings.

In the utilities International Telephone and Telegraph continued to show the best gains of the communications issues, rallying ⅝ of a point to 1½ points. New York Rapid Transit obligations were lightly traded and showed minor price changes. On the week these issues were slightly lower.

ROOSEVELT VIEW ON CONTROL OF SECURITIES TOLD

Committee Reveals Changes in Measure.

Washington, D. C., April 8.—(AP)—The senate banking committee today concluded its long hearings on the administration securities regulation bill after the full weight of President Roosevelt's influence had been thrown behind the principle of its revocation provisions.

Much criticism has been leveled at this section, which authorizes the trade commission to revoke registrations of security issues for various reasons, including misrepresentation and fraud. Opponents have claimed it would hamper the selling of honest issues because buyers would balk, feeling there was a constant threat of revocation.

The legislation, already revised in many particulars, will now undergo further scrutiny in private before it is reported to the senate, while a house interstate commerce subcommittee is redrafting a similar measure at the other end of the capitol.

Reads President's Views.

Ollie M. Butler, commerce department securities expert, reading from a small slip of paper, said:

"I am authorized to say that the President is in favor of the idea of revocation as expressed [in the bill], and he did not attempt to or intend to in his message to congress to cover any more than the general statement regarding the bill."

However, a revised draft of the bill made public today strikes out some of the broad and indefinite grounds for revocation and retains those where the issuer "has been or is about to engage in fraudulent transactions" and where fraudulent misrepresentation is contained in statements to the commission.

Other changes in the new draft provide for application of the proposed law only to new securities, exemption of outstanding issues of bona fide corporations that have been operating a year or more, and reducing the liability of directors for misstatements in the financial reports to be filed with the trade commission.

Other Changes in Bill.

Instead of making all directors of issuing corporations sign statements filed with the commission the revised bill would authorize any director to be excused from signing "for good cause shown," but in all cases at least three-fourths of the directors would have to sign.

The new bill specifically excludes commercial paper, including notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and bankers' acceptances with maturities not exceeding nine months. It also exempts securities issued by mutual building and loan and mutual homestead associations.

The redraft retains the right of a security holder to recover the price paid if he has been defrauded, but eliminates his right to recover damages.

The regulation for foreign securities was altered to make requirements practically the same as those covering domestic stocks and bonds, except that the issuers and underwriters of the foreign loans would be obliged to file, in addition:

"The terms of any collateral agreement, arrangement, or understanding, if any, between the underwriters, or selling agent, or any other person, and the borrower, or any other officer or agent of the borrower, relating to the said loan."

A 1933 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

An old established concern making a line of products thoroughly protected by patents, desires a sales executive. No investment in the factory required, but the executive must have sufficient capital to finance sales nationally. This company has a modern, well equipped plant. Its products are acknowledged by the trade as of superior value. The market appears to have been only scratched, leaving a great opportunity for development. Engineering and production are in capable hands. A big advertising campaign is not involved—only a sound, persistent sales campaign. Here is an opportunity to get in on ground floor terms.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Inflation and deflation talk, combined with uncertainty regarding the outlook for the new winter wheat crop and week-end evening up, resulted in extremely erratic fluctuations in the grain markets yesterday. Local sentiment was bearish early, and wheat dropped around 1 cent and corn 1⅛ cent from Friday's finish before commission house buying and support from holders of bids was sufficient to check the decline.

Later there was aggressive local buying, which brought in short covering, and poor crop reports came from the soft winter wheat states. The early loss was quickly recovered in wheat and largely so in corn, but all grains weakened toward the last on Washington reports indicating that President Roosevelt was opposed to "printing press money."

Wheat closed at intermediate figures, with prices off ⅜ to ⅛ cents from Friday, the May being 57 to 57⅛ cents, July 57¾ to 57⅞ cents, and September 58⅞ cents. Winnipeg lost ⅛ to ⅜ cent for the day, while Liverpool was ⅛ cent lower.

Watch New Wheat Crop.

In come quarters there is a disposition to talk less about possible inflation in the currency and to pay more attention to the outlook for the new wheat crop. The latter is admittedly in very poor condition in the south and southwest, and in the last few days there has been a material increase in the number of poor reports received from the soft wheat states which are regarded as having the best prospects in the country.

A government crop report giving the condition and indicated yield of winter wheat will be issued tomorrow at 2 p. m., and will compare with an indicated yield of 371,000,000 bushels by the recent private returns. The latter show the smallest crop since 1904, while the condition of 61.1 was the lowest on record. Since these returns were compiled, there has been little rain of consequence over the large producing areas, and the trade looks for a bullish official report.

Outside speculative trade in wheat yesterday was fair, with commission houses on both sides of the market. The bulk of the orders was for small amounts. Buying against bids was a factor in checking the early decline.

Corn Shows Small Loss.

Local traders who looked for another sharp break in corn, such as featured Friday's market, were disappointed yesterday. Commission house buying in small lots absorbed the surplus in the pit on an early decline, and net losses for the day were only ¾ cent, with May closing at 32½ cents, July 34⅝ to 34¾ cents, and September 36¼ to 36⅜ cents. Houses with eastern connections were aggressive sellers at times.

The forecast for wet weather, which may further delay the seeding of the new oat crop, failed to have any material effect on that grain. Futures lost ¼ to ½ cent for the day in sympathy with corn, with May finishing at 20⅛ cents and July at 20⅜ to 20½ cents. Rye was off ¼ to ⅜ cent, with May at 45⅜ cents and September at 45⅝ cents. Barley gained ⅛ to ¼ cent, with May at 31⅞ cents and July at 33⅜ cents.

PLEA TO RESTORE 1915 MO. PACIFIC RECEIVER DENIED

St. Louis, April 8.—(AP)—Federal Judge Charles B. Faris today decided that the claims of shippers against the Missouri Pacific railroad for refunds on freight rate charges above those fixed by Missouri state law, in the period 1905-'23, were not preferred claims, but general claims.

He overruled an application filed by a group of shippers holding more than $1,000,000 of such claims, asking for reinstatement of the Missouri Pacific receivership of 1915-'17 and for appointment of a receiver other than L. W. Baldwin, president of the railroad. The railroad recently filed a petition under the newly amended federal bankruptcy law.

OKLAHOMANS FIND WHERE TAX DOLLAR IS SPENT

Survey Gives Facts on Spending.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

A noteworthy piece of work in analyzation of government—state, county and town—has been performed by the chamber of commerce of the state of Oklahoma.

This organization has gone into every phase of Oklahoma government with the purpose of finding where every cent of the taxpayer's dollar goes. It states that its sole desire has been to present in clear simple manner how the wheels of government run so that the citizens may learn whether they are being overcharged for the services rendered by public officials.

The chamber makes it plain that it is not carrying on a reform crusade, it simply proposes "to mobilize business sentiment based on fact analyses and a translation of this sentiment into action for the orderly advancement and conservation of all the resources of the state." It says it will not lobby or make any attempt to influence public officials.

Facts Speak Loudly.

However, perusal of the various studies—which have been assembled in one large volume—should be of great assistance to the citizens of the state paying any attention to the cost of government. These studies compare the debts owed by the various towns, cities, and counties, they compare the cost of government in the various political divisions and they offer suggestions for the improvement of poor financial situations.

One study is titled "Analysis of Valuation and Indebtedness of Counties." There are 6,510 taxing units in the state, exclusive of special benefit districts, etc., and it is held that a scrutiny of affairs in this direction would be valuable in studies on consolidation of governmental units—a measure expected to produce economies in operation.

To make any progress, says the report "we should know what we are worth—our assessed valuation. We should know what we owe—our indebtedness. In other words, we should take an inventory."

Compare Costs of Service.

The chamber asserts that comparison of government costs between units of similar economic status gives the citizens something to go on. Teachers' salaries may amount to one figure in one town and to a much larger one in another. The township commissioners may be asking for far more in one locality than in another. And so on.

"As a rule," says this study, "there is practically no tendency shown by those who make the estimate of government operating costs to economize. In fact, there is a trend in many cases to spending more. It seems that the politicians have not been told we have a depression."

A study titled "Operating Cost of Local Government in Oklahoma" has some pithy remarks about taxpayers and politicians. Government is compared to big business.

"In our present circumstances," says the study, "we face two situations which may arise in our 'big business.'

1. We may be paying for service which we could do without.

2. We may be paying too much for the service which we are getting. In the first instance we are spendthrifts, and in the second we are careless and extravagant. In the first case the cure obviously would be to abolish that which we do not need. In the second the situation is more complicated."

No Economy Without Demand.

Continuing the study remarks:

"The official rarely begins to practice economy until the irate taxpayer demands it. As a rule the political spellbinder who rants about reducing taxes is either doing it from a standpoint of fear or expediencey or both. Worthwhile tax relief will come only through organized study and action by the taxpayer. Our most logical method of tax reform is through legislative action."

The above gives the general tone of the remarks contained in the studies. Countless examples of situations, either good or bad, are cited and the whole is interlarded with tables giving detailed figures on government costs. Some of the reports tell ways whereby government officials, including those of the smallest units, work to saddle debts on the public while operating within the law.

It was the second consecutive week in which car loadings have gained, but the total remained 50,373 cars below the same week last year and 233,264 cars under the corresponding week two years ago. The slump below the level for the last two years was reported by all districts.

Miscellaneous freight loadings for the week of April 1 totaled 175,324 cars, an increase of 13,371 cars above the preceding week, but 17,211 cars under the corresponding week in 1932.

Under Carlots Increase.

Coal loading amounted to 87,650 cars, a decrease of 2,908 cars below the preceding week and 7,131 cars below the corresponding week last year. Coke loading amounted to 3,713 cars, 450 cars below the preceding week and 695 cars below the same week last year.

TRADE INDICES SHOW MODERATE RISING TENDENCY

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Statistics appearing during the last week indicated a slightly rising business tendency, according to Moody's index figures for freight car loadings, electric power production, and steel ingot output.

These index figures are adjusted for seasonal variation — that is, if the change from the previous week should coincide with the normal seasonal change, the index figure would be unchanged.

MILLIONS IN SCRIP THAT COST $40,000 WILL BE BURNED

The $25,000,000 [par value] of clearing house certificates that were hurriedly engraved for the Chicago clearing house association during the bank moratorium are to be taken out of the safe deposit vaults at 120 South La Salle street some time during the next few days and destroyed, according to Howard Sims, manager of the clearing house.

The scrip was engraved at a cost of $40,000 before the announcement from Washington of the issuance of federal reserve bank notes. Knowing that an additional circulating medium would be necessary if the moratorium should last more than a few days the Chicago banks ordered the scrip.

Inasmuch as there is now no possible use of the certificates and the vault rent is expensive, the decision has been made to burn them.

A few samples, however, may be canceled and passed around among bankers as souvenirs of the days "way back when."

Wreck of Akron Won't Change Rates on Flyers' Life Insurance.

The wreck of the airship Akron, in which 73 men perished, will not affect the life insurance rulings on air hazards, it is stated in insurance quarters. Life firms will not figure the Akron deaths in their air risk actuarial tables. Under existing rules lighter than air crafts are not included with regular air craft. Nearly all lighter than air crafts are owned by the government and special insurance is issued to crew members.

Transfer Tax Keeps Low Par Stocks on Most Active List.

The government's stiff transfer tax on stocks of $100 par value is discouraging day-to-day operations in those issues, brokers report. The in-and-out traders or professions are concentrating on the active stocks in the low par value bracket.

It costs $9 in taxes to sell 100 shares of Atchison, a $100 par stock. The same tax applies to United Aircraft, a no par issue. On $50 par stocks such as Anaconda, Atlantic Refining, Pennsylvania railroad and Westinghouse Electric, the tax on 100 shares is $4. Sellers pay $2 on 100 shares of $25 stocks like American Can, Corn Products, Borden and Standard of New Jersey.

The real activity, however, develops in the $5 par stocks which are taxed only 40 cents per 100 shares. In this class are Bendix Aviation, Chrysler, North American Aviation and Aviation corporation.

There are some people who believe that the common stock of Middle West Utilities will be worth something some day. That fact that it is now worth less than the tax and commissions involved in a transfer doesn't scare those who want to take a flier. A recent item in the TRIBUNE giving transfer costs brought two letters to the Chicago Stock Exchange from South Dakota and Texas. One of the letter writers wanted to buy "all he could for $25." The other wanted to get ten shares. Judging from current prices there are plenty of holders willing to sell.

Brewers' Demand for Barley Holds Profit for Farmers

Farmers stand to profit handsomely as the result of legalized beer, which statisticians on the Chicago Board of Trade figure may double the demand for barley suitable for malting purposes.

The price of malting barley has advanced around 10 cents or more a bushel in the last few weeks as the result of the marked increase in activity on the part of brewers. However, trade experts and Chicago maltsters say there is no shortage of malting barley, and they regard such a development between now and the time the new crop is harvested as remote.

See Barley Demand Doubled.

Near beer and kindred products are estimated to have required the use of 20,000,000 to 35,000,000 bushels of malting barley in the last few years. With the return of the 3.2 per cent brand, it is expected that the demand will be sufficient to take care of 60,000,000 to 70,000,000 bushels of this grain.

Following the advent of prohibition there was a marked reduction in the demand for malting barley, and official reports indicate only a little over 30,000,000 bushels were required in 1925 out of a crop of around 218,000,000 bushels. The pre-war demand was sufficient to afford a market for as much as 80,000,000 bushels a year, according to estimates.

A tremendous expansion has occurred in recent years in the barley acreage, the total harvested in 1932 being placed in excess of 13,000,000 acres, or nearly double the pre-war average. Diversified farming in the northwest, where the greater part of the crop is raised, is responsible for the big increase, barley being used there heavily for feeding to live stock.

No Shortage Is Expected.

Leading barley specialists on the Chicago Board of Trade are more inclined to look for a glut of malting barley during the 1933-'34 crop year, rather than any shortage. The total crop last year aggregated 300,000,000 bushels. Of this amount it is figured possibly 25 per cent might have been used for malting purposes if there had been a demand for the grain.

Bill Provides 2 Billions for Small Homes

Washington, D. C., April 8.—President Roosevelt's plan for relieving the mortgage burden of small home owners in cities and villages was practically completed today, following a visit by Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.], to the White House.

Mr. Wagner said the bill, to be offered next week, will provide for a bond issue of two billion dollars, that it will follow the plan set up in the farm mortgage bill, and that the administration of the plan will be put in the hands of the federal home loan bank board, which will be reorganized.

It is expected the board will issue bonds to be exchanged for home mortgages, and while the interest rate to be borne by the mortgagers will not be as low as the 4½ per cent rate fixed in the farm mortgage bill, it is hoped to make it nearly as low.

Maximum Valuation $20,000.

Senator Wagner said, however, that home owners would be able to borrow more proportionately on their properties than the farm owners. The bill will set a maximum of $20,000 present value on properties eligible for this federal relief, and loans will be allowed to from 75 to 80 per cent of the valuation.

The government will guarantee interest payments on the bonds. A period of three years will be allowed during which bonds may be issued.

The activities of the home loan bank board, created under the Hoover administration, have been almost negligible, few loans having been made. In the case of the federal land banks, bonds have been issued to the extent of $1,150,000,000 for relief of farm debtors.

The new bill will be broad enough, Senator Wagner said, to permit banks, finance companies, and private holders of mortgages to exchange their home mortgages for bonds, although in many cases it will be necessary for the holders to write off a portion of the principal to come within the new valuations fixed by the administration.

Discuss Public Works.

Senator Wagner said he had also discussed with the President a general public works project, which is on the program for presentation to this session of congress, and a liberalizing of the Reconstruction Finance corporation's authority to give it wider power in making loans.

The New York senator asserted he believed President Roosevelt would approve a measure for the establishment of federal employment exchanges similar to one sponsored by Mr. Wagner and passed by the last congress, but vetoed by President Hoover.

STEEL INDUSTRY REPORTS SIGNS OF BETTERMENT

Augmented operations in steel mills in the Youngstown district, advances in the prices of heavy melting steel scrap at Pittsburgh, and renewed buying interest in pig iron characterize the current position of the iron and steel industry.

In the Youngstown district, activity of the mills has risen to 17 per cent of capacity, an increase of 1 per cent over the rate in effect at the beginning of last week. Production will be maintained at the higher figure at the beginning of this week.

Heavy melting steel scrap No. 1 sold yesterday in Pittsburgh at $10.50 per ton, representing an advance of 50 cents. No. 2 heavy melting steel scrap has been advanced $1 a ton to $8.50. It is reported that a leading interest has bought several thousand tons of No. 2 at that figure. Trade reports said negotiations at $9 a ton would probably result in a sale.

Foreign Copper Demand Causes New Price Increase

New York, April 8.—(AP)—Continued demand for copper abroad put foreign prices up again today. The range of quotations was 5.35 to 5.425 cents a pound, against 5.15 to 5.25 cents on Friday. Domestic copper, which advanced to 5¼ cents yesterday, held at that figure.

LEADERS URGE KEEPING BAN ON POLICY LOANS

DrawUpUniformSet of Rules for Nation.

A uniform set of regulations providing for a continuation of the present limitations on life insurance policy loans and cash surrender payments was unanimously adopted here yesterday by the National Association of Life Insurance Commissioners, meeting in executive session at the Palmer house.

The report approved incorporates most of the regulations now in force in Illinois and some of those in effect in New York state. The report was in the form of two resolutions prepared by a special committee of five commissioners. The influence of Ernest Palmer, Illinois commissioner and member of the committee, is reflected throughout the report in the number of regulations adopted which are already in effect in this state.

Bars Dividends on Stock.

The report provides the cessation of all dividends to life insurance company stockholders during the period in which the limitations on policyholders' claims are in effect. This rule is now in force in Illinois.

The association is an advisory group, but its recommendations carry great weight. Commissioners from thirty-one states approved the report. The report is recommended as "a guide" to the various states. Early adoption is expected in the states represented at the meeting.

The report makes the moratorium on policy loans and cash surrender payments more sweeping than that now in effect in New York state, where many of the larger companies are located.

Only in cases where the policyholder is in dire need of cash for specified purposes is he allowed to borrow on his policy or surrender it. The regulations provide that the company may advance policy loans of cash surrender payments when the funds are to be used by the policyholder to meet premiums or other obligations to the company.

Conditions of Loans.

Other conditions under which these disbursements may be made are listed as follows:

1. For the purpose of meeting all taxes, and interest or principal payments on mortgages on homesteads, including residences and farms, belonging to policyholder.

2. For the purpose of payment of hospital, medical, and funeral expenses for the immediate members of the assured's family who are dependent on him for support.

On applications pending when the regulations were adopted the company may allow payments after careful examination of circumstances.

The rigid character of the regulations is evidenced by the fact that the New York state regulations which allowed disbursements for "educational and agricultural" purposes were not adopted by the commissioners.

Legality for the regulations is claimed on the grounds that they are imperative for public welfare.

Prospect that the regulations will remain in force at least until June was seen in the fact that the report directed the president of the convention to appoint a committee, to make a further study of the question. The committee is directed to prepare recommendations to be submitted at the June convention to be held in Chicago.

Pay Death Benefits.

The rules do not affect the payment of death claims, annuities and installments on supplementary contracts. No restrictions are placed on loans of less than $100 made to policy holders "in cases of necessity."

Neither do the restrictions apply to funds received by the company in the future either in the form of premiums or deposits. Loans may be made to the full amount of premiums received after the date of the order.

One important provision which was taken from the New York state rules was the rule governing reciprocity. In states where laws or emergency regulations conflict with the recommendations of the association, companies may comply with requirements of the state.

Washington, D. C., April 8.—Income taxes collected in March totaled $180,712,321, a loss of $14,698,502 from the same month in 1932. For the first six days of April $3,781,208 in income taxes were collected, an increase of $632,975 as compared to last year.

While the income tax rates on 1932 incomes, the first installment of which is now being collected, were about double those in effect the year before, the internal revenue department permitted the postponement of filing returns and making the first quarterly payment from March 15 to March 31. Thus a considerable amount of tax was postponed. Most of that postponed will be received the first half of April.

The treasury's deficit April 6 amounted to $1,377,275,607 as compared with $1,951,656,557 a year ago. Receipts were $1,522,762,551, a reduction of $63,426,705 from the July 1-April 6 period last year, and expenditures $2,930,038,158, a decrease of $637,807,655.

Pave Way for Normal Basis in Insurance

BY HOWARD WOOD.

With the adoption yesterday by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners of a uniform policy concerning the moratorium on life insurance company policy loans and cash surrender privileges, the companies now face the second and most important task—the lifting of the moratorium.

From the policyholder's viewpoint the progress made yesterday will not mean much, unless it leads to removal of restrictions. He derives little consolation from the mere knowledge that other policyholders in Syracuse, Birmingham or Hartford are having an equally hard time borrowing on their policies.

Life companies report that since the ban was put on policy loans, the production of new business has fallen off. Realizing that a pickup in production depends upon removing the restrictions, the companies can probably be depended upon to abolish the moratorium at the earliest possible moment.

Forward Step Taken.

Even though it doesn't result in the immediate freeing of policy holders' funds, the step taken yesterday is a decided step forward. For weeks progress toward removing the restrictions has been blocked by lack of agreement between the various states. Now that the foundation has been laid for unanimity of action the job of lifting the lid can be begun.

Because they fear that the sudden removal of all restrictions on loans and cash surrenders might precipitate an avalanche of demands for funds, life insurance companies are expected to insist on a program of gradual raising of limitations so that the return to normal may be accomplished by almost imperceptible degrees.

EFFECTS OF BANK BILL

The two billion dollar guarantee of bank deposits bill to be introduced in congress tomorrow may, if passed, lay the groundwork for another attempt by the federal reserve board to force credit through the commercial banks to business.

A little more than a year ago the federal reserve board at Washington and the directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York conceived the idea of forcing credit through the member banks by what was called "open market operations."

These authorities had perceived that the commercial banks, instead of lending to business men, were investing their funds in United States government bonds. They set about to change that situation by having the federal reserve banks buy large amounts of government bonds.

They figured that if the federal reserve banks would buy government bonds and would manipulate the prices of such bonds so that they would yield almost no return, the member banks, in order to avoid loss, would sell governments and lend more liberally to business.

Scheme Fails to Work.

The scheme never did work. The federal reserve banks bought a billion dollars' worth of government bonds, but the member banks, instead of selling governments, bought even more. With the government running a big deficit and borrowing to plug it up, there were plenty of government bonds for everybody.

The chief reasons, however, for the failure of the plan were two. First, business men whose credit was good weren't borrowing. And, second, the banks preferred to lose money rather than take a chance on making second grade loans. Their main concern was liquidity, to convince depositors, rather than profits to content stockholders.

If, however, congress should pass the two billion deposit guarantee bill, the reserve authorities might find it easier to force banks to lend more liberally. If depositors were completely reassured by the guarantee, banks might not continue to regard liquidity as so all important.

At present banks are even more close fisted with loans than they were before the moratorium.

EXPANDING TRADE SHOWN

Indicative of the increase in sales last week are the figures released yesterday by Eugene M. Stevens, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, showing a 39.7 per cent increase in the total amount of bank checks in this district for the week ended April 5.

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Chicago reserve bank by 124 banks in 37 leading clearing house cities aggregated 756 million dollars, against 541 millions in the preceding week.

This weekly movement of credits, however, was about a third less than for the corresponding week in 1932. Part of the decrease was due to the fact that many banks, particularly in Detroit, are still closed. But another important factor has been the drop in the amount of business done by check because of the two cent federal tax imposed on each check.

West Pullman Bank to Pay Deposits, Quit

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The State Bank of West Pullman, one of the oldest banking institutions on the south side, will pay off its depositors in full beginning tomorrow and will quit business, H. J. Reichwein, president, announced yesterday.

The bank was founded more than forty years ago. It is located at 624 West 120th street, and at the present time has deposits of around $217,000.

Mr. Reichwein stated that directors had voted to liquidate because operation of the business has become unprofitable.

Paid Out 70% of Deposits.

From its peak deposits of $1,550,000 the bank has paid out more than 70 per cent of depositors' claims to the present figure of $217,000. The bank has remained closed since March 3 when the general holiday began.

One Chicago suburban bank was among the five state banks which received licenses yesterday from State Auditor Edward J. Barrett to reopen tomorrow morning. The suburban institution is the Bellwood State bank, Bellwood, which has deposits of $68,000. Downstate banks to receive licenses are:

CLAYTON—Clayton State.
IOLA—Iola State.
CISNE—Cisne State.
GAYS—Farmers State.

Two More Will Reopen.

Two more outlying banks will reopen for normal business this week, according to indications yesterday. One of these, the Mid-City Trust and Savings bank, will resume as a national institution. It will be known as the Mid-City National bank. Reopening will release $2,800,000 of deposits of the old bank.

The other bank, the Howard Avenue Trust and Savings bank, is expected to announce plans for reopening in a day or so. The bank is understood to have raised new money which it set out to get and that only a few legal technicalities remain before unrestricted business can be resumed.

The Western Springs State bank yesterday began a campaign to raise $25,000 in new money needed for reopening.

LUMBERMAN'S MUTUAL SHOWS LIQUID STATUS

More than 60 per cent of the total assets of the Lumberman's Mutual Casualty company are represented by short-term U. S. government securities, cash in banks and accounts receivable, as shown by the balance sheet in the pamphlet report issued yesterday. Total assets are carried at $16,032,000, a new high figure.

The short-term governments, cash and receivables totaled more than 10 millions. This does not include long-term U. S. government securities and other high-grade securities, President James S. Kemper said.

As previously reported, the company had $791,141 premium income last year, the largest in its history. Net surplus increased to $2,236,954. Dividends paid to policyholders totaled $2,726,144, an increase of $215,649 over 1931.

WOODIN STARTS MOVE TO REOPEN CLOSED BANKS

Chicagoan in Charge of Campaign.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 8.—A campaign to reopen 5,000 banks which are still closed was formally launched today by Secretary of the Treasury Woodin and put under the command of Walter J. Cummings of Chicago, president and director of several corporations and a long time friend and business associate of the secretary.

Cummings was appointed executive assistant to Woodin, and what is left of the banking snarl was dumped into his lap for solution. A definite program for freeing the billions in deposits in closed banks has been decided upon, both Woodin and Cummings admitted, but they refused to disclose its nature before talking it over with state banking authorities.

Work on Banking Bill.

Meanwhile at the capitol plans went forward to take up the new Glass-Steagall banking bill with its two billion dollar deposit guarantee fund in the banking committees of both houses on Monday. The bill may be favorably reported out early next week.

First state problem to come under Cummings' attention after his official appointment was the Michigan closed bank question. Gov. Comstock and a delegation were closeted with Cummings and other officials for more than an hour discussing the problem during the morning.

Progress is being made on the so-called Michigan plan, Gov. Comstock said at the end of the morning session. The plan involves the paying out of the liquid part of deposits in closed banks immediately and the redemption of the frozen percentage in bank stocks.

Hold Up Details of Plan.

Woodin and Cummings explained that they were withholding the details of their plans for diplomatic reasons. They did not wish to announce a program which might have to be revised after consultations with state authorities, they said. The plan, moreover, will have to be flexed differently in different states to meet local laws.

In the absence of details it is believed here that many of the distressed state banks will be opened on a full time basis through aid furnished by the Reconstruction Finance corporation under the provisions of the emergency banking act. This aid has taken the form of having the corporation match dollar for dollar in private subscriptions for new and preferred capital stock.

Get Money to Depositors.

"We feel that there must be some relief from the tension caused by the failure of many state institutions to reopen," Woodin said today, adding that in some communities there were no banking facilities within a radius of 75 miles. The chief problem at this time is to get the money to the depositors.

"Bank reopenings have been going on in a surprisingly rapid way," he said, "and our plan will simply augment the honest efforts being made in the communities where banking conditions have been impaired."

Cummings is said to have been drafted to fill his new position. Coming to Washington with Woodin on a visit, he was thrust into official work by his friend, who leaned heavily on him during the banking crisis.

Many positions have been offered to him, it is said at the treasury, but he chose one which may be of temporary nature. Friends quote him as saying jokingly that he prefers to hold his position on the Lincoln park board, to which Gov. Horner recently appointed him, than to preside over the restoration of the banking structure.

Cummings Heads Five Firms.

Mr. Cummings is a director or officer in eight corporations, almost all of which have their central offices or a branch in Chicago. He is president of five corporations, the Cummings Car and Coach Company of Chicago. The Des Moines and Central Iowa Railroad of Des Moines, Ia., the Gary Railways Company of Gary, Ind., the Chicago and Calumet District Transit company and the Chicago and West Towns Railway Company of Chicago.

In addition he is chairman of the board of the Des Moines Railway Company of Des Moines, director and vice president of the J. G. Brill Company of Philadelphia and a director of the Brill Corporation of New York.

He says his business is manufacturing and that he is an owner and operator of electric railways. He maintains an office in the Harris Trust building in Chicago and lives at 820 Kenesaw terrace.

SHORT COVERING PUSHES PRICES OF STOCKS HIGHER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 8.—A flurry of short covering in the last thirty minutes or so of trading enabled the stock market to end the week with a becoming flourish today. Leading issues hopped up from a fraction to more than a point with steel and railroad shares setting the example.

The market has been trying all week to muster energy for something like a sustained rally and today's demonstration was accepted as evidence that it is ready to carry on with any sort of a break in the news.

Brokers believe that the growing agitation for inflation through revaluation of the dollar is at the bottom of much of the current buying. Certainly they say the speculation in commodities is based on this prospect.

Consider Deflation News.

It is generally agreed that cheaper money would make for a rise in stock market prices but qualified observers say sentiment in the street is just as strongly for sound money now as it ever was. However, speculation on the possibility seems to be gaining scope gradually. Low priced issues in particular are benefiting from the discussion.

The gold mining group is receiving the lion's share of attention in the move. Homestake Mining has been mounting to one new high record after another all week. It touched 197 today on a jump of four points, but later fell back to its previous closing level. Alaska Juneau also moved ahead on brisk turnover but likewise eased toward the close.

Carloadings Help Rails.

Railroad issues received some stimulus from the weekly carloading figures showing a gain in freight revenue for the third successive week. Union Pacific, Atchison, Lousiville and Nashville and others finished 1 to 2 points higher. Talk of impending receiverships for other roads has subsided sharply since the exposure of the Chicago and North Western canard earlier in the week.

The steel group was again active and strong with Bethlehem, Republic and others sharing favor with the old bellwether of the group, United States Steel. This department of the market has had its best week of the year, thanks to statistics indicating somewhat better times immediately ahead for the industry.

The public utilities also made a better showing.

A feature on the down side was Woolworth, which sold down to a new low for the year. Weakness in this merchandise issue was ascribed to dividend fears.

R.F.C. HEAD HOPES DETROIT BANKS CAN PAY 30% SOON

Washington, D. C., April 8.—(AP)—Jesse Jones, a director of the Reconstruction corporation, announced tonight that he hoped for an early distribution of 30 per cent of the deposits of the First National bank and the Guardian National bank in Detroit—now being merged into the National Bank of Detroit—in addition to the 10 per cent distribution already made.

In an informal statement Jones said that both the directors of the corporation and Secretary Woodin had hoped the next distribution could be 42 per cent, but that this now "appears impracticable without too much delay."

"Therefore," he said, "it has been suggested to the controller of the currency that he authorize the conservators of the First National and Guardian banks to conclude sales to the National Bank of Detroit of such of the assets of the two old institutions as the new bank is willing to purchase at this time, and to use the proceeds and the money to be obtained from the Reconstruction Finance corporation through loans to the old banks in promptly making the largest distribution possible."

The officers and directors of the new bank, he explained, have been going over the assets to be acquired from the old banks. He added that, although this had caused some delay, it had been considered necessary to give as much care to it as possible.

"The National Bank of Detroit," he said, "must be not only sound but liquid, and to that end its officers and directors given a free hand as to the character of assets to be purchased."

Guaranty Trust Plans to Divorce Security Affiliate

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 8.—The Guaranty Trust company is making plans to divorce its security affiliate, the Guaranty company, it was learned today. Of two plans under consideration by the concern, one provides for the liquidation of the Guaranty company and the transfer of a skeleton force of its employés to the bank as a bond department.

PRIEST DEMANDS CLEVELAND BANK FAILURE INQUIRY

Cleveland, O., April 8.—Support for the projected new First National bank, to be formed from the liquid assets of the Union Trust company and the Guardian Trust company, but a complete investigation to determine the cause of the failure of the two old banks, were asked here today by Auxiliary Bishop James A. MacFadden of the Cleveland Catholic diocese, a member of the reorganization committee of the Guardian. He revealed that he had refused to sign the prospectus for the new bank.

"I told the authorities," he said at a semi-public meeting of the depositor's association, "that as a bishop I could not sign the prospectus for a new bank, that my job was to represent the human side of the situation. I have held that the problems of this community could not be settled by a 20 per cent payment to the Guardian depositors. I believe the depositors can go above the Reconstruction Finance corporation to a government which has offered a new deal, and feel that they can expect that new deal to help your cause."

The Union and Guardian had ceased to exist as going banks with the entrance at noon, the close of the day's business, of their newly appointed conservators. Meanwhile, plans for the marketing, beginning Monday, of $5,000,000 worth of common stock in the new First National were being completed. The R. F. C. is to match the capital with $5,000,000 of preferred stock subscriptions.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was unchanged today. Local refiners showed no interest above 3.00c, but while offerings were a little more liberal they were generally held at 3.05c. Sales were reported of 28,000 bags of Porto Rican for prompt shipment to an outport refiner at 3.05c, unchanged from the last previous sale. Futures were a little easier with the market closing 1 to 2 points net lower. The more liberal offerings in the spot market seemed to check fresh buying, and after opening unchanged to 2 points lower the market showed little variation during the balance of the session with final prices at about the lowest. The selling seemed to come through houses with producing connections, and this together with profit taking was sufficient to ease prices. Sales, 14,450 tons. Prices follow:

CHILE TO RAISE MORE WHEAT TO END IMPORTING

TEMUCO, Chile.—(AP)—Under government supervision, the acreage of wheat will be doubled within the next few seasons. The government is determined that Chile cease foreign purchases of wheat, which are a drain on a decreasing gold reserve, and that the shortage be turned into an exportable surplus.

Harvesting of this year's crop shows a slight official shortage, which will make necessary the purchase of Argentine wheat. Quarters outside the government claim, however, that no shortage exists. Many farmers have returned to old methods, using horses, oxen, and hand power instead of tractors.

The increasing of wheat acreage is part of the government's land colonization scheme, which has as its goal the ultimate elimination of unemployment. Land not now cultivated will be given over to coöperatives, collectives, and individual tracts, and much of this area will be sown to wheat.

MEN—MONDAY!

If you call Monday between 9 a. m. and 1 p. m. you will have found a wholly new prospect in life. First of all we do not have anything for downtrodden, discouraged or forgotten men, but only for the DETERMINED, ALERT type who believe that PERMANENT INDEPENDENCE merits a full day's honest work, day after day. We wish men who are interested in growing incomes, paid weekly, without any investment, deposit or purchase. This large company successfully transacts business world-wide and leads wherever its products are known. Throughout the period of the depression it has gained constantly, creating one new record sales month after another and one record sales year after another.

There are many men in this business succeeding consistently—regularly; many who are increasing their incomes. V. J. C., formerly an upholsterer, who has made as high as $200 in a single day in this business, enjoys regularly good pay checks. Here are two recent weekly checks—one for $89 and one for $97. F. W., formerly a plasterer, received $70 and the next week $85. Many men make $20 or more in a day. S. T. made $45 in one day—and these men newly started in the business have shown good earnings right at the outset: J. U., J. S., G. T. C., F. G. H., A. McE., and many others. These are not picked specimens of earnings, but merely samples taken from many pay checks. Some men make but $25 their first week, or maybe only that much a week for their first few weeks; others start right out with nearly double that income.

If you have responsibilities and wish to secure something that will last, that is not governed by seasons or layoffs; if you wish to work 52 weeks in every year and are not controlled by weather, storms, or anything else, then we will give you such opportunity as we believe you can take care of. If you can CLICK we will make a place for you and have successful men train you. Be here between 9 to 1, Monday, April 10. Call at Room 329 Madison-Kedzie Bldg., 9 S. Kedzie-av.

MEN.

WE WILL SIGN UP 8 ADDITIONAL MEN IMMEDIATELY AT OUR LOCAL BRANCH, WHO WILL UNDERTAKE A FIVE-YEAR PROGRAM OF EARNINGS AT $34.00 PER WEEK, WITH ADDITIONAL CASH PROFITS IN SAVINGS FOR THE FIVE-YEAR PERIOD OF $9,600.00.

This program of earnings and savings is something entirely new. It is a definite and practical plan for the man who wishes to cover the overhead expenses of himself and his family each week and save a substantial additional profit. It is to such men we offer this opportunity. We prefer married men with established homes they must maintain. This is a permanent arrangement and we are not looking for the man who is not serious-minded about his future and about getting ahead in an honest, industrious manner.

You cannot make money here unless you earn it. But if you are capable of understanding and following instructions and if you are one who likes to practice to gain skill and judgment in what he does, and if you are a worker willing to pay a working price for success, then we recommend that you come in Monday morning for an interview. It costs nothing to try. The training is free. We will furnish full equipment with no deposit required. There is no expense.

While this is specialty sales work, yet the men selected need not have had any previous sales experience. If you have adaptability and an earnest desire to learn the business and get ahead in it, we can give you the information and teach you all the methods necessary to success, quickly.

We require men to be of good reputation, active and alert. This is a straightforward offer of sincere intent to worthy men who are in need of good, substantial positions. We have tried to state the facts and requirements clearly. Please do not apply for these positions unless you feel you can meet the requirements. Applicants will be personally interviewed Monday morning, April 10, at 9 to 1, at 430 Hyde Park Bank Bldg., 53d and Lake Park-av.

MEN

Will place a few ambitious men, 25 to 45, neatly dressed, married preferred, who own a car. This is a permanent connection and only men who can devote full time considered. Those selected will be given every co-operation with protected territory and leads furnished. Advancement guaranteed right men. For appointment see Mr. Briese, Employment Dept., 7th floor, Monday morning, 9 to 10 only.

ONE THING THAT Doesn't "Go Out"

Fads may come and fads may go, but the vogue of period furniture is lasting. Why? Because it's fundamentally right—both comfortable and good to look at. Contrasting with the exquisite early American furnishings here is the ultra-modern built in radio found in each apt. Near lake and beach. Half block to L Solarium for use of guests. Full hotel service. BEDROOM APTS. AS LOW AS $60.

Tremendous Savings

HUDSON 8, 1932 4-DOOR SEDAN. This was the personal car of the president of this company and has had but slight service. The mileage is truly negligible. It is finished in a beautiful special shade of light brown, with upholstery to match. Both front and rear seats are adjustable and its equipment includes 5 wire wheels, 2 cowl ventilators, chromium side light. Has Hudson's 101 horse power engine, Duoflo engine oiling system, ride control, selective free wheeling, airplane type instruments, startix, eye-level instrument panel, diagonal truss-frame. The body is rattle proof. If you would avail yourself of this distinctive motor car we suggest you see and drive it. If you act quickly you can effect a substantial saving as compared with its price new.

ESSEX PACEMAKER, 1932 4-DOOR SEDAN. Another unheard-of value. This, likewise, is an Executive's car, having been personally driven by our Sales Manager. From an appearance standpoint it is so good it could be placed on the floor and it would pass for new. Its mechanical condition is absolutely "new," that is, it's hardly "broken in." Finished in a beautiful brilliant green, with olive cord upholstery. Complete equipment includes 5 demountable wood wheels, eye-level instrument panel, ride control, synchro-mesh transmission. Come in and take a long ride in this car. Feel the silent power of its 70 h. p. Hudson-built engine. You'll like the startix that cranks the engine, its selective, free wheeling, the remarkable ease of handling. It's available now at a real savings. It will pay you to get our low figure on this car.

ESSEX TERRAPLANE 4-DOOR SEDAN, 1932. This beautiful highly-spirited motor car is one that will appeal instantly upon inspection. Finished in the very newest Opal-Essence blue, the latest development in automobile finishes, and its 5 wire wheels are aluminum finished. One of our sales executives used it for a Show Car, consequently its mileage is truly negligible. Its entire mechanical condition is covered by our warranty and service. This is your opportunity to save money and obtain a very stylish closed car whose performance abilities will startle you. Come in and talk it over. Observe our attractive price and figure for yourself if you can afford to pass up a bargain such as this.

COTTON RANGE IS NARROW ON WEEK-END EVENING UP

Sufficient realizing and scattered liquidation for the week-end kept the movement of cotton prices within a range of less than 10 points. At one time prices were slightly higher and at an other time slightly lower.

At the close futures in Chicago were 3 points net lower to 1 point higher. Other markets were unsettled. New York futures closed unchanged to ½c lower and spots were without change at 6.55c. New Orleans futures was 1 to 4 points net higher, with spots unchanged at 6.45c; Galveston, 6.45c, and Houston, 6.40c. Liverpool closed 4 points net lower.

Trade development in the main attracted little attention and the volume of business was not heavy. Uncertainty as to the fate of the farm bill, which comes up Monday, is causing considerable trade comment. Currency inflation is regarded as likely to bring increased buying and possibly higher prices. Weather conditions generally favorable. Prices follow:

PRICES OF HOGS DECLINE DESPITE SMALL RECEIPTS

Doubts Over Farm Relief Plans Blamed.

Hog prices lagged again on the week-end session. The top price dropped 15 cents to $3.80, while the daily average cost went down 5 cents to $3.60. These prices showed losses of 20 to 30 cents compared with a week ago, and are 50 to 60 cents under the high point two weeks ago.

Large local packers cleaned up the meager available supply, but it was evident from their attitude that buying orders were short. Hogs have had a poor week. They were under pressure most of the time during the last half of the period and finished the week at the lowest levels since March 2.

Statistically the hog market is in a strong position. Available supplies are running light for this season of year, and early reports on the spring pig crop are bullish. According to all news from the country, the cold damp weather and lack of sufficient supplementary feeds have resulted in unusually high mortality in the new crop of early spring pigs.

Blame Farm Bill Uncertainty.

Members of the trade blame the uncertainty regarding the farm relief program for the present weakness in hogs. They are somewhat concerned about the possible influence that passage of the bill may have on immediate hog receipts. Many are of the opinion that it will have little or no immediate effect. In the first place, they point out, it is very doubtful if the majority of hog raisers understand the bill.

Men in the trade frankly admit their own conception of it is not very illuminating. So far as its influence on the movement of supplies for next month is concerned, much depends on the producers' own interpretation of the bill. Whether its passage is likely to shut off the receipts for a time, or accelerate the movement before it is enforced as a law, depends almost entirely on the producers' attitude regarding the possibilities of the program being workable.

Opinions Are Varied.

Opinions differ a great deal. "Those who have little confidence in the new plan regarding hogs may be anxious to unload before it is enforced," was the expressed opinion of one of the prominent commission men. On the other hand, a packer representative believes the producers may heed the packers' widespread warning that immediately after the passage of the bill there is likely to be a marked narrowing of consumer demand for meats which are subjected to the government tax.

The danger of an accumulation of live hogs on the market calls for the utmost caution on the producers' part, this packer stated. Some believe the movement may be retarded, pending further developments in the President's program, should be bill pass the senate, particularly since hogs have been slipping back in price.

Cattle and Lambs Do Better.

While conditions in the cattle and lamb markets were very unsettled last week, the close in these two species was more satisfactory than in swine. Prices at the finish in some instances were substantially above the low points of the week.

Trading in the cattle alleys showed good action during the last half of the week. Lamb prices touched an attractively low level in midweek, but later swung abruptly into one of the strongest rallies of the season on a buying wave, to close 25 to 50 cents above the low spot.

The averages in both cattle and lambs for the six day period, however, were lower than the preceding week and not much above the lowest point in many years. Cattle averaged $4.80 and lambs $5.15. A week ago the cattle average was $4 and lambs $5.40.

One encouraging sign in the cattle trade is the improvement in the demand for replacement cattle in the last three weeks. Taking the financial crisis of the last month into consideration, with some country banks not yet reopened, buying of stockers and feeders has held up well.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 11,000 cattle, 30,000 hogs, and 16,000 sheep, against 11,066 cattle, 31,896 hogs, and 19,406 sheep a week ago, and 15,260 cattle, 38,611 hogs, and 14,650 sheep for the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 35,000 cattle, 115,000 hogs, and 80,000 sheep, against 40,869 cattle, 122,162 hogs, and 88,427 sheep a year ago and 45,524 cattle, 123,777 hogs, and 82,281 sheep two years ago.

BUTTER AND EGGS STEADY

Butter and egg futures were quiet and steady on the Chicago mercantile exchange yesterday. Butter closed unchanged and eggs unchanged to ¼c lower. October eggs opened firm but failed to hold the advance. New selling appeared and the market dropped back. Buying was better at the close. The four markets moved in 9,000 cases more eggs than last year. There was a light trade in butter. The four markets continued to show a more favorable movement of stocks than last year, cutting the surplus 58,000 lbs. Sales—Butter, 5 cars; eggs, 22 cars. Prices follow:

How Good Is a Quotation?

"What an ethereal thing a stock or bond quotation is, after all," remarked a trader the other day. "Often it exists only because nobody tries to exercise it. Try to take advantage of a stock quotation by selling or buying more than a few shares of stock or a bond quotation by buying or selling more than one or two bonds and the chances are the quotation will go jumping all over the board."

Houses sponsoring a particular stock frequently keep the price of that stock from wavering by "maintaining a market" for it. That means that they keep a bid price in the market and take offerings at that price or below. Or, they may prevent a stock's rising too rapidly in price by selling when the price gets above the level at which they desire to have it. Markets for bonds may be maintained the same way.

During 1928 and 1929 when there was a tremendous volume of new offerings of stocks and bonds, almost every issue had its sponsors.

Sometimes they were successful; sometimes not. In a violently fluctuating market a particularly active stock or bond may get out of control. Also, the ability of the sponsor to control the price of a security is limited by his resources. If he's trying to hold up the price of a sagging stock or bond when holders are selling heavily he can last only as long as he has the money and inclination to purchase all offerings.

In looking at the quoted price of a security it is well to take into consideration the volume of trading upon which the price is based. If it represents only a few small sales it doesn't mean much. The sales may have been put through by interested individuals purely for the purpose of having these quotations appear in print.

Frequently, too, quotations are published where no transactions whatever have taken place, merely the bid and asked prices being listed as a guide to traders and investors. This is often true of unlisted stocks and bonds which are traded "over the counter."

A good illustration of deceptive quotations may be found in the case of real estate mortgage bonds. In boom times such bonds were almost all quoted at prices in the high nineties. These prices were artificial. They were usually backed up by the house that quoted them, but this support was due almost entirely to the fact that very few investors were trying to resell their bonds. When the break came and real estate bondholders tried to sell, they discovered that the "marketability" of such bonds was more theoretical than real.

LARD HAS EASIER TONE

A marked falling off in buying of lard and a generally slow market with packers' hedging sales sufficient to supply all demands of buyers and create an easier tone featured the market, and the close was unchanged to 2½ cents net lower. The only trading of consequence was in September.

Spot lard prices were steady at $4.17½ for regular, $3.62½ for loose and leaf. Pork loins were 7 to 8½ cents, with a moderate business. Cash trade in the main was only fair. There was no change in prices for May bellies which were quoted at $4.27½, and cash lots were unchanged at $5.12½.

Liverpool lard was 3 to 6d lower, and export clearances only 5,600 pounds. Packing in Chicago since March 1 aggregates 630,000 hogs as compared with 618,000 for the same time last year. Prices follow:

BRABNER-SMITH URGES CAUTION IN DECIDING

Warns Against Greed and Ignorance.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Self-appointed bondholders' committees made up of ex-bankers, ex-bond house presidents, ex-contractors, and various other ex's, whose main idea seems to be high speed forced liquidation of the properties for bondholders who don't want to become property owners were severely condemned by Assistant Attorney General John W. Brabner-Smith in a recent talk entitled, "Shall I Deposit My Real Estate Bonds?"

JOHN W. BRABNER-SMITH.

The speaker said that no one can definitely answer the question "Shall I deposit?" without an extensive study of each particular issue. But he adds that there are certain simple tests which every bondholder should make before depositing. Here they are:

"First, ask whether the members of the committee are original holders of bonds of the property in which you are interested. If so, you can throw in your lot with them with assurance. The interests of such a committee are the same as yours. The results accomplished by such committees amply justify this statement, although they may not always have been successful. In the same class we can place committees formed by the very few institutions who used care in placing mortgage loans, and who have a good reputation to protect for the future, such as Baird & Warner, Draper & Kramer, and a few local banks.

Conflicting Interests.

"The second question the bondholder should ask is, "Does any member of the committee have any interest which may conflict with that of the bondholders?'

"A committee member may have various interests which conflict with those of the bondholders.

"A third test is to determine whether its members have had actual and thorough experience in the reorganization of properties.

"A fourth test is, Who are counsel for the committee? What has been their previous reorganization experience? Do they have an irreproachable reputation in the community? How did they obtain their position as counsel for the bondholders? Were they chosen by unbiased committee members after a thorough search for experienced and impartial counsel?

Keep Fees in Mind.

"Bear in mind that the fees of the attorneys are a large part of the reorganization expense; that attorneys have the leading rôle in creating the reorganization plan.

"Finally, the bondholder may say, 'If I don't deposit my bonds the committee says I'll be shut out for a very small sum—5 or 10 cents on the dollar—and my bonds are worth much more than that, according to the value of the property.'

"This bondholder should be informed that he cannot be shut out of participation in the reorganization even after the sale. He cannot be forced to agree to placing the future management of the property in the hands of members of a protective committee who have no interest in the property, where the only alternative is to accept a nominal and prearranged bid of 10 cents on the dollar for his bonds.

Here's Court Ruling.

"This principle has been stated by our courts in the following emphatic language, an answer to the argument that a bondholder who stays out of a reorganization does so at the peril of being forced to accept the committee's bid for the property, no matter how low:

"'This would leave the reorganization committee the power to oppress the bondholder in any or all of three ways—by denying admission, by imposing unconscionable conditions, or by purchasing without regard to value.

"'In other words, when a reorganization committee has offered what in the light of the security holder's rights under the mortgage is not a fair plan, the refusal of a bondholder to accept it is not an equity chargeable against him when he seeks to object to the judicial sale, but the court will accord such bondholder a hearing to ascertain whether there has been a fair sale.'"

Raps Forced Liquidation.

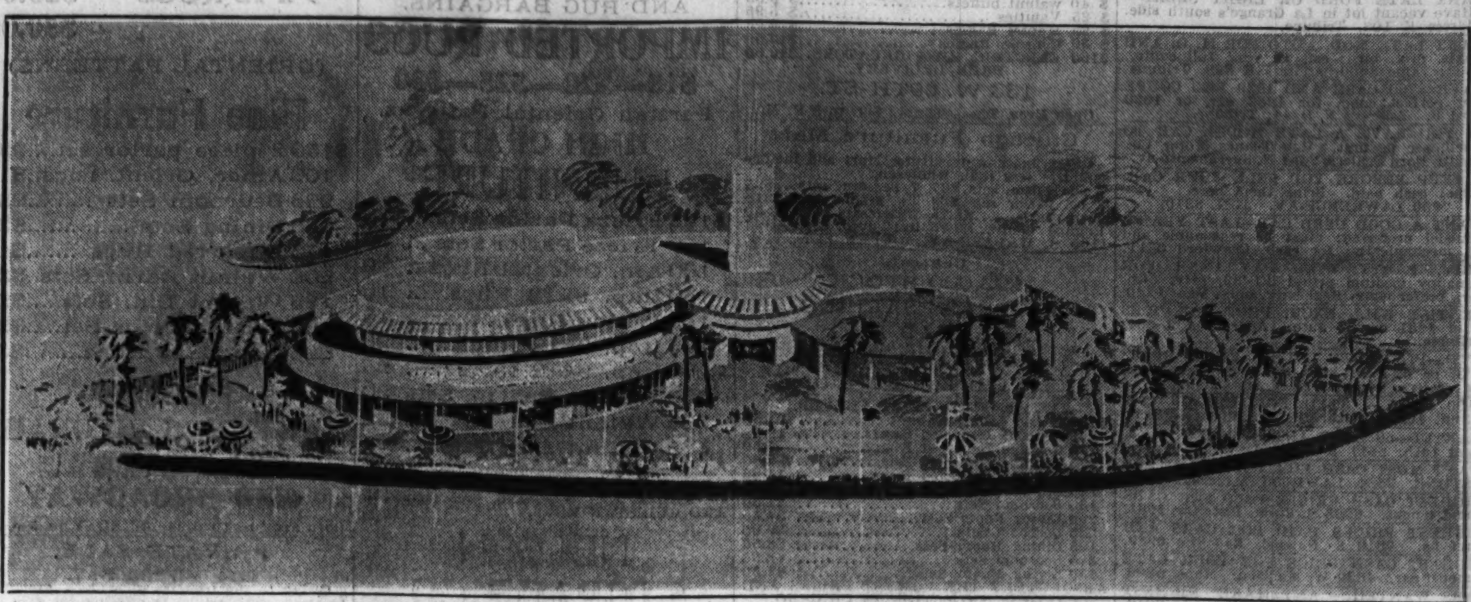
In his peroration Mr. Brabner-Smith had this to say regarding forced liquidation: "Finally, all reorganizations are based on the assumption that times will get better and the bondholders eventually will be able to sell the property for cash. Any reorganization based on the assumption that bondholders wish to be property owners is false in theory and in fact.

"If it's correct that the property eventually will be disposed of to outsiders for cash, why not hold up the foreclosure sale and allow this cash to purchase the property at the foreclosure sale, rather than to go through another sale in the future? And, if times do not get better, the committee members will never live down their action in allowing themselves and their attorneys to take the cream of what was left of the property in cash, leaving to the old bondholders worthless second mortgage notes or voting trust certificates."

Kaufman Mfg. Co. Leases Space at 234 S. Franklin

The Kaufman Manufacturing company, in the clothing business since 1874, has leased the entire third floor of the 234 South Franklin street building. Jack Rissman & Co. were brokers for the lessee and Livingston W. Fargo, trustee for the lessor.

THE FAIR'S LARGEST CAFE—PABST BLUE RIBBON CASINO



The above Pabst Blue Ribbon Casino is to be erected at the south end of Northerly island, adjoining "Hollywood-at-the-Fair," from plans by Holabird & Root. It is sponsored by the Premier-Pabst Sales company, a subsidiary of the Pabst Brewing company of Milwaukee, and will be operated by College Inn Management, Inc., identified with Hotel Sherman interests. The catering (except for the 3.2 per cent) and the entertainment will be supplied by the College Inn group. Ben Bernie's orchestra and two other nationally known bands are to give afternoon and evening concerts. In addition to a 700 seat casino and dance floor there'll be a summer garden, bar, etc., where prices, it is claimed, will be moderate.

The total seating capacity, according to Ernest Byfield, will be 3,500, which will make it the largest café at A Century of Progress. Mr. Byfield also claims it'll be the most elaborate. A revolving band stand is contemplated. In the penthouse of the Casino unit will be housed the Century club, which will utilize the café catering service.

Originally this was called the Hollywood café and was to have been part of the "Hollywood-at-the-Fair" project which was reported recently to be defunct (the original promoters having faded out of the picture) but which has been revived along somewhat different lines. The R. C. A. institutes have been invited by the World's Fair to make amateur sound pictures at Hollywood.

CHAS. J. WHIPPLE MADE DIRECTOR IN REALTY FIRM

Charles J. Whipple, president of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., has been elected to the board of directors of the real estate firm of Swan, Lorish & Caspers, Inc., it was announced last night. According to a member of the firm it is believed that this association of the head of a large corporation outside the realm of real estate with a management concern is without precedent in Chicago realty circles.

CHARLES J. WHIPPLE.

Commenting on his affiliation with the Swan, Lorish & Caspers organization, Mr. Whipple said:

"I am firmly convinced that there could be no more propitious time than the present to become identified with the real estate business in Chicago. It is my observation that various factors operating in the present market indicate a definitely firmer trend."

Mr. Whipple, who in January was elected to the directorate of the First National bank, is also a director of the Chicago Railways company. In 1908 he entered the $10,000,000 hardware firm of which he is president, as salesman, advancing through the posts of superintendent, general manager and vice president to the head of the concern in 1926.

PREDICTS END OF CONCESSIONS, RENT DODGING

Elimination of concession granting and rent dodging are objects sought by the newly formed South Side Renting Men's association, according to H. W. Emme of Glatt & Price, who is vice president.

"Rents at the present time are at their lowest level and with the concession evil eliminated and with a concentrated effort to do away with nonrent paying tenants, apartment rentals should and will be on the upturn," said Mr. Emme yesterday.

"The South Side Renting Men's association will take a definite stand against granting concessions and also will coöperate to eliminate the tenant who moves from apartment to apartment leaving in his wake a flock of unpaid rent bills. The credit bureau, which the association is installing, will prevent, to a great extent, a tenant of this character from renenting.

"Property managers estimate that hundreds of thousands of dollars have been lost in uncollected rents which could have been used to save a number of owners from losing their properties."

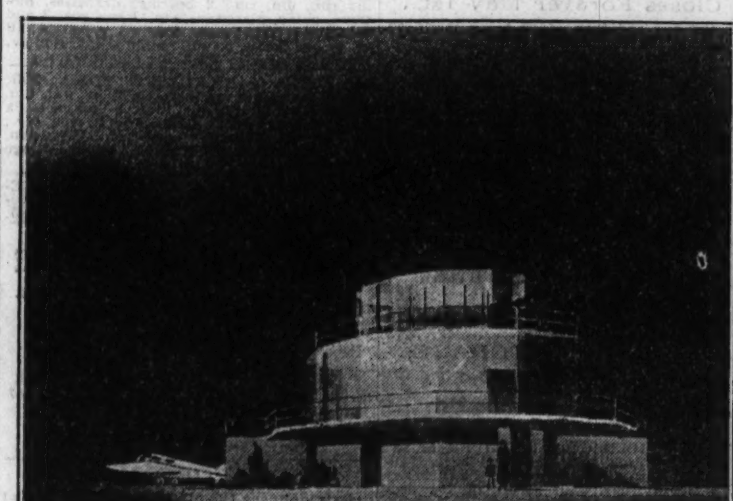
Wreckers to Clear the Way for New Parking Station

High taxes on old buildings which no longer can attract tenants have forced the Newberry library and Miss Kate L. Candee to have their properties on the east side of Wells between Austin and Kinzie wrecked to make way for a parking station. The space, comprising 34,000 square feet, fronts 106 feet on Austin, and more than 200 feet on both Wells and Kinzie. It has been leased to R. G. Lydy for his twenty-second station. Albert H. Wetten & Co. and C. F. Durland & Co. were brokers.

Illinois Auto Club Rents Oak Park Branch Quarters

Carl A. Barrett, president of the Illinois Automobile club, announces that his organization has leased space at 502 South Oak Park avenue, Oak Park, in the building at the corner of Madison, for three years, to be used as a branch of the club. C. M. Hogue & Co. were brokers.

"THE HOUSE OF TOMORROW"



George Fred Keck of 612 North Michigan avenue is architect of the above "House of Tomorrow," work on which has just started at A Century of Progress on the lake shore, across the drive from the big Home Planning hall and the home and industrial arts group. This is a twelve sided unit, of steel frame, with plate glass sides and many unusual features. It'll be erected by Century Homes, Inc. More is told in another column on this page.

When Taxes Climb from $5.46 to $19,000, Time for Wreckers

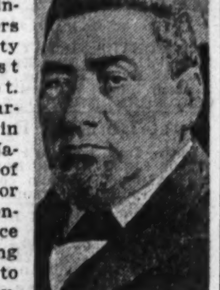
When taxes climb from $5.46 in 1852 to $19,000 in 1931—and the income doesn't begin to pay the $19,000—then it's time to call in the wreckers, in the opinion of the owners of the property at 158-66 West Adams street. This 66x200 parcel, bought in 1927 by the National Bank of the Republic for a proposed extension of its office building adjoining on the east, is to have its fifty-eight year old improvements torn down by the Goldman Wrecking company beginning May 1.



LEOPOLD MAYER.

Thirty days later the cleared space will be turned over to the Down Town Parking Stations, Inc., who have leased it for a yearly rental more than enough to pay the taxes, according to John T. Redmond, manager of the property.

Buys Four Room Cottage.

Leopold Mayer, grandfather of Edwin B. Mayer of the law firm of Altheimer, Mayer, Woods & Smith, of 10 South La Salle street, came to Chicago in 1850 at the age of 23. Three years later he married, and soon after bought a four room cottage on a lot 66x200 at what is now 158-66 West Adams. Fortunately they moved to Wabash and 33d, just before the great fire wiped out their honeymoon cottage.

In 1875 Mr. Mayer built four story and six story buildings on the site of the burned house. These were for a time used as a hotel, with a printing establishment in the rear. In 1907 the interior burned and only the front walls were left standing. They were rebuilt as they stand today. The upper floors have been vacant for some time.

Swept Away by Fire.

The banking house of Leopold Mayer & Son was established in 1855 under the name of Lull & Mayer. It was swept away by the fire of 1871. His son, Nathaniel A. Mayer, father of Edwin B. Mayer, then became his partner and the business was reestablished. It became one of the largest and most successful of Chicago's private banks.

In 1900 it was merged with the Garden City Bank and Trust company and Leopold Mayer retired. The Garden City bank later became part of the American Trust and Savings bank, and through further mergers became identified with the present Continental Illinois National.

DRAPER-KRAMER TO MOVE INTO NEW QUARTERS

Draper & Kramer will celebrate the fortieth anniversary of its organization by moving tomorrow into new quarters at 25 South Dearborn street. They have been in the adjoining Portland block for many years. They will occupy the entire mezzanine floor. The officers and directors of the company are Arthur W. Draper, president; Adolph F. Kramer, vice president; Ferd Kramer, vice president; Maurice A. Pollak, secretary; Edgar Bibas, treasurer; Murray Wolbach and Charles Hamilton. In addition to the loop headquarters the firm maintains one north side and three south side offices.

MIDLAND BUILDING LEASES.

Five office leases are reported by Edward P. Wells, manager of the Midland building. They are: Ruthven Deane, Beale Tours, Inc., McFarlane & Holley, Thomas J. Vernia & Co., and the Chicago Bonding company.

ARTHUR T. M'INTOSH REPORTS BEST MARCH SALES IN FOUR YEARS

Arthur T. McIntosh & Co., who have been in the real estate business for more than twenty-five years under the personal direction of its founder, Arthur T. McIntosh, report that not only has the company's sales for the first quarter of 1933 surpassed the same period in 1932, but that March, 1933, sales were the best for that month it has experienced in the last four years. These sales include both vacant and homes. The March sales were 45 per cent higher than those of March, 1932.

Two New Leases Reported for the Conway Building

Frank M. Whiston, manager of the Conway building, announces two new leases. The Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance company will move from the Harris Trust building and occupy 2,000 square feet on the seventeenth floor. The Illinois Central is moving its freight offices from 208 South La Salle to the eleventh floor.

HALF CENTURY OLD FIRM WILL MOVE OFFICES

Dibblee & Manierre, active in the management and brokerage of downtown real estate for the last fifty years, will move their offices from the Standard Trust building, where they have been since that structure was erected thirty-three years ago, to the La Salle-Wacker building, of which they are managing agents. Dibblee & Manierre was founded half a century ago by Henry Dibblee, brother-in-law of Marshall Field, and George Manierre, one of Chicago's pioneers, who came to this city 100 years ago. Since the death of the founders, the surviving members of the firm are Francis E. and Louis Manierre.

HOOD RUBBER IS AGAIN A TENANT OF "ONE ELEVEN"

The Hood Rubber Products company's footwear division, which was a tenant of the One Eleven building at 111 South Canal street for seven years and which for the last twelve months has been at 310 Taylor street, is to return to One Eleven. Yesterday it signed a lease for 30,000 square feet on the seventh floor for executive offices, sales and display rooms and warehousing for the Chicago branch of the company. Arthur Newhall is president and James S. Barry is Chicago district manager of the lessee.

Because of the Hood Rubber company's recommendations of the operating facilities of the building, it is stated that the B. F. Goodrich Footwear corporation also has leased 30,000 square feet on the eighth floor of the One Eleven building for its Chicago branch.

In order to make available the area on the eighth floor needed by the Goodrich company, the American Thread company released its unit of space and is being moved to similar space on the twelfth floor.

Both leases were negotiated by Anne Davis, agent for the building, and Arthur Westphal, operating manager of Butler Brothers. Both lessees will take immediate occupancy.

Union News to Have Shop in the Field Building

The Union News company, subsidiary of the American News company, has leased first floor space in the Field building, facing the lobby and will operate two separate activities—a book shop and a cigar store, according to Robert Carpenter, manager of the skyscraper. The lessee operates several restaurants in New York, as well as a chain store of bookshops and cigar stores.

START WORK ON GLASS "HOUSE OF TOMORROW"

Twelve Sided Unit at Fair to Be Fireproof.

Work has just started on "The House of Tomorrow" at the World's Fair which George Fred Keck, its architect, is frank to admit may be laughed at as being absurd and impracticable as was the first automobile or first airplane. It's a twelve sided steel frame, glass walled house with its stairway in the center and with an airplane hangar as well as a garage as part of the building.

GEORGE FRED KECK.

Here are some of the things that will startle the average housewife: Rooms are not square, walls are not masonry or wood, there are no closets; movable wardrobes, easily cleaned, are substituted. There is no basement, not a window in the house can be opened, there are no electric light fixtures or brackets. Roofs are terraces, to be lived on.

Cost Not Stressed.

"This laboratory house is not conceived on a price basis, but as an opportunity for manufacturers of building materials to display new ideas that have been developed," said Mr. Keck. "In fact, cost is not stressed because this house, similar to the majority of homes ever erected, still is custom built. If some of the new ideas are sound, it's entirely possible to develop them and work out a large scale production that will lower costs."

The house will be artificially cooled by an air conditioning system which automatically draws in fresh filtered air from outdoors instead of depending on the unscientific method of "leakage." As no windows can be opened, all ventilation will depend on the air conditioning system.

Not a Goldfish House.

For the shy person who wonders whether this shouldn't be called "The Goldfish House," Mr. Keck states that clear plate glass walls will be lined with enough shutters and shades to give as much privacy as the resident of an ordinary frame or brick residence has.

"The Home of Tomorrow" is being erected on the lake shore, across the drive from the Home Planning hall. Completion is promised by the opening day of the Fair.

Start Work on New Store in Oak Park Shopping Area

Edward P. Steinberg has completed plans and work has started on remodeling a 50x192 store in the building at the southeast corner of Harlem and Lake, in Oak Park, into what is claimed will be one of the largest of its kind in the middle west. It has been leased to the Kroger Consumers Grocery company, who will open its new branch in about ninety days. The store will have entrances on both Lake street and William street. The store front on the latter will be old English. On Lake it will be modern. Charles Marrot is owner. Lionel Uhlmann has the general contract. Leroy Penwell was attorney.

Burny Brothers Bakeries Lease Randolph St. Shop

Burny Brothers Bakeries, Inc., have leased the store at 63 East Randolph street for a term of years from the Erwin C. Uihlein estate. This will be the sixteenth of a chain of retail bakeries. Plans are being drawn for a modern store interior with provisions for a daily demonstration of baking. J. J. Hutchison of McMenemy, Inc., was broker.

Neumode Hosiery Company Plans 7th Chicago Store

The Neumode Hosiery company, retail distributor for a large hosiery mill, operating fifty-six stores in the middle west, has leased space at 2033 East 71st street for its seventh Chicago store. The term is five years at an undisclosed rental. Additional Chicago stores are contemplated.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago for the week of March 31 to April 6, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled fifty-one, with a combined cost of $776,184. Of these, twenty-seven contracts, totaling $600,984, were at the World's Fair. Outside the fair there were twenty-four projects, totaling $175,200. There were ten building permits issued at the city hall during the week, calling for an expenditure of $51,900.

Little Orphan Annie
AH, THERE, ANNIE- AND HOW ARE YOU, THIS BEAUTIFUL MORNING-
OH, I'M FINE, THANKS, MR. PINCHPENNY- IT IS A SWELL MORNING, ISN'T IT?
FUNNY HOW FRIENDLY MR. PINCHPENNY HAS BEEN TO ME LATELY- WHY, HE'LL DO ANYTHING I ASK HIM, NO MATTER WHAT IT COSTS- YESSIR- I'VE BEEN LUCKY EVER SINCE POOR LITTLE CRIPPLED GUS PINCHER GAVE ME THIS RUSTY OLD KNIFE- YEP, THIS SURE IS MY "LUCKY KNIFE"
THAT KNIFE! I LOST IT THE NIGHT I RAN OVER THAT PINCHER BRAT, FIVE YEARS AGO- AND TO HAVE IT TURN UP AGAIN, AFTER ALL THIS TIME, AND FALL INTO HER HANDS-
NO ONE HAS GUESSED THAT I HIT THAT PINCHER KID- THEY WERE TOO DUMB TO RECOGNIZE MY KNIFE, OR CONNECT IT WITH HIS ACCIDENT-
WHY, IF IT EVER GOT OUT THAT I CRIPPLED PETE PINCHER'S BOY, IT WOULD MEAN MY RUIN- JAIL- DISGRACE- AND SHE HAS THE CLEW THAT CAN PROVE MY GUILT-
WHEN SHE ASKS ME TO SPEND LARGE SUMS FOR FOOLISH CHARITY, I DARE NOT REFUSE- I MUST PRETEND TO ENJOY THROWING AWAY MONEY ON THE FAILURES AND WEAKLINGS- SHE'LL RUIN ME, YET- BUT WHAT CAN I DO?
MAYBE SHE DOESN'T REALIZE THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THAT KNIFE- BUT I DARE NOT EVEN QUESTION HER ABOUT IT- AS LONG AS SHE HAS THAT KNIFE, I AM IN HER POWER-
BUT I'LL NOT TOLERATE THIS MUCH LONGER- AT LAST I SEE MY WAY OUT- IT'S A DESPERATE PLAN, BUT I CAN NOT AFFORD TO BE SQUEAMISH-
THE INSURANCE HAS LAPSED ON THE FUTILE'S HOUSE- IF IT SHOULD BURN, LATE SOME NIGHT---- WHY, THEY'D LOSE EVERYTHING-
YES, AND THAT ACCURSED KNIFE WOULD BE LOST IN THE ASHES, WHERE IT WOULD NEVER BE FOUND AGAIN- THE LAST EVIDENCE AGAINST ME WOULD BE LOST-
HA-HA! AND OLD FUTILE, AND THAT LITTLE FIEND, WOULD HAVE TO GO TO THE COUNTY FARM, THEN- NO ONE COULD EVER SUSPECT ME- NO ONE WOULD EVER KNOW-

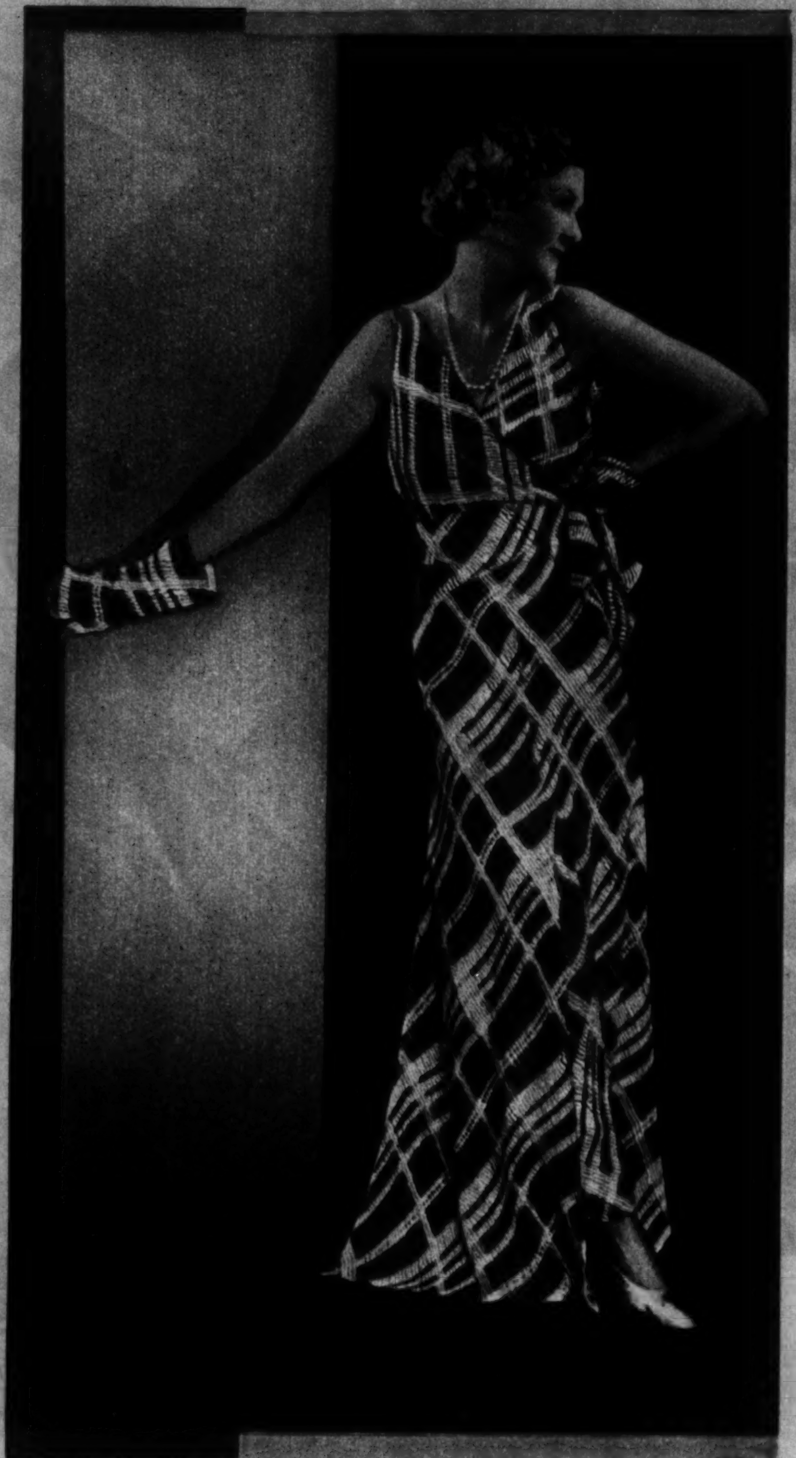
NEWEST FASHIONS IN THE PARIS OPENINGS



Printed crepe de chine evening frock with gloves of the same material, from Molyneux. The four-paneled skirt splits part way up to reveal loose ankle length trousers of the same fabric.

Mainbocher presents this swagger-backed jacket and navy blue frock with box pleats at the back of the skirt. A striped scarf ties about the neck and a striped belt holds the jacket front flat.

Molyneux afternoon ensemble in semi-sheer lily green silk crepe with loose jacket and three-quarters sleeves, and simple frock with velvet and silk sash. Flaunting paradise feathers trim the hat.

The eel gray fox harness on this Peggy Morris jacket is detachable. The bolero jacket, with short quilted-taffeta leg o' mutton sleeves, is worn over a simple silk jersey dress. For dinners and formal afternoon.

With crowns climbing to dizzier heights, Madame Agnes offers this variant upon the postilion hat. Of black milan straw, it is trimmed with a blue feather.

Vera Borea's candidate to oust beach pyjamas is a tie-on yellow pique skirt with Roman striped godets. The swim suit, of which the camisole-topped bodice is seen, is of yellow knitted cotton.

He Spent His Days Worrying About a "Disease" He Didn't Have

Thousands of People Who Think They Have "A Serious Disorder" Have Only "Acid Stomach" Now Easily Relieved

According to many authorities, some 80% of the people of today have acid stomach. This because so many foods, comprising the modern diet, are acid forming foods.

It usually makes itself felt in headaches, nausea, "gas," "biliousness," and most frequently in stomach pains that come about thirty minutes after eating. So you can easily tell if you have it.

Now Quickly and Easily Corrected

If you do have acid stomach, don't worry about it. You can correct it in a very simple manner. Just do this. It will alkalize your acid soaked stomach almost immediately. You will feel like another person.

TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia with a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed.

What This Does

That's all you do. But you do it regularly, EVERY DAY, so long as you have any symptoms of distress.

This acts to neutralize the stomach acids that foster your "upset" stomach, that invite headaches and that feeling of lassitude and lost energy.

Try it. Results will amaze you. Your head will be clear. You'll forget you have a stomach.

BUT—be careful that you get REAL milk of magnesia when you buy; genuine PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia. See that the name "Phillips" is stamped clearly on the label.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

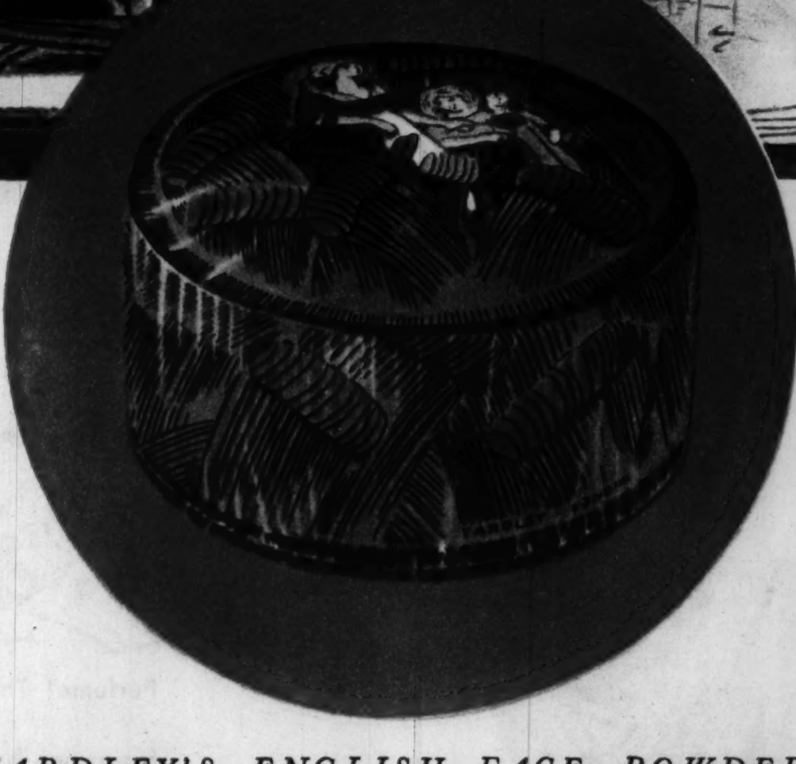
How the English Woman protects her soft, Gardenia skin



CLEAR and cool and gardenia-smooth, the Englishwoman's complexion is like some pink-and-ivory-petaled flower, exquisite and rare. And she cares for it as she would her most precious possession. She will use only the finest preparations that the world affords: these English Lavender things from Yardley of London. . . . Yardley's English Lavender Soap, to give her skin the gentle stimulation that it needs, morning and night. English Complexion Cream, a cleansing cream; a nourishing cream, to be left on at night; a powder foundation in the morning . . . and a marvel of efficiency along the entire line of duty.

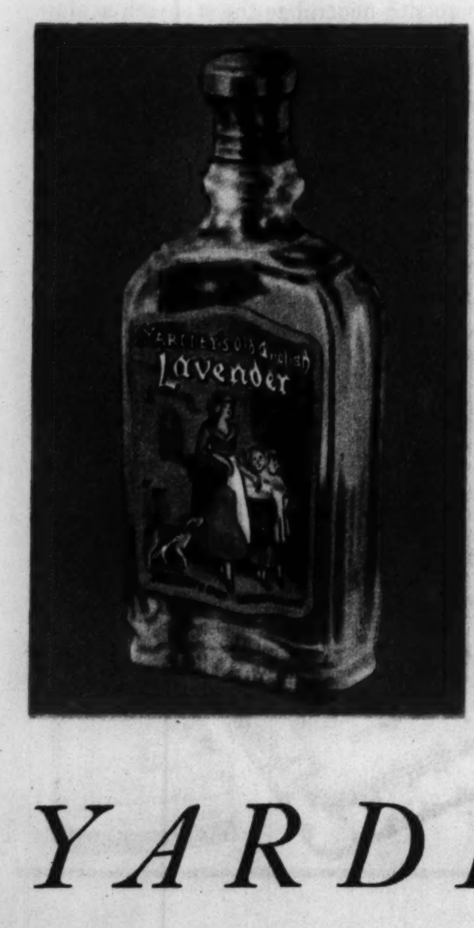
And finally, Yardley's English Face Powder, delicately perfumed with Yardley's Lavender. It will give you more than you had ever hoped for from a powder. It is so light, it will cling for hours; so luxuriously fine (like delicate, tinted mist); so subtly shaded that only the touch of your fingers and the richer, softer finish of your skin will reveal that you have used a powder at all. Truly a miracle!

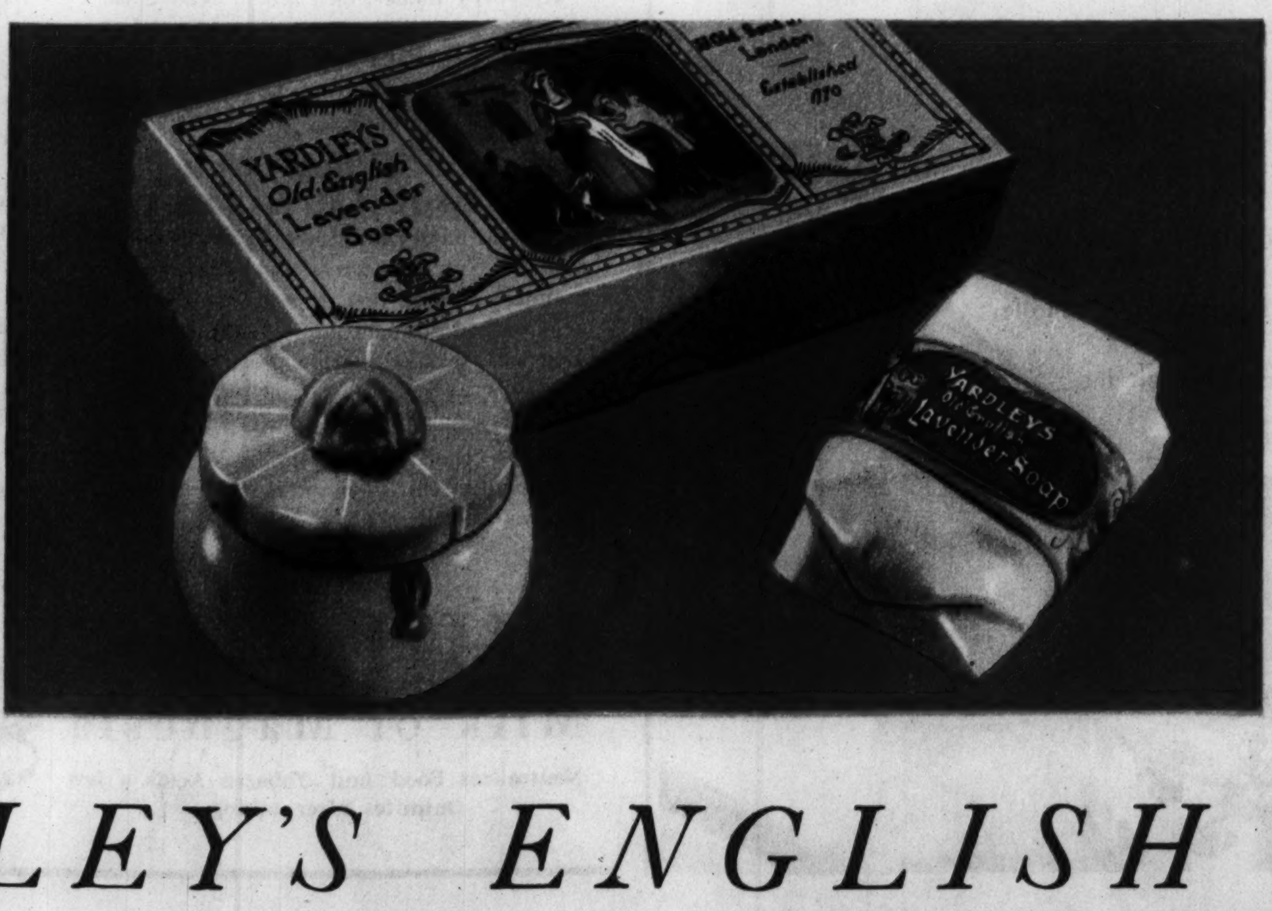
And because we cannot tell you here of all the Yardley series, we have made up a booklet, TR-4, "Complexions in the Mayfair Manner." Won't you write for a copy? It's free. Yardley & Co., Ltd., 452 Fifth Avenue, New York; in London, at 33, Old Bond Street; and Paris, Toronto, and Sydney.

YARDLEY'S ENGLISH FACE POWDER IN SIX SUBTLE TINTS

It will leave your skin with the velvety bloom that is the supreme achievement of a really good face powder. For we have tinted it so subtly that it blends indistinguishably with your natural coloring; and we have refined it so completely that not a single particle is perceptible after you have powdered. Yardley powder will cling for longer than you would have believed it possible. It is scented delicately with Yardley's English Lavender. You have only to find your own particular shade, among the six we have created, to realize that here, at last, is a perfect face powder. Our newest color, English Peach, is especially interesting . . . a warm and becoming rachel with an undertint of pink. $1.10 a box.

BY APPOINTMENT TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND





Yardley's English Lavender, the best loved fragrance of all. The national English perfume, it is treasured throughout the world. In purse-sized flacons or elaborate decanters, from $1.10 to $15. The bottle illustrated sells for $1.10.

English Complexion Cream . . . cleansing cream, skin food, and powder foundation; and English Lavender Soap, to give your skin the mild stimulation that results in a clear and healthy coloring. The cream, formerly $1.50, now $1.10; the soap, 35 cents a cake; bath size, 55 cents; guest size, six in a box, $1.05, or 20 cents singly.

Child, 8 to 10, Is Neglected by the Writers

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

JUST when I think I've been writing too much about the twos and threes and fours a letter comes in saying, "Won't you write more about the very little child?"

And when it seems to me that too many of my articles have been concerned with the adolescent I have requests to "please let us have more articles about boys and girls in their teens."

I suppose the reason is that when your children are all at the stage just past babyhood you look for suggestions for that age especially. And when your boys and girls are in high school you're most vitally interested in articles that deal specifically with the children in their teens. As a result, if you follow one column particularly, you wish it had more of what you need at the time.

But there's one request I don't believe I've ever received. That is, "Why don't you write more about the ages of 8 and 9 and 10?" If I did receive such a request I should feel guilty, for as a matter of fact that is the one age I'm apt to neglect and one which I should be jacked up on by my readers.

Changes Are Spectacular.

And not only I, but all the people who write for parents. If you read much on the subject of child guidance or training just "check up on" this point. You'll find, I'm sure, that babies and very little children at one end of the age scale and adolescent boys and girls at the other form the main themes of articles, lectures, and books.

Why should this be so? Probably because during babyhood and very early childhood (taking both as one period), and then, after a gap, during adolescence, the most rapid growth in a child's whole life takes place. This means that changes in body, personality, and behavior are more spectacular than at any other time. Therefore they cause parents the most concern.

Not only that, but those two extremes of rapid growth and development have been given most study by experts. In a way they are more definite periods to study, to write about and to advise about.

Plenty of Advice.

Take the baby who is just learning to walk and talk—or the 3 or 4 year old. A mother who is interested as well as deeply fond of her small child (and they are not the same thing, I assure you) can work out from rather definite knowledge gained and studies that have been made how to manage him and what to give him to fill his rapidly changing needs.

She knows or can learn, for instance, about the satisfaction his five senses must have to develop him, especially that thirsty sense of touch. She can observe or read about his muscular skills—how his big muscles develop first and later his smaller muscles.

She can observe—or get help to learn—that gaining obedience isn't a matter of a superior officer giving commands but a matter for tact and understanding and a channeling of his interests where they will do him most good. There really is help on every hand for the parents of very young children.

Know What to Expect.

The same holds true of adolescence in large measure. Parents know, but in a much more general way to be sure, what to expect then and why to expect it. And while it is a more subtle and difficult age to deal with, we do know certain rather definite fun-

- Practical clothes for summer will have waistlines slightly subnormal and skirts about the same length as before, or maybe a trifle longer.
- Dead black transparent frocks for informal evening, often trimmed with narrow lace ruffles, are an exquisite part of the new Chane' collection; and pure white evening dresses made of tulle, lace, or silk organdy are another.
- Schiaparelli gives women a new shoulder line to replace the square shoulder. Her new coats and jackets have shoulder trays below which sleeves are plaited.
- Chanel is reviving allover machine embroidered materials for suits and dresses. The embroidery is in white thread on a transparent fabric.

Paris Reinstates Boyish Freedom in Clothes

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Waistlines come crashing down from last season's heights, blouses and jackets let go their death grip on the anatomy, skirts "go easy," and sleeves cease to deform nature in the new French fashions for the coming summer. All these things take back the natural boyish freedom that style has not allowed since the famous, defunct garcon epoch.

We are not in for another garcon invasion. Not at all. The practical clothes that are coming out may be just one of the boys in their lack of restraint, but they have a character that is at the same time as sweet and girlish as Marlene Dietrich in trousers.

Keep Swagger Silhouette.

Swagger coats and jackets are the top of the practical styles now coming out. What they keep of the masculine model on which they are patterned is the free, swagger silhouette. The rest is feminine.

Mainbocher's short jackets, that swagger out in back, are made of girlish organdy. Chanel's velvet evening cloaks, with their sleeves rolled up like the shirtsleeves of a busy man, are for ladies only. Molyneux's knee length coats, like a raglan raincoat, are made of white and pastel colored linen crash. Jeanne Lanvin's jackets, cut like a boy's sweater, have square sleeves. Schiaparelli's boleros, shaped like the bolero of colonial soldiers, are sweetly shirred. And so on.

Sailor hats, slouch hats, and boyish caps help along this boyish mood of daytime styles. Stiff sailors are back after an absence of many years, and they are banded with wide black ribbon just like their forerunners. Some have streamers at the back.

Caps like those of Italian military officers are new notes and they are made of linen and can be rolled up in a ball. Schiaparelli's knitted circus hats that come from the traditional millinery of clowns down the ages are the newest and most exciting of the hats in the boyish freedom movement.

Plaited skirts and plaited dresses belong in the parade. They represent the freedom we have long been denied. Sports shirts made of feminine transparent cottons have been announced for some time in these pages and they did great work in boosting the boyish mode of today. They're still rolling it

Tantalizing Tidbits Should Be Kept Few in Number and Served Daintily.

By Mary Meade.

ALL our lives we've been warned against clambering out of bed on the unlucky side, putting the wrong foot forward and getting off to a bad start. Everybody seems to agree that it's first impressions that count and that a good beginning is half the battle.

But too often we forget to apply these commendable bits of philosophy to dinners. We barge into the attack on pot roasts and club steaks, forgetting that to do true justice to their hearty deliciousness, our palates need tickling—need a smart filip from a piquant tid-bit to prime them for full enjoyment of the pleasures to come. Lazy palates are quickly bored by main courses, and no wise hostess needlessly flirts with failure when a cup of savory, tantalizing soup or any of the scores of tempting appetizers are quick tricks with big rewards in family appetites.

Popular Appetizers.

Fish hunger-teasers hold high score for popularity at many boards, and meals start out with a real zip in taste and color when they are served.

First, have you discovered the assorted temptations that can come from a small jar of those funny little pickled fish, the anchovies? Or from a tube of anchovy paste? Accept, then, some quick tips.

A perfect cocktail accompaniment or a solo appetizer for the start of a meal may be made in this way: Supply yourself with stuffed olives, bacon strips and flat anchovies. Lay one of the little fish lengthwise on each slice of bacon, place a stuffed olive in the center, and roll the bacon around it, fastening with a toothpick. Broil under a slow flame until the bacon is crisp. Serve with a garnish of lemon, without removing the toothpick.

A luncheon appetizer is the anchovy egg. To prepare this for eight diners, but four hard-cooked eggs in half, lengthwise, and remove the yolks. Blend these yolks until smooth with four teaspoons of anchovy paste and one-eighth teaspoon pepper sauce. Pile the mixture lightly back into the whites and chill. When ready to serve, prepare thin bread rounds toasted lightly on the top sides. Cut the centers of the toast rounds out with a smaller cutter and place half a stuffed egg in each. Cover with a spoonful of tomato mayonnaise.

Tomato Mayonnaise.

This mayonnaise, by the way, is a smart new dressing that's good on a big family of fish salads or appetizers.

TOMATO MAYONNAISE.

1 cup mayonnaise.
¼ cup pimento, chopped.
1 cup tomatoes, drained dry [either canned or fresh].

Add the pimento, sauce, and the finely cut up tomatoes to the mayonnaise. Blend well and serve.

Another quick trick calls for thin toast cut in two inch squares. Over each square spread a mixture of chopped up hard cooked egg yolk and white, a little sweet relish, flat anchovies chopped small, and salad dressing to moisten.

Or, if you prefer your anchovies rolled, here is an appetizing inspiration. Hard cook several eggs and cut in two crosswise. Crush the yolks and blend them with oil from the anchovies. Spread this mixture on crackers or toasted bread squares and place a rolled anchovy in the center of each. Now slice egg white into rings and place one about each anchovy as a garnish.

Gay Frivolity Is Featured in French Styles

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS. — [Special.] — Paris this spring is Paris. Maybe the tourist companies are a little grim at the jaw, and the ocean liners tending to roll for lack of human ballast, but the season here whirls in an even gayer merry-go-round. Parisians are talking about the return to the Paris of avant la guerre and reviving lots of the old frivolity and carelessness of that epoch. Styles take their tip from this spirit. Famous ladies let their fancy ride high and come out in clothes they would not have dared to flaunt during the last decade when Paris chic meant standardizing Argentines, Americans, English, and the rest into one silhouette, which the Parisienne also took undiluted.

At the races the hats alone leave you gasping. Some of them actually tower above the crowd, they're that high, and are worn like the leaning tower of Pisa, above built-out shoulders and skirts that are frankly longer, some even ankle length. Molyneux' hats, with paradise and heron feathers floating skyward, are not actually very high, but look so. Reboux' floral sky pieces, in the most bizarre colors, are high and medium, but above all striking. Talbot's brimmed and square crowned hats, with important veils that float off the shoulders, and Chanel's squashed down in front brims, with lace veils that make eyes mysterious, all give the style picture a topping allure.

Wide Brims Fashionable.

There are plenty of wide brims, too, and trimming runs to varieties of flowers, birds, feathers, and ribbons. Agnes' postillion hat makes a stir wherever it appears. For once the beret is shoved into obscurity, and women are going in for something important at the head of their individual chic.

Gloves of the gayest kind replace the staid and simple slipon, and women are ordering them by the dozens made to order to go with printed and plain dresses, and done of silk or lingerie materials.

The loose jacket goes swaggering around everywhere and in all lengths, worn with dresses or skirt and blouse. Its sleeves stop short of the wrist in every case. Parisiennes hang on to their black and dark blue complex, and these colors are worn a lot, with grays and beiges playing seconds. A black suit with a swagger-back jacket and a blouse in gaudy stripings, checkers, or plaids is the sign of and seal of daytime chic, alternating with the simple, longer skirted dress and the same jacket done in pale color, with a sash at the waistline of the dress. Long coats are mysterious in Paris styles, one sees so few of them. Little capes are beginning to come out, and will appear in platoons when it really gets warm.

Fox Fur Harnesses.

Fox fur scarfs, single or double, are gone and unlamented. Fox fur harnesses, twined around the arms, or the waistline have replaced them. Monkey fur trimmings, puffed out into barrel sleeves, epaulettes and fringes are in, and Vionnet's fur scarfs that tie with satin around the waistline or arm are worn by her faithful clients.

Cinema evenings, dinners in the Bois and at the popular restaurants in town reveal the Parisienne either in all black or playing the rustic in field flower prints or checkered materials. The all black dress in crisp, sheer stuff, in the silk with lace insertion or ruffles over it, is the Parisienne's meat, and she thrives on it. She wears the most frivolous of evening hats, often done in lace or flowers with such frocks.

Simple Rustic Outfit.

When she wears the simple rustic outfit she picks out an ankle length frock that is either plaited or has a long, slinky skirt, and she tops it with a plain material cape, cut to look quaint and skimpy, or a jacket with sleeves that billow out where they meet the armholes, and with such outfits the brimmed sailor, very stiff and stylized, is the hat.

The formal evening mode is grande and swanky, with trailing frocks in the foreground, with rich satin evening wraps, or furred capes that sometimes trail in the back though short in front.

These Physical Training Stunts, Performed Daily, Are Sure to Bring Most Gratifying Results.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

SINCE poor posture is noticeably created from sway backs, rounded backs, protruding abdomens, and so on, the obvious thing to do is to strengthen back muscles, tone up the abdominal muscles and provide such muscle stability as will permit of correct bearing.

As we've argued before, there's no earthly use trying to order relaxed and toneless muscles to do the job that only good muscle tone can do. There's no use listening to an order to hold the abdomen flat, say, until the abdominal muscles are able to hold themselves flat. You can't order a back to hold itself straight and tall if there are such faults as sway back and rounded shoulders present. There may be a semblance of erectness on the command to stand right. But you can't hold the position long, either because the wrong muscles are trying to do the work, or the right ones have lost their ability to perform as originally expected of them.

Today, you have a series of exercises of West Point indorsement intended to strengthen your back and abdominal muscles so that they can carry on the good posture work we are after. Also, for reducing any part of the body, we urge you do these exercises. They'll take fat off waist, hips, thighs, abdomen and diaphragm. They'll train down the faulty figure from head to toe. But mainly, they are directed at the abdominal muscles and the back.

For underweights they are just as valuable as for overweights. And for the young boy and girl, and grown ups they are likewise advised.

It's by this means the West Point cadet acquires that fine, upstanding personal bearing of his, the happy coordination of mind and muscle that distinguishes his every move and the youthful snap and go of his whole set-up.

You women want this fine, supple, posture for the sake of your clothes, your looks.

You men want it because by just this kind of trunk muscle exercise vigor is maintained at its highest level, and such middle and old age signs as stiffness and sagging, waist thickening and paunchiness are prevented.

LOVE QUERY ANSWERS

Address Doris Blake, The Chicago Tribune, regarding problems of the heart. Enclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

Indicates Shallow Regard.

"Dear Miss Blake: What do you think of a fellow who gives up the girl he loves because she doesn't stop smoking? MONTE."

My goodness, are there men like that still, with all the lipstick training they've had? Afraid the love wasn't very deep, Monte!

Way to Forget.

"Dear Miss Blake: How can you forget a girl whom you love dearly? She loves some one else? FREAD."

By taking up with some other girl, you'll find it so much easier to forget.

Wants to Renew Friendship.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am giving a party and want to invite a fellow I love. I have not seen him for several months. Is it advisable to invite him? BOBBY."

Invite him, Bobby. It's one grand way of staging a reunion.

Parental Objection.

"Dear Miss Blake: We love each other tremendously. Her father objects because I'm a butcher. Should we pay any attention to her father or should I give up my job? "RUDOLPH."

Being a butcher is as honest a job as any. Isn't it something else that father tries to cover with this reason?

Better Take a Chance.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl and hesitate to tell her so, because I'm afraid she won't take me seriously. How can I make her believe me? "ED."

Why not take a chance on telling her, Ed? You'll never know what her attitude toward you is unless you do.

Be Flatteringly Attentive.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl and don't know how to tell her. Please advise. G. B."

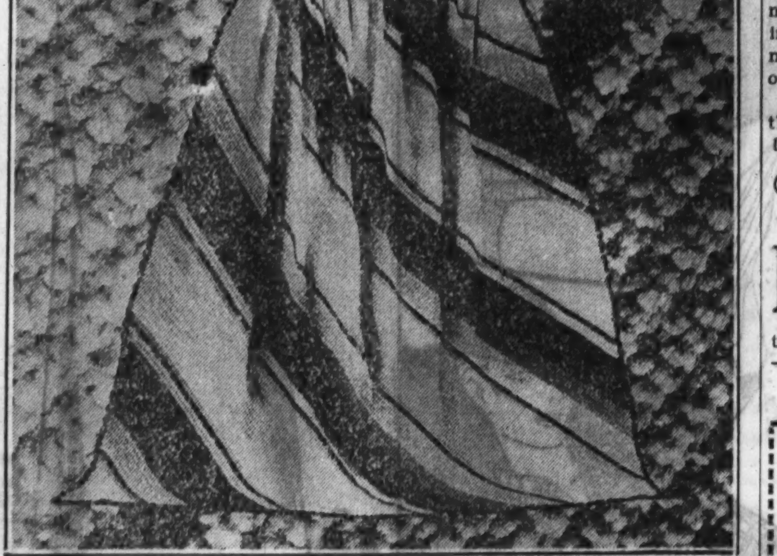
Tongue-tied? How about letting it be known with flattering attentions?

Ask Your Girl Friends.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am considered rather attractive, yet when I get acquainted with a fellow and go out with him once or twice he soon loses interest in me and does not care to see me any more. Please advise. "BROWN EYES."

You lack something comfortable and cheering to a boy. Ask one of your close girl pals where you fail.

Novice Can Crochet Beautiful Afghan of Brightly Colored Wool



This attractive afghan is crocheted in the warm tones of orange, yellow, tan, brown, and green. The dainty brown scalloped edge affords a striking contrast to the brilliant diagonal stripes.

By Barbara Dean.

FOR the novice who never has held a crochet hook, there is always charm and fascination in learning a new needlecraft, and an afghan is one type of reward afforded by crocheting.

The diagonal striped afghan illustrated here is made in warm tones of yellow, orange, tan, brown, and green. Brightly colored, these light wool covers create a smart yet economical way of adding a cheery note to any room; thrown over the back of a divan, chaise longue or easy chair, they add a touch of comfort and are the nicest of things in which to curl for that refreshing cat nap.

Complete directions for crocheting this afghan may be had by sending 5 cents in stamps or coin to Barbara Dean, CHICAGO TRIBUNE; or call in person at the TRIBUNE Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn street.

Paris Designs New Togs with Boyish Lines

Slipover sailor collars, made of dainty washable stuffs, are a Bruyere contribution to this important part of summer fashions. Another sailor item is most amusing. It is the use of nautical rope to adorn daytime clothes. Molyneux has belts of this rope and Chanel winds it round and round the crown of a sailor hat, and laces up sleeves with it.

Buttons of bone and men's plain clothes buttons are back in feminine fashions, fastening up dresses. Pearl shirt buttons are in style, too.

Cottons that ape homespun, tweed, twill, and striped suitings are the cream of the washable fabric mode. Printed materials for practical clothes avoid the girlish floral design and stick to checks, plaids, dots, and stripes. Stripes in the newest fashions have left the straight and narrow path and follow zig-zag drunken courses over the smartest silks and wools and cottons.

Coat of Coarse Linen.

Second from the left is the knee-length swagger coat that is a leader of summer fashions. This coat is made of pure white linen as loosely woven as gunny sacking and has short raglan sleeves with big cuffs. It is innocent of fastenings and has big revers. A striped four-in-hand scarf functions instead of a collar. This is an invention of Marcel Rochas. The two-piece dress worn with this coat is made of dark blue flat crêpe and buttons on pearl buttons. The skirt doesn't meet below the knees at the center front seam. It wasn't mean't to.

Fitted Piqué Jacket.

At the extreme right is the fitted white piqué jacket that Parisiennes like for both day and evening and which Mainbocher created. It is not fastened and is smart because it is worn flying to the four winds as shown. It is sketched over a plaited dress, significant of the new freedom movement. Not the stiff piqué sailor.

Just below is the straight short jacket with square sleeves. It is made of silk or wool and is the smartest of smart summer wraps.

Sailor-Collar-Vestee.

The two figures next to the right show the back and front views of Bruyere's sailor-collar-vestee. It is made of white silk piqué dotted with navy blue and buttons up the front on big navy bone buttons. The back is just sailor collar. This accessory for the dark street frock is held on by a buttoned back belt.

Next to the right is shown a shirt of pin checked silk etamine and a slouch hat of the same stuff. This is mannish in every detail and errs only in that the shirt is worn outside and not tucked in. Belt and buttons are of leather.

These liberation clothes are part of the important new styles.

"CLAY'S COMPROMISE," another presentation in the series of historical quilt patterns being reproduced in this department, is designed to picture the result of Henry Clay's attempt to obtain judicious legislation for both the north and the south on the slavery problem of the 1800s.

Faced with the problems of admission of California as a free state, slavery in the territory of New Mexico and Utah, the Texas boundary, slave trade between the states, and southern difficulty in retrieving fugitive slaves. Clay had drawn up his famous compromise bill.

This compromise, however, encountered much opposition, and was debated several months in congress by such men as Seward, Webster, and Calhoun before it could be passed. And at the end of that time, so many amendments had been made, and so many changes grafted, that the final settlement was a hodgepodge, having lost much of its original balance and simplicity.

So, if the quilt looks a little askew, remember that it represents Clay's compromise, evolved after a long and bitter struggle. That's the reason for a patch on here and a corner off there.

You will recall that the pattern presented last Sunday, "Clay's Choice," also commemorated Henry Clay's labors.

Money and Fun Not Synonyms in the Youngster's View of Life

By Doris Blake.

IN the news columns recently there figured two very young American heiresses whose monthly upkeep was revealed to be three and four thousand dollars, respectively. Rather, what figured in the news as read by parents the country over, was the sensational sum deemed necessary for the monthly upkeep of these two young girls. Sums that many parents, not only at this moment but at any time, would deem sufficient for the upkeep of an entire family a year.

Well—is it anything to get excited about if the court rules that one young miss, aged 10 or 11, requires $300 a month for clothing, $400 for her French instructions, dancing, riding and so on, $800 for the rent of an apartment suitable to harbor the gilded fledgling?

We heard a number of mothers waxing strong and bitter on the injustices of fate in connection with these endowments. Mothers are funny that way. They can stand any kind of privation for themselves, go without comforts, and not feel particularly bitter at fate. But they fail to follow a sane philosophy when it is a question of their children and the advantages they'd like them to enjoy.

Poor Are Poorer Now.

Perhaps the general stringency of the moment serves to emphasize the great difference between the rich little girl and the poor little girl. We always have had the former with us, the latter, too. The financial allotment governing their respective circumstances has been pretty much the same. But a current depressed appraisal of their youngster's future, we think, clouds the poorer parents' vision at the moment.

Put to a youngsters' vote, we'll wager that were the circumstances of the life of the poor little girl and their own compared, the children, themselves, would bear no grudge against the youngster cast in a daily routine mold, and subjected to the sharply supervised play, as are so many of the children of wealthy parents.

Not that we are pollyannish about money. Money can give certain advantages to children. Mothers realize this but when the dark clouds threaten they are inclined to overemphasize its value to children. They forget that life has its compensations, and that children today are in a position to enjoy many advantages on comparatively little money.

We, for instance, happen to live in a community where we fail to see any advantage in being the richest child in the neighborhood. True, she may be better dressed than the others of her age—but so far as the youngsters are concerned, the fact that she is the best dressed member of the set does not make one iota of difference. Nor to her, as we observe her—since her "very glad rags" look so much like the other youngsters' clothes at the end of a play session.

Marks of Popularity.

In this group, too, we observe that the most popular little girl, the one always sought as the wanted playmate, is a child of the poorest parents. She is a smart little thing; she plays fairly with the children; she knows how to give and take; she is extremely mannerly and consequently bears the approval of all parents as a desirable associate. In addition, she's lovable and blessed with a smiling face and happy disposition. Now, none of these qualities with which her parents have endowed the child cost money. They are plainly the fulfillment of a happy home environment and fine child direction.

So, mothers, who resent other children's advantages in terms like this: "Why must some children have everything and mine so little?" just aren't playing fair with their own. And expressing their discontent in a child's hearing is anything but constructive.

It is time enough when children are older to learn that there are great financial and social distances between families. Then character has been formed, and the knowledge will make little difference to the child, since the world will find a place for him or her, according to ability and character.

Fun Is Youth's Privilege.

In the meantime, let children enjoy all the fun that is their privilege. Let them have a mother's loving, personal care. In this circumstance, at least, the mother without much money enjoys a privilege over the average parent of the rich child. The latter by the very circumstances of her wealth, is turned over to hired service. No matter how efficient hired service may be, it still is not the perfect substitute for the intelligent personal care of the mother.

A point overlooked by the mother, tinged for the moment with envy of the rich child, is that gratifying a child's every wish is not the best kind of training. Not that all rich children are given every coveted possession. Some of them are trained to know what it is to earn and get. The odds, however, are against this training for them. If they are bored, as some of the pampered little darlings are, is it any wonder?

A pretty tragic day in the life of one of the young heiresses referred to above was revealed in the news column. Not one moment, as we read it, to slip out and skip rope on the street or in the back yard with the neighborhood kids. Not a minute for mud-pie making. No chance for the harmless mischief and the spirit of adventure behind it common to most youngsters. With an eagle-eyed teacher, chaperone, or servant to say the little girl may, she misses a lot of fun.

No—we are putting the vote up to the youngsters themselves. Mud or the dress that mustn't be soiled? We hear them yell M-U-D with gusto.

Snappy Outfit for Easter Is Woman's Major Concern

Shoulders and Hats Get Bulk of Attention

By Rhea Seeger.

THERE are few thrills left in this rather exciting season to compare with the one big thrill of joining the Easter promenade clad in snappy new clothes from the top of your short haircut to the tips of your toes. Easter clothes are spring clothes—the right clothes carefully chosen after at least half a dozen serious shopping trips.

Easter morning seems to be the rosy dawn of the day that settles such important things, as what the fashion conscious clothes hound sponsors as being wearable, becoming, colorful, strictly, and, this spring, stiffly in fashion. If you are doubtful about shoulder seams, shoulder widths, sleeves, hats, and the many necessary accessories, Easter morning and the Easter promenade will help you make any final decision.

The first things you will notice are the bulky squared-off shoulders and the hats, and next, the flurries of clear sparkling white costume accents or accessories. White piqué and white organdy practically frost the tops of all good looking street costumes when you do not cover your shoulders with fur. Hem lines are dismissed with just the fewest of words. Skirts are straight, slim, and simple. Everything is piled up and around the high, wide, and ever widening shoulder sections.

Fat Little Plaits Appear.

Funny fat little plaits, that look like a row of either sausages or warlike cartridges, are used nonchalantly to hide the seams of smart sleeves. Wide lapels, that spread themselves over the entire chest seem to be outgrowing even their first lavish attempts of being all you can see. A generous use of fur marks all the best coats. The generous designers splash fur patches as epaulets, lapels, shoulder squares, and whirls around cuffs, half sleeves, and in pagoda-like extensions that add more width.

Spring suits are the smartest, most refreshingly different suits you have seen in years. From the trig tailored affairs, boasting all the man tailored details of cleverly concealed pockets, cut-away curves, suave, smooth, impeccably fitted notched collar and skin fitting backlines, to the dress parade suits for afternoon fashioned with all the skill of expert dressmakers, this is the year of suits. The newest suits are the models that feature two and three shades of one color, or two piece models, consisting of plain one colored coat and swanky pin striped skirt.

Capes shoulder their way into every sort of a dress, suit, or three piece costume. Any one can wear a cape this year. There are short, swinging capes that just hit the elbow, for short shoppers; there are hip length capes for the tall and slender shopper, and there are longer capes for the average silhouette. And the cape coats, models that look like loose flared capes, with ingenious sleeves set into wide side seams, are the loose casual things that make the perfect costume.

Four Outstanding Costumes.

Four outstanding new Easter costumes have been sketched, all included in one Chicago collection. Others, equally effective, equally distinctive and new are waiting for the crowds of clothes hungry shoppers.

At the left, in the accompanying illustration, is a costume of cornflower blue wool crêpe. A slim one-piece dress, skillfully fashioned in simple straight lines, is topped with one of the new wrap-around short jacket tops, also of the same good looking blue wool. A long sash or tie belt is used to accentuate the waistline, and the shortened shoulder cape effects are contrasted with patches of platinum fox. Matching blue accessories, and one of the colorful new flowered turbans or small flower wigs in scarlet, would be effective with this flattering shade of blue, or silver gray costume accents, with a small snippy sailor of gray straw banded in blue, as a good alternative.

With Notched Fox Collar.

Tawny gold wool fashions the two piece suit, sketched at the extreme right. The straight trim skirt is definitely 1933. The faultlessly tailored jacket is spectacularly trimmed with a luscious collar of pale honey colored fox. Deep notches form the ever popular wide lapels for spring.

At the lower right is sketched Schiaparelli's new pet . . . the costume that features the boxed shoulder silhouette, the cartridge plaits, that square the girl that wears it, with all the swank and swagger imaginable. This particular costume is made of black wool. The dress is topped with a new black and white printed silk. The short snappy cape of black wool to match the lower skirt section is held or fastened over the chest with huge chromium bars. This is one of the smartest costumes of spring because of the plaits and the boxed shoulder seams.

Youngster of 8 to 10 Often Neglected by the Writers

damental facts about it. We know, for instance, that there is a sharp spurt of growth at this time—the most rapid since babyhood.

We also know that individual children vary in the way their bodies go through this time. Some seen to follow a consistent pattern of gradual gain in height, strength, and skill in handling their new growth. Others shoot skyward to man's or woman's height, but this speed in growth is not equalled by a speed in development. And development—or we might call it the maturing of structure or function—is not by any means the same as growth.

A Confusing Age.

And that last fact is a most important principle for parents of High school boys and girls to keep in mind. It means very often an unevenness physically at the time of adolescence. Everything doesn't keep pace with everything else. This holds true of the development of their personality and emotions, too. We have confusing and often touching alternations between boy-actions and man-actions, and girl-ways and woman-ways. That this age is often confusing and difficult for the children themselves parents and experts have recognized. Therefore, much study has been given to it and much written about it.

So, then we see it to be a fact that there is more helpful advice available on these two extremes—babyhood and young childhood [considered as one] and adolescence than on the in-between years.

What, then, about those years in between—7, 8, 9, and 10, for example? What happens in them normally, and also what are the difficulties that arise?

In the ordinary course of events school begins, for one thing. The need for constant physical care melts away, and home is no longer the whole world. Personality is affected and character partly formed by outside factors such as school, grownups other than parents, and playmates. Books begin to exert their influence. And there is a gradual acquisition of the more conventional manners.

And at this in-between period that important thing may happen which not only means interest and satisfaction at the time, but may later mean either a child's life job or his happy use of leisure. The important thing I mean is the discovery or uncovering of a talent, or special interest. It often awakens if given the chance, during these years between little childhood and adolescence.

Normally, then, these are the happenings of the in-between years. They may bring in their train a great variety of difficulties. Among these are: a dislike of school, due to physical confinement and constant concern with books and academic interests; school troubles, difficulty in getting on with other children, slowness [in dressing, for example], dreaminess, forgetfulness and heedlessness, objection to doing chores or helping about the house, impudence, disobedience, defiance, showing off, "bad words," and so forth; argumentativeness, questioning of authority, physical ills, contagious diseases, tonsil removals and after effects, untruthfulness.

If we should put the difficulties of these in-between years side by side with the changes these years bring in a child's way of life we could see that they are a logical accompaniment—that is, they will naturally arise if things are not right at home or in school, either as to management or in the home or school itself.

A Helpful Line-up.

"Well," you may say, "but this is only a line-up. What good does it do?"

As a matter of fact, a line-up sometimes does a great deal of good. It needs, however, to be followed by suggestions or advice to round out its value. These will be covered in a general way in Monday's column.

This is the time of year when your trips to the country or woodland rambles are enriched for the children by a growing knowledge of wild life and the outdoors. Books are one of the keys to this. Excellent suggestions are contained in our leaflet, "The Young Naturalist's Booklist," which will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addresed envelope.

Tantalizing Tidbits Should Be Kept Few in Number and Served Daintily.

Stuffed Celery.

Crisp celery hearts stuffed with any of sundry inspirations may do double duty either as a pre-meal appetizer, or as the main attraction of a luncheon salad, set off by a bed of lettuce.

Creamy cottage cheese mixed with chopped sweet pickles, minced pimiento or chopped chives makes a delectable filling for cool celery hearts. With the smaller ones, leave the yellow-green leaves on to add color to the salad.

Roquefort or pimiento cheese is delicious as a celery filling when blended with minced pan-broiled bacon and chopped sweet pickle. Any stuffing that seems a bit weak when the stalks are stuffed, may be pepped along by a dash of paprika. If the celery is served as a salad, French dressing should be passed.

Cream cheese or cottage cheese mixed with horseradish and a dash of sauce forms another tangy stuffing.

Salmon Tid-bits.

Salmon, tuna fish, or smoked sardines may be used interchangeably in the following appetizers.

Cut thin toast in simple shapes—only about 2½ square inches in all—and spread with mayonnaise. Break a little salmon in flakes on the center of each canape, sprinkle with lime or lemon juice and garnish with a thin slice of pimiento or olive.

Blend salmon with sweet relish, minced onions and mayonnaise. Spread over toasted crackers or bread rounds.

Flake salmon very fine and blend with cream cheese and minced parsley. Spread on crackers.

Chopped salmon, tuna fish or sardines make grand eating when mixed with a little fresh chopped cucumber. Season with a tart dressing or lemon juice and spread on toast rounds or Swedish whole wheat crackers.

Crab Meat Appetizers.

Next, instead of the tempting but time-worn crab meat cocktail, served in its usual style, some time offer a palate tickler in the form of:

FROZEN CRABMEAT COCKTAIL.

2 cups flaked crabmeat.
1 teaspoon celery salt.
¼ cup lemon juice.
½ cup chopped celery.
¼ cup chili sauce.

Toss all the ingredients together until well mixed, then turn them into a refrigerator tray and freeze. Serve up in little cocktail glasses with a small piece of lettuce and a garnish of minced stuffed olive.

Or for a speedy spread for some crisp crackers, apply first a covering of mayonnaise. Have ready a strained sweet pickle relish and make a border of it on the cracker about the edge. Flake some crab meat and place inside of each pickle border. Garnish with a slice of stuffed olive atop the crabmeat.

Caviar Canapes.

Caviar used to be one of those things you had heard about but never really met—or at least seldom understood. But not now. With a "Little Russia" just around the corner in most every large city, there's a grand chance to become familiar with all sorts of continental delicacies—and especially with the favorite love of epicures—good caviar. Actually, caviar is the roe, or eggs, of various kinds of fish—usually that of the sturgeon. It comes to us in cans or jars, highly salted, and may be of the small, grayish variety or of the large red kind. Here are some of the ways it most likes to be used:

Spread crackers or thin bits of wheat bread toast with a little cream cheese, forming a ridge about the edge. Place the fresh caviar in a little heap in the center of each. Sprinkle lightly with lemon juice.

Prepare thin toast canapes with a spread of mayonnaise and mashed hard cooked yolk. Add a pile of caviar and sprinkle with lime juice.

Jumper Frocks Popular with Young and Old

An Extra Guimpe or Two Permits New, Refreshing Changes in Wardrobe.

By Clotilde.

THE yoked bodice with sleeves that widen and puff above the elbow in pattern No. 3333 creates a charming effect. The skirt lines are rather unusual, with the deep pointed section at the center front to lend height to the figure. The hips fit with perfect smoothness and the skirt is straight lined—something you will notice on many of the new coats. For size 16 this skirt measures at the bottom about 1⅝ yards.

The waist yoke should be seamed on the shoulders, then the lower edge turned in an even seam's width and basted to the front and back of the waist. The puffed sleeves are basted to a foundation—notches showing just how to put the two together. After this has been done pin the sleeve to the yoke, matching the large perforation in the sleeve to the shoulder seam. Baste the yoke across the top of the sleeves, then stitch, remove the bastings, and press flat.

The sleeves are gathered at the bottom and basted to the foundation. If you don't use the lower sleeve part, set the puff into a narrow band.

The waist is finished at the neck with a chic scarf collar. Make this scarf according to the directions given in the chart, then cut the slashes on the front and back of the yoke and finish like bound button holes. These are to slip the scarf through. Put the dress on and let some one tack the scarf in place for you. It is laid over the right shoulder, slipped through the slash at the center back to the inside of the dress, then both ends are slipped through the front slash, from the inside to the outside.

A jumper dress looks new every time a different blouse or guimpe is worn with it. and pattern No. 2720 is a charming dress of this kind for young girls. The dress is made with a deep U shaped neckline, both in the front and back. The arm holes are large and should be faced. The circular skirt is in two pieces, and at the sides it is pressed in inverted plaits. This gives the skirt a graceful swing and the plaits hide the skirt seams.

The guimpe, with its short puffed sleeves, Peter Pan collar, and a front band for buttons and button holes, is easily made.

Pattern No. 3336 is for a jumper dress for grownups. It is easily made and wonderfully good looking when finished.

There is a seam down the center front of the skirt with an inverted plait that flares at the bottom, and the back is in one piece. The blouse is simple, just one front and one back, and at the center front at the neck there is a slash that is bound and finished for closing. A rather wide collar finishes the neck and a prim little bow hides the bound slash.

The arm holes and the neck of the waist should be faced and two large buttons are used for closing.

MONEY'S WORTH

By G. B. Stern

The Story of Bartholomew Bassett, Who Spent Two Thousand Pounds to Find Out Just How Honest People Are, and of Sweet Clare Arundel, Who Helped Him Delightfully in His Experiment.

PERHAPS Bartholomew Bassett had been too deeply inoculated with Dickens while he was still too young and impressionable. At all events his physical being, obedient to his literary tastes, materialized at an incredibly early age as the perfect Dickens old gentleman. He must have been still in his twenties when he began to be plump, rosy and benevolent, with beaming blue eyes set in a web of tiny wringles, and hair that was already beginning to recede from his temples.

Seeing this, his father, the head of the firm of Bassett & Molton, at once made him a partner. In grateful return, Bartholomew allowed his hair to recede still more, successfully escaped several offers of marriage from enterprising young ladies, and developed some not disagreeable old bachelor whimsies in his clothing, such as blue and white spotted tie which wound broadly twice round his collar, or a neck cloth with an old fashioned horseshoe pin stuck through its center, a wayward tendency, no more than that, in his waistcoats, toward a sprig pattern, and a velvet smoking jacket, very frogged, for the home fireside.

He was a shrewd business man and popular with his friends, but privately they agreed that it was really not safe to go near him when the Christmas season began to twinkle and throw its beams. For what with the precedents set by Pickwick and Scrooge, not to mention Bob Cratchit and the Cheeryble brothers. . . .

The firm of Bassett & Molton had its premises in one of the best streets of London and dealt in the finest leatherwork of all kinds. Before old Mr. Bassett and old Mr. Molton died their goods had a heavy bias towards luggage that would last for a lifetime of grand tours, but young Mr. Bart—so named by the hypnotized employés, exactly as though he were a character in Victorian fiction—was modern enough in his methods gradually to bring his wares into line with a twentieth century demand for more elegant traveling cases that need not necessarily endure for three score years and ten, handbags, pouches, car cushions, pocketbooks, fitted dressing cases, exquisite shoes, even the softest and most supple leather coats.

A pig and crocodile and an alligator and a gazelle, strolling arm-in-arm through the shop, would have found the greatest difficulty in recognizing their alas-my-poor-brothers, with such tender and sensitive imagination had these brothers been transformed into maroquinerie. It was extremely tantalizing not to be rich when you paused outside the windows of Bassett & Molton. Bassett & Molton's customers were, indeed, all extravagant easy going people who were accustomed to order the very best of everything, and discriminating enough to appreciate the quality of the firm's stamp.

The only thing that was deplorably modern about the customers at Bassett and Molton's was the fact that they were nonchalant, too nonchalant, over settling their accounts. And they became more and more nonchalant until about a week before Christmas when Bartholomew Bassett had at last caught up with his own appearance and personality and was, in years as well, a delightful old gentleman of 68, he had to face the fact that a considerable amount of money in small sums was so overdue that there seemed very little hope of ever recovering it.

This total of two thousand pounds odd was apart from the usual running debts which caused no anxiety because they were certain to be paid in time; it consisted of really bad casual debts for which the firm had sent out application after application with no result. These applications certainly were worded, by Bartholomew's special orders, so that they resembled rather more the salutations to be found on particularly loving Valentines than furious and strident demands for money. But even then, with any belief in human nature——

BUT that was where Bartholomew's head accountant differed from Bartholomew himself. They had a long and very painful interview. The head accountant told his chief, respectfully but firmly that these debts definitely should be collected by the end of the year for the sake of the firm's self-respect. So would he not allow them to do something more drastic about them?

"What do you suggest, Mr. Clarke?"

Mr. Clarke suggested, not without trepidation, knowing what prejudices he assaulted, that a solicitor's letter nearly always had more effect than the letter from the firm itself. He explained that when debtors received a solicitor's letter they were apt to associate it, by leaping stages of fancy, with writs, bailiffs and prison—("The Marshalsea," murmured Bartholomew Bassett, hating this interview and deploring his chief accountant's zeal!)—and were therefore apt—"apt" was Mr. Clarke's favorite word—to take instant and drastic action to avert such calamities, and this action was usually writing checks, and that these checks, when received and added up, would probably amount to something like two thousand pounds, "which, as I think I told you, sir, we really ought to get in by the end of the year. It's not fair to the firm, sir, if you'll forgive my saying so, to let 'em lie about, scattered in that loose sort of way, and not do anything about it.

"If you'll forgive me saying so, sir, Bassett & Molton owe it to their pressteeje not to. It isn't exactly the money, sir. It's a question of balancing our books for the year. We weren't able to last year because a lot of these amounts were already owing then and you told me to let them slide."

"I didn't!" cried Bartholomew Bassett defiantly. "I'm sure I didn't use the word slide. What I said was: 'Let 'em stand over for a bit, Clarke. These people, poor devils, will pay when they can. Human nature is fundamentally honest, Clarke, and until they can pay, it's a share to squeeze 'eb.' You can't run the world without idealism and you can't run a leather goods establishment without idealism, and that's sound argument!"

ILLUSTRATION BY OSCAR HOWARD.

"Yes, Mr. Bassett. Then, have I your permission to have the money collected by Cork, Trippett, Dibden & Cork? It would really be out of our hand then and there'd be no need for you to be—to be—er—pained by the—to—er—feel any pain about it personally," added William Clarke, not without a touch of dryness.

BARTHOLOMEW BASSETT sat for a moment in deep reflection without replying. "I don't like all this bullying and bludgeoning," he said at last.

"Bullying and bludgeoning, Mr. Bassett?" William Clarke was shocked.

"In essence it's the same thing. We word it differently. You think I'm an old fool, Clarke. Well, I'm not an old fool, but I believe in human nature. I believe that if people can pay, they will. I've said that before."

"Permit me to continue believing, Mr. Bassett, sir, that people who can't pay shouldn't order."

"At the time they order they have every facility to pay, every intention to pay, every desire to pay."

"Then, why don't they pay cash?" stolidly.

"It's against human nature to pay cash. And its going to be a particularly difficult Christmas for everybody. This slump . . ."

As a matter of fact, he had received several letters from his debtors enlarging on this question of hard times, but as they were written to the head of the firm in confidence, he naturally could not betray their contents. But either you believed it or you did not, when your customers told you with pathetic dignity that they had just had to pay for expensive operations, that their brother in the colonies had failed with his coffee crop or his wheat or his bananas, that they had lost heavy sums in various financial smashes, had been unable as yet to put themselves right again—just a little more time, and——

The two thousand pounds owing to Bassett & Molton was divided up among about a hundred and twenty people, and of these, at least eleven had written personally and confidentially to Mr. Bassett, explaining their grievous difficulties. The rest he pictured as too deeply sunk in shame even to contemplate such a course.

"No, Clarke, no! I won't threaten. I won't send out summonses. I have my creed, and you have yours. You're an embittered cynic."

"Anyhow," Mr. Bassett added, "I have a plan of my own."

William Clarke tried to look as though he had an almost religious confidence in almost any plan of Mr. Bassett's. But his soul quaked in apprehension. After he had been dismissed, he told Radcliffe, his chief crony, the head buyer of Bassett & Molton, that he believed the boss was going on a round of personal calls next week to deliver, via the roofs and chimney pots of London, a succession of expensive plum puddings to his debtors . . .

William Clarke had always been a somewhat sarcastic man, but his sarcasm in this instance was perilously near the truth. For Mr. Bassett, a few weeks earlier, had been left a legacy, a small private legacy, which by Dickensian coincidence, when Death Duties had been paid, added up to slightly over two thousand pounds. And the idea had shot into his head—a head which disrespectful nephews in the olden days would not have hesitated to call a noddle—that he might use this two thousand pounds (not a very large sum to him for he was a wealthy man) to test his theory of the innate decency of human nature. "If they can pay, they will." That was his creed.

But he had been genuinely bothered for years, now, by the wave of skepticism and pessimism washing through the world. It might be the war or it might be something vaguely called the modern spirit. Whatever it was, he was prepared to challenge it. Above all things, he desired to set his mind at rest and his legacy would be well laid out if he could use it to buy himself peace and reassurance.

Nevertheless—"For I'm not a fool! I told Clarke I wasn't a fool!"—he was by no means prepared to lose his legacy, merely to sink it into the firm. He was not in a hurry, but pondered over his plan all through Christmas only to become more and more enamoured of it. It was imaginative, inspired, sensible, economic, generous and thrifty, all at the same time, and what more virtues could be found in a plan than these?

When he returned to his office on the twenty-seventh of December he shut himself up with a list of his pathetically obstinate debtors and with rich Dickensian chuckles, directed obliquely at his head accountant, wrote out a check for each one of them of exactly the amount they owed him. Then to each one of them he wrote a letter, sending his best wishes for the new year and merely remarking that a check was enclosed for the amount they owed Bassett & Molton.

Bartholomew Bassett, when he had secretly posted his pack of letters, let himself loose in a golden dream: All these harassed, careworn people! At first they would look at the epistle with dread; "Bassett & Molton" on the envelope? Yet another demand for money they had not got! Then they would open it. And then . . .

He imagined the whole two thousand pounds, which he had wilfully broken up into little fragments, rolling together again, a complete jig-saw. In a few days' time he would be able to hand over two thousand pounds in small checks to William Clarke, informing him briefly that these people had paid.

". . . Mind you," cried Bartholomew in anticipation, pointing a triumphant forefinger, "mind you, Clarke, I was careful not to say in my letters that I expected them to use the money I sent them to pay me back. I only said: 'A check is enclosed for the amount you owe us.' I left the implication entirely to them. And what's the result? Two thousand pounds went out and two thousand pounds have come back. No one's been hurt, nothing's been damaged. A load has been rolled off the souls of I don't know how many individuals and we don't even have to pay our solicitor's bill. And—I can sleep at nights. So, who was the best accountant in the end, you or I, Clarke? You or I."

ON a dismal blowy afternoon towards the end of March Clare Arundel sat on the floor in her dismal bedroom in a Bayswater boarding house, dismally turning out the accumulated rubbish from her chest of drawers and leaving the contents to sprawl on the carpet round her. One stage of her life had reached a dead end, so that it seemed to her that her present occupation reflected appropriately on the spiritual situation.

If only she could have gone out of Donald's life with penache! If she could have made a final spirited gesture and, so to speak, flung a cavalier cloak and cocked the feather in her hat, then she would have minded less, in fact, it was doubtful whether she would have cleared out her drawers at all. For Clare's religion was gesture, not only superficially, but from the very soul.

. . . Supposing, for instance, you are fond of a man and a man is fond of you and there is just no doubt about it at all, and supposing, then, owing a great deal to his obstinacy and a little perhaps to your own light hearted independence, you quarrel with him and dismiss him, and he goes and a couple of months later gets engaged to somebody else—somebody rich and not bad looking and boring, called Camilla—and you receive an invitation to their wedding, a very grand wedding. Then, there is only one obvious gesture to satisfy the soul: You must send an excellent present, fastidiously chosen, you must wear excellent clothes reflecting the bridal spirit and, of course, showing up your own best points. You must hold your head high and go to the wedding and be seen, not caring a damn.

IF you do none of these things, because you are too hard up—only because you are too achingly hard up, no other reason, because Don himself had ceased to count, ages ago!—then all your friends, and all Don's friends will think you are crouching somewhere, heartbroken and resentful, and Camilla will think so, too, and Camilla's mother and Don's mother and Don's awful sisters and, most distasteful of all, Donald himself, the happy bridegroom.

"Poor Clare!" he'll think, laughing, as he changes into his going away suit, light gray with a stripe running through it—POOR Clare!"

"I won't be thought pathetic when I'm not! But I can't turn up at the church looking shabby, because that's even worse than not turning up at all, and both are bad. . . . 'A forlorn little figure, trying to wear a brave face above her twice turned and carefully pressed little blue serge coat and skirt, was among the last of the guests to creep in, hoping to remain unobserved because of the tear stains marring her fair, sad, little countenance' . . . No!" exclaimed Clare, springing up and recklessly overturning the last and most alarmingly jammed, crowded, and tumbled drawer of all. "I might as well get all this mess tidy, and start life all over again. Damn being hard up! Why, I'd have enjoyed the wedding! I like weddings, they're so silly!"

But even if any of her clothes had been fit to put on she had not been able to scrape together either credit or cash to purchase a first class wedding present for Camilla. Her allowance was overdrawn; also the commission she earned on top of her absurdly small salary at a friend's hat and necklace shop in South Moulton street. In fact, her present financial condition looked like a dish of badly scrambled eggs. How divine to have a regular income, whole and pearly, and not owe money all round, with I. O. U.'s and post-dated cheques scattered in a sort of desperate largesse among her creditors!

"And my birthday isn't for years," murmured Clare, a trifle inaccurate in her despair, sending a wry glance in the direction of her sole surviving relation, Uncle Ralph of the Hard Fist, who firmly, when approached with the idea of getting her next three birthday presents rolled into one ("——and then I needn't bother you any more, you see!"), had replied that she'd need her birthday present even more when the date came round than she did now, and it was going to be half its usual size because times were hard and couldn't young women ever realize that times were hard, or hadn't they the brains to realize anything but their own pleasure and gadding about?

Summing up her predicament, moral and spiritual, Clare decided on repentance and a clean sponge-out of the past. So, when she discovered a bundle of scrabbled-up and unwholesome looking bills, threats, and demands for money, shoved to the back of this particular drawer, she bravely faced them, smoothing them out one by one, reading the contents, and saying "Ah!" or "O!" or even "Dear me!" at frequent intervals.

Some of the envelopes were not even opened, for the name of the firm printed on the outside had told her guilty conscience all that she wished to know of their contents. But she opened them now, courageously resolved on hearing the worst about herself.

One of them, three months old, with "Bassett & Molton" marked on the outside, contained a check, as well as a letter.

"It can't be true!" said Clare.

"It's a dream!"

"Or I'm in heaven. Yes, that's it—I'm in heaven."

But she looked round the room, which was not in the least like heaven. Then she read the check, which was for seventeen pounds two shillings and eightpence—the sum seemed, somehow, familiar. And then finally she read the letter, signed "Bartholomew Bassett."

Her hopes fell as she read. The sum of seventeen pounds two shillings and eightpence was not a gift, sent by fortune at the eleventh hour to lift her over her difficulty connected with Don's wedding. It was, apparently, the exact amount that she had owed Bassett & Molton—O, for ages—without bothering about it much, because they had bothered her so much less than other firms. And fantastic though it might appear, Mr. Bartholomew Bassett had sent it to her, so that she might send it back to him in payment of her debt. He did not actually say so, but it was crystal clear to Clare that this was what he meant.

"I ought to have done it at once. O, damn, what must he be thinking of me all this time? December the thirty-first? I ought to have opened it on New Year's day."

HER cheeks grew hot as it occurred to her that what Mr. Bartholomew Bassett, undoubtedly an eccentric tradesman, must be thinking of her was that she had hung on to the money and spent it.

"O God! But how could I have known? He ought to have written outside, 'There's money within.' Then I'd have had it open like a wolf nosing out a lamb."

Sitting cross-legged among her litter of worldly possessions, she pondered on this dilemma. Then impulsively sprang up, jammed on her hat, and hurled herself on to a bus. She had better explain in person to Mr. Bartholomew Bassett why her behavior had appeared unscrupulous over this check.

. . . "Because I'm not in the least an unscrupulous person," she gabbled breathlessly to the stern old gentleman who had received her at her special plea in his private office. Thank heaven he was old, at any rate, for now she could tell him all about Don and Camilla—O, and everything: Don's awful sisters, and gestures, and what Camilla's mother would be thinking—"And naturally I'd have been a fool not to see why you sent me just seventeen pounds two shillings and eightpence. I'm terribly sorry, by the way, that I hadn't been able to pay it before, but times have been hard—you must realize that. It was such a kind thought of yours and you must have been thinking me just one of those dishonest cads who grab what they can and hang on to it."

"Not you particularly," said Mr. Bartholomew Bassett, with bitterness.

"O, wasn't I the only one, then?" with relief. "O, I am glad, in a way; because when I opened your letter I thought that every one would have done the right thing except me."

"No. Not every one. Never mind that now. Tell me how it was you didn't open my letter until today."

SO she told him, with that wealth of vivid personal detail which Clare could never keep out of her narrative, although quite unconscious that she was not being entirely stark and businesslike.

". . . And so you see, there I sat, all crunched up and hopeless in sackcloth and ashes, because there's nothing worse for one's morale, is there, than not being able to do the right thing at the right moment in the right way? And I'd have spent at least—well, shall we say seven pounds, on that beast's wedding present . . . and that would have left ten pounds two and eightpence for some sort of a rigout to wear at the wedding. I could have paid that much down, anyhow, and chanced the rest."

"But," put in the head of the firm of Bassett & Molton, with peculiar precision in his tone, "I gather that you had not got, shall we say, seventeen pounds two and eightpence?"

"Not until I happened to open your letter and found your check."

"I gathered—forgive me if I'm wrong—that you looked on that money as essentially intended by me to repay what you owed to the firm?"

"Look here," Clare admitted frankly, "I told you I was scrupulous, and so I am, but I'm not a saint and I can't help being tempted. It did look as though that money had arrived just when I most needed it and at a crisis of my life. And I did think that in a way there was just a hope that you might see that, whoever you were. Only I simply couldn't borrow it, could I, without talking it over with you first? Because just for the moment I'm not quite sure what's providence and what's you, and which I ought to listen to. So what would you do?" Clare finished, earnestly gazing at him, and sincerely believing that she would get an unbiased solution to her problem.

The rosy old gentleman with the round face and the incongruously brooding eyes could not help smiling at the girl. She was so very attractive, slim and tall and fair as a boy of ancient Greece, and so very serious in her confidence, and so hopelessly wrong in all her ethical conclusions. Still she had, after all, brought him the check the minute she had found it. She had a curious sense of honesty, lopsided certainly, and with two or three expediently set exits and entrances. But since the result of his experiment early in the new year Bartholomew Bassett had come to value honesty in whatever odd shape it chose to present itself.

"So you expect me to hand you back this check with my blessing?"

"That's awful, when you put it like that. I only wondered, that's all, if you could possibly be brought to see that I could possibly have been justified in not using it to pay my bill with you—to settle my account, I mean. You don't like it called bills, do you, when you're a very old established firm? I've noticed that."

Mr. Bassett chuckled; then quickly frowned again. "When you boast that you have a scrupulous nature I think that was the phrase you used—and setting aside for the moment the question of this check, do you consider it altogether scrupulous, my dear young lady, to come here month after month, buying articles for which you have no means of paying?"

INWARDLY intimidated but outwardly still fearless, Clare replied, though not cheekily, because he was such an old gentleman: "Do you consider it altogether scrupulous to tackle me about that, when I've come round to ask your advice about this?"

"No. No, I don't. That's a fair thrust. But I'll have my answer all the same. I'm not going to lose my faith in human nature without at least learning a bit about it in return."

"O!" cried Clare, terribly distressed, "have I made you lose your faith in human nature? What am I to do? But haven't you lost it rather easily?"

"You're not the only one." Without being aware of it, he had been longing to confide in some one and he confided now in Clare Arundel, telling her the whole story of the experiment which, on the whole, had not been a great success. Some of the creditors had been very indignant at his presumption and had torn up the checks and sent back the pieces. Some had just kept the money and used it; he had not heard from them.

Some, perhaps, he gathered from examination of his pass book, had thrown away the letters without opening them, and a few—and he deemed these the worst and meanest—had used a little of the money to pay Bassett & Molton something on account (doubtless to keep them quiet) and had kept the rest for themselves. A few, again, heart-rendingly few, had returned the check, haughtily companioned by their own check for the same amount ("Yes, but they might have done that sooner!").

And about one-fifth of the company had done as Mr. Bassett had intended them to do, whether in shame or in pure relief he could not tell, and had used the money he sent them to wipe off their accounts with Bassett & Molton.

Nevertheless, the total result of the scheme had been undoubtedly a disappointment. And an idealist's fanatical dream of the whole unbroken two thousand pounds rolling out and then rolling back to him without exception, restoring his sturdy faith in fundamental honesty—that had been revealed as something so silly and grotesque that he could not even find a name for it.

"I expect," Mr. Bassett finished ruefully, "that no one in the wide world except myself could have been such an old idiot."

Clare was on fire with sympathy and eager to apply balm and ointment to the soreness of his soul. "I'm just the same sort of idiot, because I'd been absolutely sure, when you told me that you'd done it to every one, that every one except me had done the right thing. And please don't imagine that I didn't feel an awful criminal when I suggested using your money for wedding presents and things, because I did. Only there are times when I simply have to be a criminal or I can't get on at all!"

Refreshed and amused by her attitude, Bartholomew Bassett nevertheless returned unchivalrously to his old attack: "Then, do you feel a criminal every time you order something that you know you can't pay for, here or at other shops?"

"O, no!" Clare argued, intensely surprised, "because while I'm ordering it I always feel sure I'll be able to pay when the time comes, unless I have bad luck. And I'm not extravagant. I only order shoes and handbags and suitcases when I simply have to have them."

Gravely he asked her whether in that mood it appeared to her as grossly unfair that he, symbolizing Bassett & Molton, should have shoes and handbags and suitcases and she not have them?

CLARE at once fell into the trap and very handsomely granted him that he could not help this unequal arrangement, but, yes, that was what she did feel!

"Then, when we—symbolizing the whole of Bond street—send in our accounts from time to time, you are naturally resentful? We are rude and curt and inconsiderate?"

Clare's eyes began to twinkle. "You don't mean to be, I'm sure."

"Thank you. But you do feel resentful?"

"Well . . . One does so hate paying for anything when one's not wearing it any more, and it's worn out. Or else you got it as a present for some dud you've stopped liking . . . And I'm afraid there's no way one can be reminded to pay without feeling resentful. If you're asked courteously you think the firm are being sarcastic, and if they're terse you damn well won't be spoken to like that!"

"I understand."

And he actually did understand. Understood also her point of view about panache, and ending an affair in style and the vital necessity of sending Camilla a really good wedding present—a present that should, moreover, have an air of breeding about it, as though the sender were accustomed to do no less, whatever the circumstances. It had to be the sort of present, too, which would make it absolutely clear to Don that she didn't care a fish-slice whom he married. . . .

"Of course you don't!" Mr. Bartholomew Bassett shouted his dislike of that flatfooted, swellheaded young man, Donald Mansfield, who was capable of preferring a Camilla to a Clare!

And they settled down chubbily to a discussion of the present, and of the outfit in which she must appear at the wedding.

Bassett and Molton could supply the present, certainly, and perhaps a good part of her finery. "Finery" was Mr. Bassett's word, and Clare smiled and thought him a prehistoric darling. She wished for something with a delicate swagger about it, and they decided on one of those simple, expensive suits in leaf green suede that had just come in with the spring season. A gay little pull-on hat in the same suede with an impudent tilt of the brim, and a bright, sun yellow crêpe de chine handkerchief worn as a scarf and she would look the least pathetic wedding guest in the world.

Bartholomew Bassett became more and more of a Dickens grandfather as he supervised each detail and reminded her that it would be an honor and a pleasure if she would allow him to provide the appropriate shoes, but stockings, alas, were not in the répertoire of a maroquinerie, so that he could not supply them for nothing. Clare had the quaint notion of her uneconomic type that things out of your own shop cost you nothing! But if she would allow an old friend (for by now, indeed, he assumed that he was her old friend and her Uncle Bart and all the rest of it!) to anticipate her birthday, yes, a dozen pairs, mist colored, not too cobwebby; they both agreed in preferring a thick, soft mesh of silk that crunched up with a subtle, tingling feel in the palm of your hand.

Then they went downstairs to choose Camilla's wedding present, a fountain pen and seal in jade and platinum in a luxurious jade green leather case, to be stamped with the monogram C. M.

Clare, being a more than usually articulate person, was able to express her gratitude and the wild relief in her heart. Bartholomew Bassett, in reply, courteously thanked her for returning him his check and reminded her that she was pledged to lunch with him in a week's time, the day after the wedding, and gladden him with her account of it. Then he sent her home in his car.

RETURNING to his office after seeing her off, he passed Mr. William Clarke on the stairs. Mr. William Clarke did not know what he had done to deserve that curious little nod of greeting, sly, triumphant, gay, from his employer.

Donald wanted Clare to come with him for a stroll after dinner, but she insisted that before anything else she must write a long letter to explain matters to her Uncle Bart. So she went upstairs to the bedroom and smiled with lazy happiness at the fire which flickered and leaped in the grate, suddenly illumining the prim mottoes and proverbs that the conscientious host of the hotel had had lightly carved on every available piece of woodwork: "There's no smoke without a fire" warningly round the hearth; "Hot love is soon cold" over the door to the bathroom; "A merry heart goes all the way" on the wardrobe doors.

The long room was shaped something like a ship, and the inn itself had a strangely inappropriate air of a coaster just come to port. Yet outside the huge windows, instead of the expected foam and tumble of green waves were only moors, humped and slanted into far bluer distances till they met and surrendered to the pale evening horizon. A brown stream rushed at a great pace under the stone bridge just below Clare's window. Every few yards it swirled and poured over into eddies of rich cream, and then again ran brown, and bright, and clear; a most companionable stream, especially with the moon slipping over it in broken discs of gold.

Clare pushed aside the curtains and stood for a few moments looking out. Then, with a conscientious little sigh, she sat down to the writing table. After all, if it had not been for Bartholomew Bassett she would not be here now. . . .

Dear Uncle Bart: This is to explain my telegram that I won't be able to lunch with you tomorrow after all, to tell you about the wedding. So I am writing to tell you about it instead. It had one or two of what the papers call "unusual features." In fact, I was the bride, not Camilla, which is a very unusual feature for me. We were married at a register office by special license, and here we are, being terribly fellicitus.

She broke off to ask her husband, who had just followed her up, how to spell "felicitous." Donald gravely supplied the need. Clare contested his scholarship, but gave in. He dropped down into a deep armchair in front of the fire and tenderly watched her absorbed back and concentrated shoulders.

"I was sure there were two l's," murmured Clare. And she resumed her narrative:

It mostly happened because of the wedding present that you helped me choose for that beast Camilla, though I suppose I oughtn't to call her that beast now, but shake hands over the tennis net and say, "The better man won!" and things like that. I think the better man did, you know, because although I'm pretty awful in lots of ways Don's going to be ever so much happier with me than with her. He knew that all along, and so did I.

And they had a frightful quarrel when my lovely present arrived and was unpacked, because she actually wanted to send it back to me and said it was an insult. Though how any one could possibly call that divine, heavenly fountain pen and seal an insult, and with C. M. engraved all over the

By Helen Bartlett.

VIA the mail bag:

"I have but one maid, who does everything—cleaning, cooking, serving, and attending to the doorbell. I know that I cannot dress her as attractively as I could if her duties were simplified and if she had help, but I should like to find the most satisfactory costume for her for mornings and for afternoon and evening. MRS. H."

You are quite right in putting more emphasis on the practical than the chic, so far as your maid's appearance is concerned. The best plan I think would be to have her wear in the morning black or gray with white collar and cuffs and a rather capacious apron. In the afternoon, and while serving, the best choice would be black again, but with dantier apron, collar, cuffs, and, perhaps, a cap. The dainty pastel colored dresses are attractive but hardly practical for the maid who must cook as well as serve.

Formal Daytime Dress.

A cutaway coat of black in material such as unfinished worsted, cheviot, or cashmere; gray trousers with definite stripes in black and a single or double breasted waistcoat of the same fabric as the coat. A possible exception to the latter is the white worn by bridegroom and best man at a wedding. The shirt worn is white with starched or plaited bosom. With a wing collar is worn a four-in-hand, Ascot or, if preferred, a bow tie, in black and white or black and gray striped or figured silk. Shoes are plain tipped calfskin or patent leather. A top silk hat is the only correct accompaniment.

Such wires are addressed to "Mr. and Mrs." They are timed to arrive after, not before, the ceremony and are sent to the place where the reception is being held. A "congratulatory" message is never sent to a bride; she is not congratulated; she is wished happiness. But it is entirely correct to send a congratulatory message to both bride and groom.

Quiet Home Wedding.

"My wedding is to be informal. At 9:30 in the morning about fifty of our friends will come to my home to see me married and then have breakfast. I wish to wear a traveling suit and hat. Is this correct? Should I have music? Would it be permissible to serve the breakfast buffet style? Lack of room and of servants would make it very difficult to do otherwise. "J. K."

It would be correct for you to wear your traveling costume. Omit music, by all means, at such a simple ceremony. The buffet plan of breakfast service is excellent. Have the first course fruit juices, ice cold, in glasses on trays from which guests may help themselves. The main course can be any suitable dish you like.

"When a young unmarried woman gives a theater party how does she arrange about paying for the cab that will take her guests to the theater and about giving the usher the tickets? I am afraid my male guests might be embarrassed. "K. R."

It's quite simple. Give the tickets to your escort before you go to the theater and let him take care of them. Also give him, before you leave your house, the money to take care of cabs or any other incidentals. You needn't take care of any of these transactions yourself.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

The set of stamps shown above were issued by the short-lived soviet republic which Bela Kun attempted to set up in Hungary in 1919. It was intended as a memorial to the leaders of radicalism of all ages and shows the portraits of Karl Marx, the German Socialist, father of communism and grandfather of comedians; Alexander Petofi, lyric poet of Hungary, killed in an uprising of the people against the rulers; Ignaz Jozsef Martinovics, leader of the Hungarian Jacobins, beheaded in 1795; Gyorgy Dozsa, a peasant in charge of an army sent against the Turks, who turned his army against his rulers, and Friedrich Engels, Prussian by birth, a resident of England who joined with Marx in writing the communistic manifesto in 1884 and was active in organizing the Internationale of 1864. This set, which is variously called "The Hall of Fame" and "The Rogues Gallery," is one of the few mementoes of a strange government which lasted only from March 21 to Aug. 7, 1919.

Mr. Cabeen will be glad to answer questions concerning stamps. A stamped, self-addressed envelope should be inclosed in case a personal reply is desired.

IN the early days of postage stamps no provision was made for separating the individual stamps and it was necessary to cut them apart as needed. Steps were soon taken to improve this condition and a system for perforating stamps was patented by Henry Archer. Great Britain purchased this patent and after some improvements began issuing perforated stamps in 1854.

This illustration shows some of the types of perforations. From left to right, they are: Imperforate; coarse perforation, fine perforation, and two examples of rough perforation.

Within a few years most of the larger countries had bought machines or had built them along similar ideas.

Machines for perforating stamps are built on one of two mechanical principles, either operating in a rotary manner with the perforating pins arranged on the rim of a small wheel, or in a vertical direction with the pins on a bar like the teeth of a comb. Either type may be built to perforate single rows of stamps, or entire sheets, at one operation.

"Blind" Perforation.

In true perforation the pins which punch the holes remove small bits of paper, a sort of philatelic caviar, while in rouletting no paper is removed in the process. Except in a very few instances the pins are round, the exceptions being square or diamond shaped.

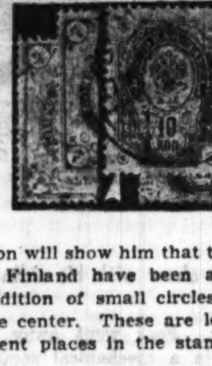
"Blind" perforation is a term used to describe a condition in which the pins do not completely punch out the bits of paper. The holes are marked but so little that at a glance the sheet appears to be unperforated.

Imperforate and unperforated are words used to define a total lack of means for separating the stamps. Part-perforate refers to a partial lack of such means. Collectors refer to perforations by gauge numbers, which number is determined by counting the perforations in a space of 2 centimeters [about ¾ of an inch]. Thus perf. 12 means that there are 12 holes in the standard unit, and does not refer to the number of holes along the entire side of the stamp.

Compound perforation means that different gauge machines are used to perforate the stamp in different directions. Perf. 10x12 means that the stamp is perforated 10 along the top and bottom, and 12 up and down at the sides.

Stamps of Finland.

The beginner has considerable difficulty in distinguishing the 1891-'92 issue of Finnish stamps from those of Russia. There should be no trouble at all for a cursory examination will show him that the designs for Finland have been altered by the addition of small circles with dots in the center. These are located at prominent places in the stamp designs.



Prior to this issue Finland had been permitted distinctive stamps by Russia and no doubt would have continued to enjoy this favor had not a misguided postmaster refused to honor the Russian stamps. An important personal letter of the tsar was posted at a Finnish town as the emperor's yacht cruised along the coast, but was soon returned to the boat with the notation that Russian stamps were not good in Finland. It is said that the tsar was wild with rage and forthwith issued a decree abolishing the entire postal service of Finland and supplanting it with a Russian organization. The Russian postmasters could not read the Finnish addresses and the postal service practically ceased. When complaint was made to the tsar his reply was quickly given: "Learn Russian and address your letters in it."

Your Questions.

A. C. A.—An "embossed grill" is an impression on a stamp made by a device which breaks the surface of the paper in much the same manner as does the modern check protector.

The impression is usually rectangular in form and the roughened or even broken paper at this point absorbs the canceling ink more readily than does the normal paper, and consequently a stamp so treated is less likely to be "washed," i. e., to have its cancellation removed for purposes of fraud.

D. R. M.—"Burelage" or "burele" as it is also called is a fine network of dots, lines or miscroscopic words found on the stamps of some countries. It varies greatly in its use, sometimes being applied to the entire sheets of stamps, and at other times forming the background of the design. In some cases it is printed on the back of the stamps, and in one case it forms a narrow band on the backs of the stamps. Usually "burelage" on the backs of stamps is termed "moiré."

First Day Covers.

The stamp to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the Proclamation of Peace on April 19, 1783, will be placed on sale at Newburgh, N. Y., on April 19. First day covers may be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelopes to the postmaster, Newburgh, N. Y. A better impression of the cancellation will be obtained if you put enough paper in your envelopes to simulate an ordinary letter. There is no charge for the service.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Remnants Left Over from Sewing Can Make Life a Bit Brighter for Needy and Invalids and Help Them to Self-Support.

By Sally Joy Brown.

WHEN you're straightening up your sewing room in the wake of a session with the dressmaker, or after your personal snipping and stitching, do you simply sweep up all the surplus bits of cotton, silk, or wool, empty them into the dustbin, and let it go at that? If you do, I'm asking you to change your ways.

Wouldn't you like to make a little bundle of your scraps, call on me for an address, and send them merrily on their way to make the hours a bit brighter or provide a tiny income for some one?

How'd you like to take a peek at my files and see just how many people are longing for some of these colorful bits of material we know are so often shooed out of the house as soon as possible by particular housewives?

Mrs. A. N. has had arthritis for the last eight years, and is unable to do much, but she could make patchwork quilts if only she had the patches.

H. B. and A. G. are both patients in a tuberculosis sanitarium. Their weary hours in bed would be considerably lightened if they had some gay scraps of silk or cotton to make into pillow tops, doll dresses, and all the other fascinating things to be fashioned from stray bits of material.

Mrs. P. W. is another invalid with sewing as her only recreation. She would like to have that tea towel you never finished, or any other kind of embroidery work.

The postman brought another letter from a tuberculosis patient in a sanitarium about 200 miles from Chicago. She makes and sells small novelties as a means of purchasing little comforts she would otherwise be unable to have. She has written to me asking for silk pieces.

Have you a few bright balls of yarn tucked away some place? If so, wouldn't you like to mail them to Mrs. S. A. E.? Here's her letter:

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: May I ask for something? I am recovering from a long illness, involving two serious operations, and I must spend a great deal of time sitting with my feet elevated. I am not allowed to read for long periods, and I should like to have some colored yarns so that I could crochet an afghan. All shades and hues are suitable, and since this work is easily and simply done, I anticipate a great deal of pleasure if only I can secure some materials. My husband was unemployed for 15 months and has only temporary work at the present time. We manage to get along, but there are no extra funds with which to buy yarn, as we have five children. Perhaps you know of some one who has some odds and ends of yarn to discard.

"Gratefully,

Now—the waste baskets won't get any more of those precious scraps, will they?

"Dear Miss Brown: Do you think you might find among your readers a young girl who would like to receive dancing lessons in exchange for piano accompaniment? I would like to have some girl who enjoys dancing and cannot afford to study help me out, and, I hope, benefit herself a little.

"V. F. P."

Here's an opportunity for a pianist who has a little leisure. If you would like to take advantage of it, write to Miss P. in care of this department. Send no postage. All letters will be forwarded, and the person selected will be notified.

We're sending out an S. O. S. today! We've had so many requests for clothing for approaching first communion and confirmation ceremonies, and so far we've been unable to fill the majority of them. These are such important occasions in a child's life, and being properly dressed means so much to them! Please look over the following letters, and if you've a little white dress or a boy's dark suit hanging unused in a closet, I know you'll want to put it to good use:

"Dear Miss Brown: My little girl is going to make her first communion and needs a white dress, size 10, and white slippers, size 1. Her father has been out of work for almost three years and I am unable to buy the clothing for her. She is 8 years old.

This letter comes from the west side of the city.

A boy of ten scrawls his own little letter, requesting a blue suit, size 12, and a white shirt. He lives on the south side. His initials are E. H.

Mrs. R. L. needs a white dress for a girl, size 16, and slippers, size 4½ or 5. Her son requires a black suit and shoes. He is 8 years old.

If you can supply one of the above mentioned articles of clothing you may be sure it will be appreciated.

case, I simply can't understand, can you? But Don told her she couldn't possibly, and the row worked up, and I expect her mother made things worse.

"Don, did Camilla's mother make things worse?"

Don nodded emphatically. "Much worse."

So they broke it off, and thus we may see, Uncle Bart darling, what a good thing it was that I had the right sort of an instinct about sending a present, and that you had the right sort of instinct about giving me one to send. Don moped for a day or two and then he came to see me, and there's no need to go into that, is there? The lucky part of it was that I had—again thanks to you—a lovely outfit to be married in, and Don said I looked like——

CLARE tried "Persephone" in various ways on the blotting paper. Finally she capitulated and again asked Don to come to her aid.

"Ignorant baggage!" lovingly from her husband. "Where were you educated?"

"O, well, if you can't oblige I'll just call it the Spirit of Spring."

"Who's the Spirit of Spring?"

"Me, in my lovely beech green suede with the yellow handkerchief."

"You can't say that about yourself, Clare!"

"I didn't. You said it."

"Yes, but you can't repeat it in a letter!"

"I can. It'll please Uncle Bart. He gave it to me to go to your wedding in. I told you."

"Yes, and I'm not sure it was altogether delicate for you to have worn it at yours," he teased her.

"It was yours, too."

"Mostly yours."

"Persephone," whispered Clare, trying it once again with an anagrammatic rearrangement of the letters.

He yielded and told her. "And you can add from me that you did really look rather delectable."

He also says that I did look rather dellectable, so thank you very much again. I don't know what I should have done without you.

But now, though, the problem is, you see, what am I to do about my wedding present to Camilla which, of course, was returned with all her other presents to everybody, and which I brought up with me here because I loved it so much I couldn't bear not to, and it's the only wedding present I've had, as nobody knew about Don and me? On the other hand, I suppose you might easily say that I haven't had it at all, because it was meant for Camilla. But then, I might easily argue, mightn't I, that although I was sending it to Camilla it was meant for Don's wedding, as otherwise would I have bothered about Camilla ever at all? A million times no! And this was Don's wedding, so can't it be said, in a sort of way, that the present chosen for the bride ought to go to the bride? Especially with her initials on it.

And I chose it with as much care for Camilla as if it had been for me myself. And who was it said—was it you?—that if you give freely and generously there's always an unexpected reward for you? (No, it wasn't you; it's over the bed here.) But anyhow you and I, in a way, have had the same sort of rather deep experience, which shows how alike we are. Because you sent out a check to me and got it back, and I sent Camilla a lovely present and got it back, and we've both been rewarded a thousandfold, if you count getting to know me a reward, which I hope you do, because I think you're a lamb. And Don has promised that he's sure to think so, too, though I expect he'll be more manly and reserved about it and call you sir for quite a long time.

"Won't you, Don?"

"Won't I what, sweetheart? I was half asleep."

"Call Uncle Bart sir?"

"As often as he likes. I'll buy all my trouser presses there, too."

"I don't know if you can," doubtfully, "it's all lovely expensive leather things—leather, and pigskin, and calf, and suede, and lizard, and crocodile, and snakeskin, and——"

"Just a zoo. Clare, sweet, have you nearly finished that immense three volume letter? We haven't come here only to write to Uncle Bart, you know."

"No, but it's a duty, and duty comes first. Can't you go and have a bath?"

"No. I want to take you out and make love to you over there, just on the other side of the stone bridge."

"It sounds tempting," said Clare a trifle ruefully.

"Well, then, just sign it 'Yours in haste, Clare,' and come along and take some notice of me. I'm feeling left out with all this Uncle Bartery going on."

"You're not left out. I've asked you to help two or three times. You've spelled several words."

"O, well, just a tiny bit more!"

"Don, will this do, do you think?" She twisted round in her chair and read it out:

Of course I would send the present back to you at once if you like, only I can't help knowing that then you'd probably just simply pack it up again and send it back to me, and it seems a pity to give you so much trouble because it would only be dishonorably pretending to not know that you'd be sorry later on that you never gave me a wedding present at all. At least, not on the day itself. And it would be too late afterwards, and especially as you've been so mixed up with it all, and of course you'll go on being mixed up with our lives and be godfather to lots of our children and give them silver mugs, and spoons, and things. So, would you like me to be honest and keep it straightaway without any more fuss?"

"YOU little sophist!" exclaimed her husband.

"What's that?"

"Well, you wouldn't be doing all this honesty-on-both-sides stuff if it didn't work out at just this: That you like the pen and the seal, and that you hate the idea of sending them back."

"Is that being a so-sophist?"

"Yes, Clare."

She argued, with a slight passion, that he was being unfair. "I haven't written a word that isn't true, and Uncle Bart'll understand that, even if you don't."

"'Yours in haste, Clare'," Don reminded her, declining to waste any more time on the terrific problem of Mr. Bartholomew Bassett and his wedding present.

So Clare finally scribbled:

Now Don has muddled me so that I don't know what's honest and what isn't. He says I'm a soffist and that, anyhow, you must have peculiar notions of honesty, the same as me. I can't help thinking that if our ages had fitted we'd have been much more suited to each other than me and Don.

"Don, do you want to hear this bit?"

"Please," said Donald, "I'm enjoying this letter."

Again she read aloud her last paragraph.

"How did you spell sophist?"

"Never mind. . . . I don't care."

He hauled himself up and came across the room to look over her shoulder. Then he laughed. Then his arms went round her, and it was very difficult for her to write at all, though she managed to scribble one more line:

At any rate, if it's all right, just send me a telegram.

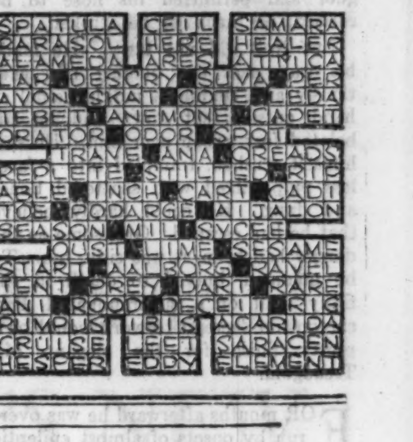
Crossword Puzzle Answer



The UPHILL ROAD By Rupert Hughes

The Story So Far:

At the behest of her father Dicey Wayne flies from Paris to London to see Oliver Treadgold and advise him to return to America, where his mother is ill. Dicey and Oliver, known as Noll, quarrelsome friends since childhood, disagree over his decision to stay in England and settle down as a country gentleman. On her way to America she learns that her father's chain of banks has failed. After Oliver has rented the ancestral home of Lord Mulgrave, the latter tells him about the failure of the Wayne banks. He is overwhelmed, since his entire fortune was held in trust by Guilford Wayne. Arriving in New York, Dicey takes the train for her father's farm. At the station Ben Laraway, called the boy mayor, recalls himself to her as a childhood playmate. When Oliver returns to America, his mother tells him to see Wayne, and Oliver starts for the farm in a towering rage at the old fellow for having lost the Treadgold fortune. Dicey prevents him from annoying her father. Ben Laraway interrupts their clash. Noll decides to fire his shiftless superintendent and take charge of his farm.

INSTALLMENT VI.

Dog Eat Dog.

THE condition of all the styes and stalls was odious and Noll decided that Rotch was hopelessly unfit to keep his place. To shame him and furnish an excuse for his dismissal, Noll took up a shovel and wielded it. He knew how a well kept horse should live and, after all, a farmer's chosen element was manure. Noll must learn to like it. As he worked he came to the stall of an aged farm horse that he remembered from childhood.

Mike was his name and Mike had been an old horse then. Noll did a little figuring and decided that Mike must be all of thirty years old. He was a big gray monster and his color looked to be a confirmation of his age. As he stood now the towering hindquarters of a gigantic draught horse almost filled his stall; at the other end, beyond the huge shoulders, the head was drooping.

Noll was impelled to go in and talk to the veteran. He put away a two-tined pitchfork he held and he smacked the stout rump, called "Give over, old man!" then, since a pile of neglected manure barred his way, thoughtlessly skipped across it to reach the manger.

His projectilelike arrival threw the horse into a panic. Mike jerked up his head and leaped as high as the halter would permit. A ton of flesh and bone crashed against Noll, hurling him along the side of the stall. His ribs would have cracked if he had not been knocked forward to one knee. Great bearded hoofs came down almost on his hands and face. When he rose to his feet he confronted the big bared teeth and the white rolling eyes of a plunging beast.

He managed to catch the halter rope and swing the great head aside before the jaws could reach him, and he spoke in a voice whose calmness was due more to a paralysis of fear than to any hardihood. He pleaded with the old soldier: "Mike, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. You're almost as big a fool as I am."

Mike gradually realized that the invader was merely an idiot and not a tiger, so he returned to his normal languor and permitted his nose to be rubbed, his neck to be stroked.

But Noll did not tarry. He made his way past the bulging ribs cautiously and, finding a milking stool at hand outside, sat down and let his belated fear sweep over him. He saw himself crushed, trampled into a faceless pulp mixed with shattered bones and dung. He could hardly believe that he had escaped. Grewsome as the danger had been, it was silly, too. To be pounded, brayed to death in the filthy stall of a superannuated Percheron too decrepit to work would be a pretty finish for the elegant Mr. Treadgold.

FOR months afterward he was overrun by onsets of almost epileptic terror as he remembered this moment. Whatever else farm life might be, it was not without its adventure. More was yet to come.

He had hardly resumed control of his muscles enough to walk to the door when he saw a man approaching, coming in by the short-cut path to the village. He fitted the description of Rotch, burly, boozy, dangerous. As he swaggered unsteadily past, Noll startled him with a quiet word:

"Your name Rotch?"

"'s my business. Who're you?"

"I'm Mr. Treadgold."

"Umph!"

"Humph!"

"I suppose that in all this time you can't have failed to see what my first glance tells me."

"What's 'at?"

"That you've been doing next to no work at all."

This was a jolt, but Noll kept his poise:

"Why should you be paid for wrecking the place?"

"Why sh'd I wreck myself for nothin'? Pay me and see what happens."

"Pay you! Don't be humorous. I'm going to sue you for ten thousand dollars' damages to the farm. How much wages have you been getting?"

"You mean how much have I ain't been gettin'."

"Have it your own way. What are your wages supposed to be?"

"A hunner'n twenty-fi' a mont'."

"Including a cottage and food and all the graft you can squeeze."

"Mighty little graft these times out of a no-good farm like this."

"Well, your pay stops today."

"Wha's 'at?"

"I'm going to give you a chance to redeem yourself. I'm cutting your wages in two. I'll pay you something on account of the old bill and sixty-five a month from now on, provided you buckle down to real work."

"Lea' me see soome of that money you talk about."

"No money, no work."

"Then get out."

"Who says so?"

"I say so."

"Look what's talking! Who's goin' to put me off?"

"I am."

"You and the National Guard? Where's your reg'ment? Bring 'em on. I feel like lickin' the Uninetéd States army."

He threw off his coat and let it lie where it fell, which was a poor place even for so poor a coat. He rolled back his fists and snorted: "I been lookin' for a Treadgold I could really talk to. I'm goin' to take about two weeks' wages outen your pink hide right now."

Noll hated to resort to a weapon in such a challenge to bare fists, but he was not at his best and at his best he was no match for Rotch. He was in no mood to be rolled around in the muck, so he took up the pitchfork he had been dabbling in hay and whipped it to a level.

"Come right along, Rotch, and I'll toss you over there with the rest of the manure."

Rotch sneered so contemptuously that Noll moved forward with a look of business in his eye. Rotch tried to brush the fork aside but only scratched his hands on the two sharp tines. The points were tickling his belly before he began to back up. Then he fell over a misplaced pail and executed an excellent back somersault. When he came to a stop he found Noll standing over him carefully placing the two-tined fork across his throat and pressing it into the soil. Noll had to quell the corgi's enthusiasm for Rotch's flesh

Then he leaned down and struck at the chow with his riding crop.

"Now, I'll give you fifty dollars on your back debt and I'll pay the rest as you earn it. If you try to attack me when I let you up I'll no more think of dirtying my hands on you than on any other garbage. I'll just put a bullet through you as if you were a mad dog and I'll think no more of it. Do you want to get up or do you want to be punctured?"

Before he could yield Rotch had to rid himself of some very bad language and to salve his self-respect with a few dire threats of what surgical operations he would perform on Noll; he had even to cry a little. Noll waited patiently in sympathy. Finally Rotch began to laugh and wheedle and take it all as a good joke and Noll as a good feller who could see when a guy was only jokin'. At last Noll extracted the pitchfork from the ground and let Rotch up.

When Rotch whined that the work was beyond the ability of any one man, Noll announced that he, himself, was going to take up farming and do his full share. The first thing was to clean up the place and keep it clean. He startled Rotch by insisting that not only the stables and the poultry house but even the pig pens should be kept as neat as drawing rooms. He also demanded a prompt supply of wood for the fireplaces—a farmhouse was unbearable in winter without fireplaces. Rotch protested that he could not find the time to do everything, so Noll decided to take over the provision of wood.

When he had set Rotch seriously to work he fumbled with the thick wallet in his hip pocket as if making sure that his pistol was in good working order and then handed the pitchfork to Rotch to put away.

He stood about, helping Rotch at times and making lightly amusing remarks. He even went to the extent of saying that he would like to have Rotch teach him farming and that Rotch's advice would always be welcome. They parted as the best of friends, though Noll judged that Rotch had some mental reservations that would bear watching.

THERE was no limit of timber on the farm and it would help the forest to clear out the excess. Noll began to remember bits of knowledge acquired as a boy on the farm and information picked up from occasional articles he had read in idleness when other reading matter was lacking. He rather fancied himself chopping trees. It was a task peculiarly suited to great men, a statesmanly chore. Wasn't it Gladstone who felled so many sturdy oaks? Anyway, Noll could recall that his father had been in the habit of going back to the woods whenever he put on unwieldy weight. He would say:

"I'll just take an ax and chop off a few inches of that stomach."

Noll had seen pictures of the ex-kaiser keeping himself ready for a recall from exile by chopping timber. Noll was in exile, too. He would chop trees and make himself fitter for a hand-to-hand argument with Rotch. He was scathed by the thought that he had had to resort to a pitchfork in self-defense. Never again. While toiling he would devise some great scheme for doing away with panics. The whole world had gone mad with hydrophobia. People were just running about howling, frothing, and biting one another, exchanging germs.

All the nations seemed to have turned into morose and terror stricken mad dogs, a pack of mad wolves, tearing their own cripples to pieces. There must be an antitoxin for panics. Why not? Noll wished that he could invent one, a serum of some kind or a vaccine that would immunize mankind to this intermittent delirium tremens. He decided to think it over. The farm would be a good place to work out a scheme. While he was waiting for his inspiration he would build up the farm so that it would at least feed him and his mother. Hogs would come in handy for self-support with a market for the overplus. He had read the "Dissertation on Roast Pig." He had read that all the great railroads of the west were built by bacon-fed armies. There would be honor and pelf in pork. But his mother must never know.

SHE was at the door waiting for him. He was proud of his rural achievements and forgot the condition of his clothes and the barnyard flavor of the air about him. When he put out his arms to embrace her she retreated from him in distress, holding her nose and motioning him away. When he looked surpised and hurt she moaned:

"O, my boy, forgive me! You've been out in the farm working, haven't you?"

"Just mucking about."

"To think that my beautiful son, my exquisite Noll, should have to be a groom in a stable!" She began to cry: "It's too cruel; I can't stand it! Your hands, your beautiful hands!"

"My hands are no better than anybody else's, and they'll wash."

"O, I know, but——" When she would have embraced him in spite of his scent he backed through the door:

"Keep off. I could be arrested for fragrancy. But it's fun, mother; I love it. I want to be an aromatic farmer."

"O, no, you don't! You just say that to be brave. And you are brave to work so hard at such odious tasks. And the fault is all Guilford Wayne's. If he hadn't stolen the money your dear father left us you wouldn't have to give up all the beauty and comforts of life. If you can make him give back a part of his thefts you can be a gentleman again. You must go see him again and demand the return of part—why not all—of our estate?"

Noll felt that such a visit would bring no fit results, but his mother made a pitiful figure with no funds and no prospect of any. She was one who needed opulence. She had enjoyed it all her long life and she was too old to begin roughing it. Her health was breaking under the strain. For her sake Noll vowed that in spite of Dicey he would wring some money out of Wayne.

Eliza arrived from the telephone.

"Miss Skipway's on the phone, sir."

"Speak of the devil and you hear Alberta's merry, merry laughter."

"Be nice to her," his mother interposed. "Her father has about all the money that's left in the world."

To please her Noll cooed into the telephone.

"Hello, Alberta. Yes, wasn't it exciting? But then you always furnish excitement wherever you go. Life is never dull where you are, Alberta." (A long listening, while he made faces of agony to his mother who implored him in pantomime to be amiable.) "Sorry, I couldn't. Really. I'd love nothing better, but it's my first dinner with my mother since I got back. O, that's a grand idea—good for man and beast. All right, sir. I'll be there. Fine! Sure! At daybreak I'll be beneath your window."

He hung up the telephone and explained:

"I ran off to Europe to escape her and she moves up here! The very day I got back she has her lariat around me."

"What did she want?"

"Why didn't you?"

"I told her I had a mother—a poor one but the best I can do since the depression. I couldn't think of leaving you, darling."

This touched her and she could not protest. He went on:

"Then she proposed the very next available hour. A horseback ride at daybreak tomorrow. I accepted, of course. While we're out I'll see if I can't get her to get me some kind of a job out of her old man, if he has a job that doesn't include rushing Alberta as the chief liability."

"Alberta isn't as bad as you think."

"Nobody could be. I'll go up and bathe and change and try to make myself approachable again."

His mother pondered. She hated to think of her son's marrying anybody. An innate jealousy of any woman who could win his love away from mother tormented her. But if he should marry somebody he didn't love and couldn't love and who would yet bring him money and relief from his money woes without relieving him of his mother's society—what an ideal wife she would be? There would never be any occasion for jealousy of Alberta. Home would always be where his mother was. Alberta was the ideal wife for Noll. Mrs. Treadgold was very strong for Alberta.

While Noll was bathing and changing his clothes dinner was making ready and his brother Nate had arrived from town. He met Noll at the foot of the stairs with a warm embrace:

"Well, milord, what are his lordship's impressions of America? Does he find our skyscrapers hideous and our women beautiful? And what does he think of our national poverty for a change?"

"Here comes mother! I don't think she likes the joke."

THEY went bounding up the stairs to bring her down in state. With one on either side she was as proud as the mother of Gracchi, and her eyes were candle flames when she entered the dining room to enthrone herself in the chair Nate pulled out for her and to set her feet on the footstool that Noll knelt and placed for her. Then it came over her how shabby her palace was and tears bubbled. Noll squeezed her shoulders and kissed her brow, but Nate laughed:

"I get a big kick out of all this. I feel as if we were banished royalty. It takes the quality to look grand in rags. But you'll be going back to your palace any day now."

"And how do you figure that out, my boy?"

"Easy enough. All we need is a little cash. You can do anything nowadays with cash. Then we go into the market and sell short."

"Don't sell America short—I thought that was the motto," she sighed.

"That was the motto, but America's got to be sold a lot shorter before she gets back to normal length. She's been stretched till she snapped."

Noll asked: "You've got to have cash to sell short. And where do we get it?"

"I think I've found a man to buy my polo ponies. The saving in fodder alone will be a fortune. Then we can mortgage the town house and the Southampton place and this old rookery."

MRS. TREADGOLD had lived to hear the word "mortgage" uttered as something that was neither a good investment to buy nor a comic word in rural melodrama. To Noll the sacrifice of the farm suddenly meant the sacrifice of the only resource they had. It meant the end of his piggery plan. He protested:

"In the first place you can't mortgage anything to anybody nowadays. In the second place if we had a million in cash I'd say keep out of the market, not act like a fool that goes broke at Monte Carlo and borrows money to go broke again. I'm going to call on old Guilford Wayne as soon as I can reach him and make him disgorge what he's stolen from us. That will put mother back in the town house and keep her comfortable. And it will give you a little money for bread and butter, or to speculate with if you're idiot enough. As for me, I'm for the quiet life. I'll stay on the farm here a while and try to squeeze a living out of it."

"You a farmer! Why, you lily fingered loon, what could you do on a farm? Raise orchids? You don't know barley from buckwheat. You a farmer!"

"O, Noll, you ought to have seen mother when the word came that Wayne had cracked. She thought the end of the world was here. She fired all the servants except Eliza: She's fireproof. She let her secretary go—the butler—the chauffeur. She would have sold the town car but nobody would bid, so she put it on ice. She stopped all payments to tradespeople, wouldn't borrow a cent from any of our relatives or friends, just crawled into a hole and pulled the hole in after her."

"What else was there to do?" his mother demanded.

"Nonsense," said Nate. "Where's the old Treadgold spirit? Are we Americans or are we rabbits?"

"Rabbits."

They sat for hours exchanging pessimisms until Noll said:

"Speaking of bad luck, I've got to get up at daybreak to go riding with Alberta—unless Nate wants my job."

But Nate said: "I wouldn't get up at daybreak to go riding with just me."

Noll took an alarm clock with him, but long before it exploded the stored up anxieties of the day and of bad dreams shook him out of his sleep into wide-eyed nightmare. He saw his mother a beggar in a shawl, poking a tin cup at ragged passers-by. He saw himself trying to sell apples or pencils on a corner. All the world was offering apples to all the world. He saw mobs of starving wretches raging through the cities lynching, burning, setting up brief reigns of terror called republics. Then he heard roosters warning the sun that it was late. The sun came obediently up yawning, its first rays flicking through the black like the lantern light of an early farmer. Fear went away with the dawn in a mechanical sequence that made Noll doubt his right to call himself a reasoning being. His thoughts seemed to be hardly more than tides ebbing and flowing at the pull of outside forces. Such birds as wintered thereabout began to discuss breakfast and the hard times; the poultry yard was clamorous with street cries, ducks quacked and hens scolded and bragged, roosters were outbawling auctioneers. Noll propped himself on an elbow and reviewed with the eye of an art critic the salon of the sky. He approved the color scheme, the brush work. Everything had been varnished by a rainstorm, half snow, that had passed across the night unnoticed. Noll applauded:

"Good work, nature!"

Looking from his window he saw Rotch slumping down the steps of his cottage, yawning as if his head were an orange and as if he were trying to peel it. The poor thug was evidently trying to earn his unpaid wages. He leaned against the banister post to scratch his back while he scratched himself with vigorous hands. Noll yawned in contagion and began to scratch his own soft skin. He remembered his engagement with Alberta. The clock gave him a few minutes' leeway for sleep, but in disgust of indolence he sprang from the bed.

He had found in a closet an old riding suit, boots, and a derby hat. The alarm clock blared while he was bathing and he ran to choke it off, shivering almost as loudly as the bell. He shivered into his clothes and shivered downstairs. Nobody was about. The curtains and windows had not been thrown open. Everything had the disheveled look of a house unawakened. The kitchen was empty. He did not know how to make coffee. To fry an egg would be an experiment he was afraid of. He did not dare to approach the perilous gas stove. He nibbled at a slice of yesterday's bread he had found in a bread box and gave a crust or two to Paddy, who had spent the night in his room. He heard a footstep and Eliza came in. She would not permit him to leave until she had made him strong, hot coffee and filled a plate with the gold, ivory, and bronze of scrambled eggs and bacon. He kissed her for a tip and went out with his corgi, who ran to greet the outer dogs with loud rebukes. They rose heavily from their various couches, stretched their spines, and yawned in Noll's face, then followed him to the stable where Rotch was reviling the neglected horses. When he saw Noll he began to scrape a spade hastily.

THIS pleased Noll as evidence that Rotch had reformed and all would go well. He took a look at the swine and set Rotch to cleaning house for his future pets. Then he saddled and bridled the Commodore and swung aboard. His dogs made music about him in a choir of jubilee. He told them that they must stay at home. Alberta had not invited them. They laughed at this and guffawed at his gestures and his orders to return. He shouted "Come along then. I will be obeyed." He renewed old acquaintance with his Airedale Barbwire, he saluted the brace of white bull terriers, Menace and Threat, mere handsful when he last saw them. He had a word for each and every dog and high praise for the universe.

It was a misplaced day that had been bound in with the winter months by some mistake, a wet day that remembered a long past April or foretold a new one. The grace of a road winding, a road like a rope thrown down and left where it fell, a road swirled up around a lift of the soil or a thrust of naked rock, a road that seemed not to lie still but to run as a car speeds and rejoices in its speed, a road that coasted down one hill and curled up around another for no visible reason except the grace of the lithe line.

A BIT of water, flat, sky hued, with some kind of water fowl resting on it and others flying about, pretending to be scared for an excuse to show off.

The country in a mild midwinter! A great siren stripped and made up for a night alone, in order to recuperate from last night's ball for tomorrow's festival. Noll had been brought down from cloudy castles to the plain earth. But what an earth! He would be a farmer and nothing else. He was much obliged to his hard luck for turning out to be his good luck. He left the highway for a side road to creep closer into the breast of nature and to find soft earth for his horse's feet. He cantered and galloped, watching from on high the hilarity of his pack, each dog industrious in his individual way, the long legged ones darting back and forth across the road and tracing paths like great shoe laces; the short-legged little dogs rather bouncing than running, but all of them blissful. He wanted to have a good ride before he reached Alberta's. After that it would be all chatter and flirtation, Alberta's two careers.

His complacency was marred by never a suspicion that Dicey Wayne might be abroad on a like excursion; nor was hers that he might be. He saw her long before she saw him. He was breathing his horse at a walk and his long-tongued pack had slowed down to a disordered stroll just before the old tree-bordered road made a sharp turn to the right at the sharp right turn of an ancient stone wall.

There he caught sight of Dicey coming along on a cantering horse at a pretty clip. Noll recognized the animal as Dicey's Sir Walter Raleigh. She had no suspicion that Noll and his dogs were waiting in ambush. The stone wall cut her off just where her full riding breeches closed in about her knee, which was fastened to the horse like a tight hinge. Along the sharp line of the wall the head and arched neck and the long line of Sir Walter's back slid as on a rail, but with a billowy motion to which Dicey conformed as part of it, relaxed and rhythmic with the indescribable, irresistible zest of horse and human partnership. The horsewoman was scalloping along the wall line in profile, in bas relief, as if one of those sculptured Greek girls in the long frieze of the Parthenon had come to life in modern costume with her marble horse. She was bare headed, her shirt was open at the throat, and the cold, early wind stretched her short hair in bright flames from her neat head. Her lips were parted and she seemed to be singing to the world or to the little dog—a Pekingese—Noll guessed—that stood on the pommel of her saddle steadied by Dicey's hand while he nipped at the horse's mane as it fluttered across his nose. Noll had a few moments' leisure to study Dicey and to contrast her with Alberta. His grudges against her father and against her were forgotten. He had to admit to himself:

"She's smart, damn her! a cad and a bounder, but smart!"

He did not know that Dicey's smart attire was old. He supposed that she would always be well dressed. Her father had advised Noll to come home from England and had seen to it that he did. For the first time he saw clearly what a tragedy her father's crash had been to Dicey. The Treadgolds had lost only their money; the Waynes were hurled down to disgrace. Their name was a clamor of rage on the public tongue. Dicey had had no share in her father's misdeeds, but full share in the shame. The abuse that was being heaped on him and the threat of prison must be all but maddening to her, for she did adore the old man. Noll lost all desire to add to her woes or ever have another fight with her. It would be lonesome with no Dicey to battle, but he would let her go her way in such peace as the poor thing might be able to find in a lonely gallop down a rustic lane.

HE was glad that she had only one dog with her and it in her arms. He drew his horse to the side of the road and turned to motion his own pack out of danger of her horse's hoofs coming along like a muffled drum. As she rounded the elbow in the road Dicey was changed from an upper profile to a full length front view. By an instantaneous signal with legs and reins she drew Sir Walter to a short stop and he flung his head high.

Noll swept off his derby with an exaggerated formality and was about to say something amiable when all of Dicey's pack came round the curve in a torrent. They found the Treadgold pack lolling at ease and unready for hostilities.

The silence was a madhouse. The Wayne dogs bowled over the Treadgolds, rolled them among the legs of rearing, kicking, whirling horses. Noll saw that Dicey's chow had attacked his precious corgi beneath the very belly of Dicey's horse and he spurred the Commodore forward to ride off Sir Walter. Then he leaned down and struck at the chow with his riding crop. Dicey tried to shoulder Noll's horse away and their boots brushed, their spurs clicked together. The angered horses began to bite and fight, standing high and fencing with their forelegs, snorting and baring their teeth. Each knocked the other down to all fours, then both whirled, ducked their heads, and lashed out with their hind legs.

Dicey and Noll, sticking like burrs, narrowly missed having their own legs cracked by the rear hoofs. With all their power Dicey and Noll forced their horses to opposite sides of the road. Dicey was herself again. She began to boss Noll about:

"The same to you and many of them."

"Get down there, I tell you, and separate those dogs before they tear each other to pieces."

Dicey went almost blind with rage at his disobedience in such a crisis and, wrenching Sir Walter about with a tremendous wrist twist, she rode at Noll, brandishing her crop. She struck him over the head and knocked his hat off. Dicey was ashamed of her bad temper, but Noll was stunned. His hat was gone.

A man who would not risk a finger nail for a noble cause will force his way into a den of lions for his hat. The instinct is as mysterious as any other animal instinct and as compelling.

Before he knew it Noll had dismounted in the thick of the mêlée and was laying about him in frantic haste to find his lost treasure and save it from being crushed into the most miserable of all earthly wrecks, a stepped-on hat. While he was still poking about for it Dicey was shouting:

"Separate that chow and that Airedale before they murder each other."

Noll went on looking for his hat. Dicey insisted:

"Pull my chow off your Airedale, I tell you, before he kills him!"

"Ha!" was Noll's sole comment. He put his trust in Airedales.

NOW Dicey came off her horse in such excitement that she let the bridle slip from her hand while the madly squirming Jinka escaped from her elbow and began to fight every dog in reach. As Sir Walter lowered his head to nip the Airedale's ear the reins slid down his neck to the ground and he began to kick and paw. He put his foot through the crown of Noll's derby and tried to kick it off.

"There's your fool hat," Dicey jeered.

"There! On Sir Walter's fetlocks."

Noll gave it up as a total loss, but Paddy the corgi forgot the elusive Shetland sheep dog and ran at Sir Walter, nipped his leg, and flattened himself beneath a kick that sent the hat flying while the horse trotted away, trailing the reins. Here Jinka found a place. In the great days of old his ancestors had been persons of authority about Chinese palaces and had been trained to hold horses' bridles. Seeing Sir Walter absconding, Jinka flew after him, caught the reins in his teeth, and went soaring through the air. Perhaps his weight stopped Sir Walter. Perhaps Sir Walter recognized Jinka as family. In any case he stopped and Jinka of the lion heart hung on while Sir Walter nibbled at roadside weeds. Seeing some old leaves on a branch overhead, Sir Walter flung his head high. Jinka went up with the reins and came down with them.

EACH year spring calls softly, invitingly, with gentle insistence—indoors! There are things to be done that the summer may be enjoyed as it rightfully deserves, and that the warm weather months may find us fully prepared to taste their pleasures to the full.

These are days when new optimism prevails throughout the land. We are all hopeful, our faith is coming back, and we are slowly but surely falling under the spell which urges us to take advantage of the still existing moderate costs and indulge ourselves with things which we have wanted for a long time.

The mood is on us when we can hopefully take inventory of our house and its needs. We can consider spending a little when heretofore we have been rigorously limiting our investments to rock bottom necessities. We can decide on just how much replenishment of household stores we may undertake, just how much we can afford in the way of redecorations and refurnishings: perhaps even go a step farther and consider various structural changes which will give us added room or bring more grace and beauty to the rooms we already have.

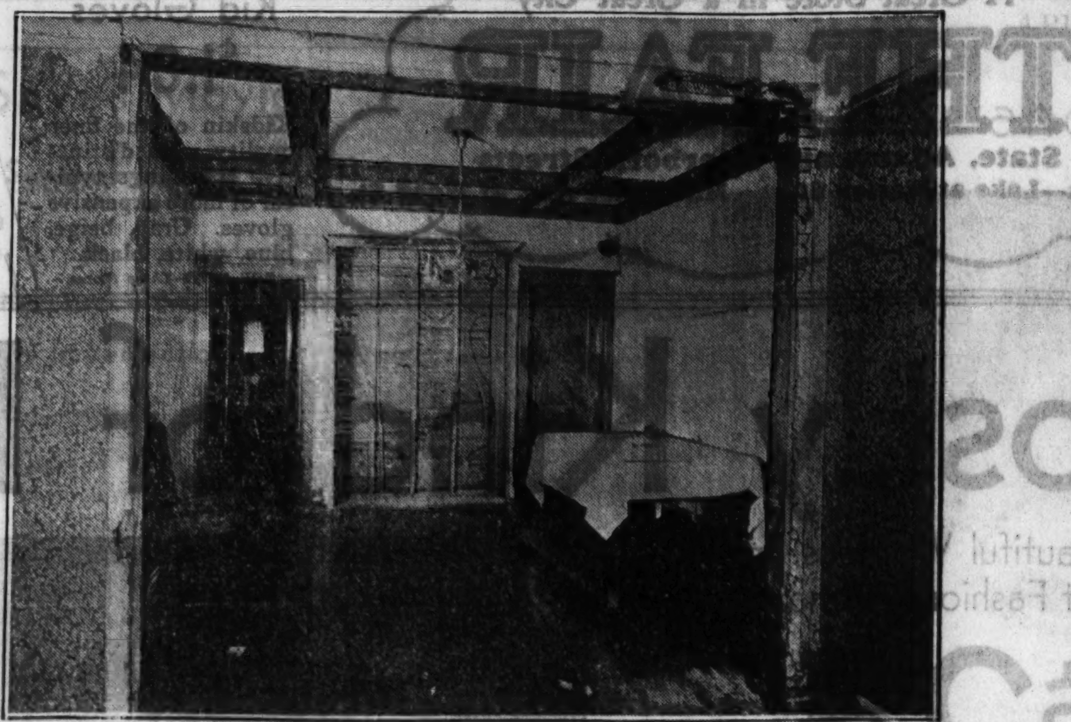
This depression we have been through, and from which we are beginning to emerge, has blown good winds along with the disheartening ill ones. It has taught us to face real values, to distinguish between essentials and nonessentials, to select what we want and, turning our face resolutely from the superfluous, concentrate on the substantial and the enduring.

Save for a Purpose.

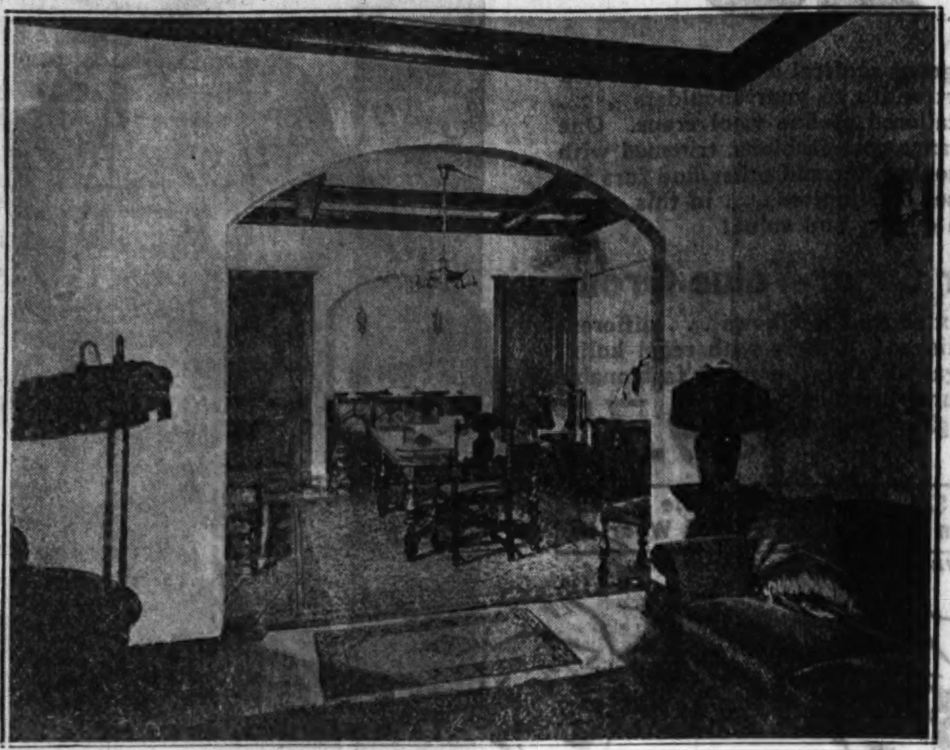
There is a great deal of difference between hoarding and constructive saving; saving for the right sort of expenditure at the right time and in the right place. This spring, with its slowly spreading cheerfulness around us, is an opportune time, indeed, for us to fix things more as want them.

To ask ourselves but a few brief questions: "Is the price reasonable?" "Is the price one that I can afford?" If I buy it will I have to do without something I may want more?" is the part of discretion. If we can answer the first two questions in the affirmative and regarding the third feel comparatively sure that we have chosen the thing we want most, then we can sensibly go ahead with our planning and our investments.

The rooms shown today reveal among other things the improvement a gracious arch can add to an interior. We may have grown desperately tired of some part of our house—want to change it, and change our own reactions toward it in the process. And there is one thing comforting about a house: we can do with it as we like. If it is still comparatively new, but mistakes have been made in its planning, or if it is frankly middle aged and in need of jerking up, we know there is nothing irrevocable about it. Old age does not creep on it with a clutch that refuses to loosen. We can renew its youth, change its face, refashion it or redecorate to refurnish it, as we like.



Before modernization. Spring calls indoors, and these are days when timely renovations may be swiftly and inexpensively achieved.



After modernization. Arches add grace to home interiors and can transform two rooms by the inviting beauty they afford.

These are days, moreover, to check up on many things throughout the house or apartment. The month is here to vanquish fauna, a precaution against warm weather hatching; to hunt out and close crevices that invite, to lay new floorings for old, mend broken tiles, repair old table tops, fix old shelves.

Time for the vacuum to be put to work in all manner of ways, to eliminate dust, install moth repellent closets, and chests, hang moth repellent bags.

Days are near, too, when there's fun to be had from screening some porch that's close to a dining or living room, or bedroom. A good, substantial screening with a firm, close mesh will prove effective in keeping out insects of different sizes. Insulation of the roof will keep out the heat of the sun; lighting of the porch will make it yield evening as well as daytime enjoyment.

Look Over the Screens.

Also, it goes without saying that now is the moment to check up on all existing screens, to see what appearance they present and what condition they are in. They may need painting or mending. New ones may old. Where this is to be done consider some of the rustless types of screens. Look into prices. See that the quality of your screens is as good as you can wisely afford. But even though you may decide on the simplest and most inexpensive quality, see that they fit. Every house and apartmen should be adequately and properly screened.

Now is the time, too, for the consideration of porch and terrace furnishings. Easier to plan and buy them now than when the warm weather is on us. Awnings must be considered and the sooner the better. We may already have them and merely need to bring them out, see that they are in good condition, and put them up. Or we may decide to celebrate our gradual increasing joyousness that things are "certainly getting better" by installing some new awnings.

Or by way of further celebration we may resolve to own at last a good incinerator, wherein we may burn our troubles and be free from all the attendant summer problems of refuse disposal. There are all sorts and kinds on the market. We may be have to be substituted for some of the quite surprised by looking into the possibilities of this incineration subject.

Freshening Touches.

New lamps are always a happy way of freshening a room. They are, indeed, the jewel spots of a home and for every furniture group there should be a center of illumination. Many of the new lamps shed a lovely indirect light. Also, there are new portable wall brackets if one is fond of this type of illumination.

Again a living room may need added height, which we can give it by installing a hanging bookshelf. This may be bought painted or unpainted. Or some of our rugs may need to be reclaimed. Amazing the results that can be secured from "old rugs made new." Or we may have reached the point where we are ready to chuck overboard the old rugs entirely and invest in some of the lovely new ones to be had at such reasonable costs.

Warm days are near and happy days, too, we'll hope, for each and all of us. And what we do for our house we do for ourselves—and for a lot of other people, too—in more ways and greater ways than most of us ever dream.

Cool Color Schemes Give Light, Airy Effect to the Sun Room in Summer

Brown, White, and Ash Rose Suggested; Also White, Blue and Amber.

By WillElla de Campi.

AS the days grow longer and we begin to throw the windows open to gentle spring breezes attention is focused on making the sun room livable and attractive. Cool color schemes, fresh, clean looking fabrics and furniture which gives a light, airy effect are the order of the day. Several pleasing sun room plans, any one of which could easily be duplicated at little cost, are suggested in the following schemes, the first of which is illustrated today.

Brown, White and Ash Rose.

Woodwork—Matches walls exactly.

Curtains—A new type of roller shades which differ from the ordinary in that they are plaited like an accordion, giving the appearance of Venetian blinds, but being much less expensive. As the shades roll up, the tapes that run through perforations in the plaits roll up, whereas the shade itself merely plaits up tightly like an accordion when closed. These may be lowered at the top if desired. They are made of sunfast and washable material and may be ordered in any color. In this instance they are white.

Draperies—Long draperies at each end of the window groups are of glazed chintz with a flower and bird design in browns and greens on a white ground. They are finished with narrow accordion plaited edging in brown and green.

Furniture—Stick reed painted white in a flat finish. Metal plant stands painted white placed in front of one window group. Square table with solid wood top, painted white, in f c t of the windows at one end of the room. Breakfasts and informal luncheons may be enjoyed here, as well as card games, etc. Sofa and two comfortable armchairs have seats and back cushions upholstered in tobacco brown leather fabric, piped in white. Extra cushions match the window draperies.

Black, Chartreuse and White.

Woodwork—Painted chartreuse with a line of black.

Curtains—White Argentine cloth, made quite full and hanging straight to the sills. This gives a glimmering, frosty effect.

Draperies—Plain white glazed chintz, hanging straight to the floor, at the ends of window groups, finished with a deep ruffle of the same, piped in chartreuse. These are hung by means of wooden rings, painted chartreuse, from black wooden poles.

Furniture—Wicker, painted glossy black. Sofa and arm cushions made of plaid gingham in chartreuse, yellow and black on a white ground. Open shelves built against one wall, painted black outside, chartreuse inside. These hold an assortment of plants in bright containers, as well as colorful pieces of pottery, current magazines and a selection of good books.

Blue and Amber.

Walls—Rough plaster in pale gray-blue.

Woodwork—Stained maple.

Curtains—Plain utilitarian roller shades in pale amber, made decorative by the application of floral clusters cut out from glazed chintz and glued on flat to form a border. Glass curtains of amber theatrical gauze with deep hems.

Furniture—Reproductions of American colonial pieces in maple with cushions of blue flowered glazed chintz. Plain sofa slip-covered in the same chintz. Pewter lamps with parchment shades.

Floor—Stained dark and almost entirely covered by a braided rug in several tones of blue.

Coats of Shellac and Brown Wax Important Steps in the Refinishing of Your Antique Furniture

You Can Restore Old Tables, Chests to Their Former Lustrous Beauty.

By Edith Weigle.

SINCE writing an article, over a year ago, on refinishing old furniture we have had so many inquiries about the best methods of proceeding that we are going to give a repeat performance today. If you have any old tables or chests of drawers or chairs that you think you may like to renovate just clip this column and put it aside for future use.

Or better still, get acquainted with the best book on refinishing furniture that we've yet seen, "Knowing, Collecting and Restoring Early American Furniture," by Henry Hammond Taylor. [Lippincott.] And by the way, in answer to questions, "Where can I get this book?" the answer is, of course, at any good book store, or by ordering it through your dealer.

Before you wade into the business of shellacking, waxing, etc., give your piece of furniture a very critical once over to determine whether or not it is really worthy of a lot of hard labor and time. Is it an antique of good construction and attractive lines? [Remember that nothing under 100 years old is considered an antique.] Or is it a relic of the dark ages of Victoria, so to speak; an overornate piece of rosewood or bright reddish mahogany that might just as well be left to bloom unseen?

Don't spend your time and effort over furniture that has no intrinsic worth, no beauty. It's a real job to make over an old table or chest by giving it the proper finish, and it is certainly love's labor lost if the article is not good in the first place.

If we know about the uses of plastic wood, shellac and wax it will make refinishing work more intelligible. All these may be bought at any good paint store. Plastic wood is exactly what the name implies, and it's extremely useful in repairing small breaks in veneer, in filling cracks, etc. It may replace missing veneer on the edges and corners of posts and drawers and it may fill a tiny gap caused by a small break in the veneered surface of a table or chest. In the latter instance press in the plastic wood with a hot iron for a moment. Stick shellac may be used instead, but it is more brittle than the plastic wood.

The first step in refinishing an old piece of furniture is to remove the varnish or paint with a good commercial varnish remover. Follow the directions on the package carefully. When the underlying wood has been reached it may need to be smoothed with very fine grade sandpaper, number ½ being recommended. Always rub with the grain of the wood; never across it.

Steel wool is excellent for smoothing hard woods; soft woods respond best to sandpaper. Number 0 is the grade of steel wool most commonly used in furniture refinishing. As it is hard on the hands, an old pair of leather gloves should be worn when working with it.

Shellac is used in sealing woods and furnishing a base for the final coats of wax. Wax gives the soft luster that is the goal of the process.

After the varnish remover has taken off the present finish and the wood has dried thoroughly, and has then been rubbed smooth with sandpaper or steel wool, or both, it is ready for the shellac.

If you want a light colored finish on your furniture use white shellac. Mr. Taylor prefers an orange shellac, and here the word "orange" is a misnomer, for under that name come various shades varying from an impossible garish color to a brown. It is this latter tone that is most appropriate for refinishing purposes. Be sure to get the best grade, too, and examine it to see that although it is called orange it is not really that color.

In order to apply it quickly and easily it should be fairly thin. It is wise to mix with it equal parts of wood or denatured alcohol, which will bring it to the right consistency. In applying it to the wood put it on very quickly, using a fairly stiff brush. By the time you have finished it will have dried, for this thin mixture evaporates rapidly; then, apply a second coat.

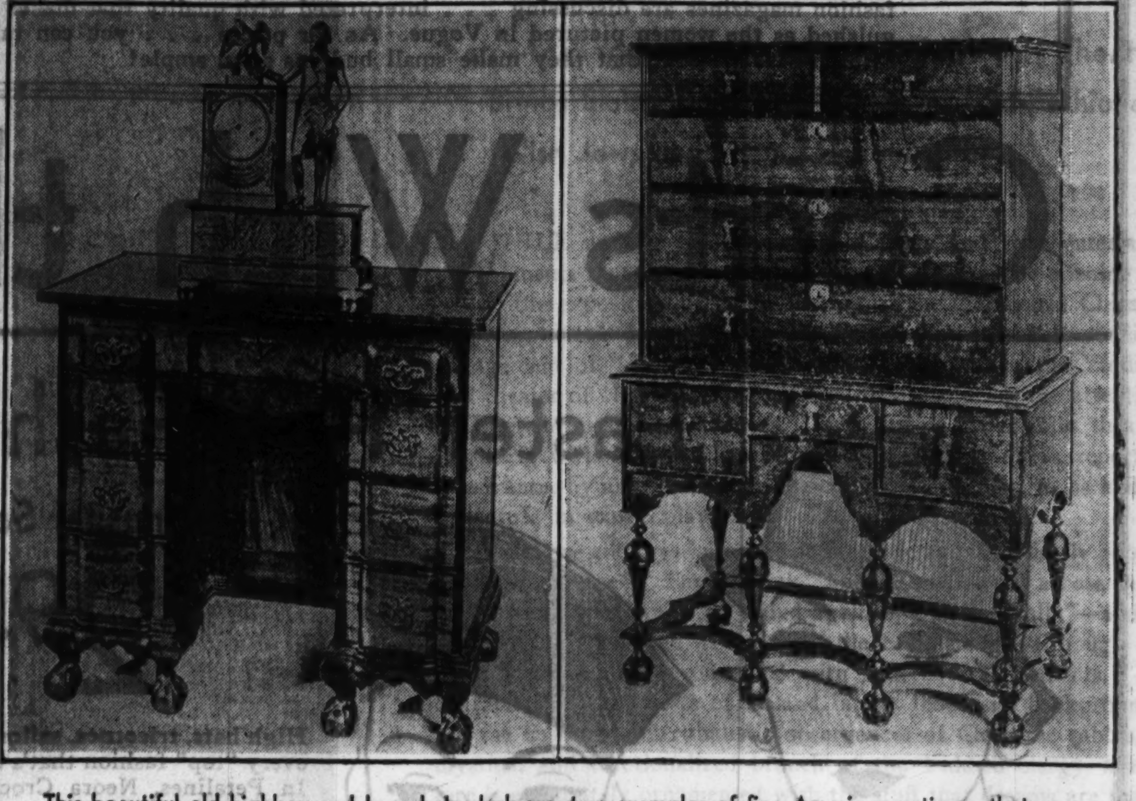
If the wood is pine, which is very porous, as many as four coats of shellac may be needed; mahogany or maple may require only two.

Once the shellacking is finished you have a base for the wax. In the book above referred to Mr. Taylor advises using a brown wax made by mixing one teaspoonful of burnt umber, which may be bought at any paint store, with one pound of ordinary yellow floor wax. This gives the color desired.

The wax is highly inflammable and should not be put near the stove. NEVER try to melt the wax and add the burnt umber. Mix it by dumping the wax out on a board and stirring in the umber with a spoon or knife. Then put the wax back in the can and go to work. Apply this brown wax to the furniture with a clean soft cloth, being certain first that the final coat of shellac is absolutely dry.

Rub the wax thoroughly into the wood, smoothly and evenly. Be careful not to leave any standing on the surface. Then, put the article away in a warm room to stand for twenty-four hours. Avoid cold, as it keeps the wax from drying quickly.

Repeat this process of waxing and rubbing, allowing the twenty-four hours for drying between each coat, until three or four have been applied. The number depends upon the hardness of the wood and the luster you wish to attain. The ideal finish is never mirrorlike nor highly glossy; it reveals the beauty of the wood and enhances its richness and luster.



This beautiful old highboy and knee hole desk are two examples of fine American antiques that are still to be found in this country and that more than repay any labor involved in refinishing.

Expert Player Saves Movie Despite Flaws in Production

Mae Clarke Is Back on the Screen Once More, and She's the Reason for the Success of This Film, Which Is Not Without Its Imperfections.

By MAE TINEE.

GOOD Morning!

She returns to the screen much lovelier to look at than when, because of a nervous breakdown, she was compelled to stop work, and her acting—always sincere and intuitive—has taken on new depth and sheen. Miss Clarke's performance is apparently effortless, and yet she makes every word, glance, and intonation count.

Good in Spite of Flaws.

If you start to pick flaws with this story and its direction you'll never stop. The piece is slovenly from a production standpoint; the tale is too far fetched and poorly worked out to be interesting of itself. Miss Clarke's triumph lies in the fact that despite these drawbacks "Parole Girl" DOES hold your attention.

The heroine is sent to jail because of the relentlessness of a store manager in whose shop she and the crook, whose idea it was, are caught perpetrating an extortion game. She vows revenge.

Her shrewd young brain concocts a scheme through which, in one month, she is released on parole—with the thanks of the warden et al. Letting no grass grow under her feet, she gets into immediate communication with her one time partner in crime AND—her bete noir—Mr. J. Smith. . . ! Her methods of bringing the latter to time are peculiar and effective.

Satisfying Finale.

Ralph Bellamy as the manager, Ferdinand Gottschalk as the store owner—what a soddenly sentimental rôle he drew, poor man—Marie Prevost as a fellow prisoner of the heroine, and others concerned do the best that could be done with the material at hand.

Miss Clarke wears some charming clothes and exhibits a new, severe hair cut that is extraordinarily becoming. Because of this beautiful lady and her beautiful work I hope you'll see "Parole Girl."

Bits aBOUTem.

RALPH SPENCE, who used to write such clever subtitles for "silents," has completed what he calls a "gooseflesh special" for RKO. Title? "The Black Ace." . . . There are THIRTY-EIGHT different shades of complexion, according to MEL

Vying with beer and wine for the spotlight

Harriette Lake, romping red-head of the lyric stage, is the heroine of the most famous musical show of the year—"Of Thee I Sing," which begins a week's return engagement at the Auditorium theater tonight. It has been on tour to the Pacific coast.

'Yoshe Kalb,' Drama of Yiddish Customs and Folk Lore, at Hand

By CHARLES COLLINS.

WHILE waiting for the influx of plays and lyric entertainments that have been vaguely promised for the opening of the exposition period, followers of the diminished Chicago stage may look forward with lively curiosity to the impending engagement of "Yoshe Kalb," a drama with which the Yiddish Art theater of New York has succeeded in capturing the attention of English speaking audiences. It is due at the Apollo theater April 20, with Maurice Schwartz as its star, and it is reported in advance, by any number of authoritative witnesses, to be a rich adventure in exotic playgoing.

Folk lore and mysticism of the fantastic and theatrically potent strain that carried "The Dybbuk" and "The Golem" across their racial boundaries are to be found again in "Yoshe Kalb"—a title that can be translated as "Joseph the Simpleton"—although its story is not entirely concerned with supernatural elements. Its characters are the Jews of Poland in the 1860s; its backgrounds are the customs and ritualistic observances of Chassidic rabbis, a mystical and emotionalized branch of the Yiddish clergy whose lore is elaborately ornamented with the stuff that dreams are made of; and its hero is a strange, studious, ascetic youth who wanders about dumbly with a sexly sin upon his shuddering conscience, welcoming as an expiation any suffering or debasement that may come to him. The sin of Joseph the Simpleton, it may be added, was his seduction by the young wife of his rabbi father-in-law and her death in illegitimate childbirth.

Based on Novel.

The play is contemporary of authorship. It was dramatized by Maurice Schwartz from a novel by J. I. Singer, first published as a serial in the Jewish Daily Forward, a Yiddish newspaper of New York's east side. Like most dramatizations, it is episodic, and twenty-six scenes are required for its staging. It follows the method used by the Moscow Art theater for the dramatization of Dostoievsky's "Brothers Karamazov," and passages from the books are read at intervals in the performance to mark and explain transition periods in the fabulous epic of Yoshe's half-witted vagrancy.

The climax of the drama is a trial scene where seventy-two rabbis, bearded and whiskered with the hirsute opulence that points the kinship between the Yiddish and the Russian stage, sit in judgment upon the sacrificial Yoshe, whose expiatory flight has involved him in charges of misdeeds that he refuses to deny. As the aged

By BURNS MANTLE.

NEW YORK.—(Special.)—The most important figure in the New York theater scheme at the moment is a young gentleman who conducts the chief cut-rate ticket brokerage of the town. Not because he is able to supply theatergoers with cheaper seats, but because he is showing uncanny judgment in the matter of supplying financial blood transfusions for dying shows.

The musical comedy called "Gay Divorce," in which Fred Astaire is starred, was successfully played for several weeks at standard prices and then business dropped away to a figure that was less than profitable. "Gay Divorce" was ready to close.

Cut-Rate Man to Rescue.

At this point in stepped the cut-rate man, Matthew Zimmerman by name. If the producers of "Gay Divorce" would move their attraction from the Ethel Barrymore theater to the Shubert, which is nearer the theater center and therefore better for transient trade, and permit him to dictate the prices of seats, said Mr. Zimmerman, he would guarantee them $9,000 a week in receipts. The producers agreed, "Gay Divorce" was moved, offered at popular prices and is now doing a better business than at any time in its run.

The same thing happened with "Music in the Air," which gave up during the banking holiday. When there was talk of reopening Mr. Zimmerman again stepped in, offered a guarantee of $12,000 a week and proposed moving the piece into the 44th street theater at a popular price schedule. This offer was also accepted and "Music in the Air" is again playing to a nice profit and keeping a hundred or more stage folk off the street.

Business Improves.

"One Sunday Afternoon" came to the last of its surplus ten days ago and was closed. Again in stepped Mr. Zimmerman, offered to finance a reopening on terms satisfactory to the company and the play's owners and put the piece back into circulation. Not only did business improve, but

OAKLAND STARTS HOUSECLEANING FOR WORLD FAIR

Section to Be Made Spic and Span.

That residential section of Oakland, lying between 29th and 39th street east of Cottage Grove avenue, is getting a special spring clean-up under the leadership of an active committee of the Central Shore Voters league whose object is to have every inch of ground spic and span for World's Fair visitors who will begin to arrive in less than two months.

Headed by Mrs. George T. Robinson, 3746 Ellis avenue, the committee is engaged in a house to house canvass to make all residents aware of their responsibility as a host community in creating a favorable impression of residential Chicago in the minds of out of town visitors.

Lawns on All Vacant Lots.

"It is our intention," said Mrs. Robinson, "that every square foot of vacant ground in Oakland be converted into smooth green lawn, and that trees, bushes, and shrubs be planted in any unsightly places, so that visitors entering the Fair grounds through the 39th street entrance or by the new 35th street viaduct, will start the day with a picture in their minds of Oakland's tree-bordered streets, its trim, freshly painted houses, and spacious lawns—and also, that those ending a day packed to the brim with thrills and excitement, will find relaxation in the cool quiet of this unique residential community."

Working with Business Men.

The Voters' league is working hand-in-hand with the Oakland Business Men's association on the Oakland World's Fair committee in making preparations in the district.

Members of Mrs. Robinson's committee: Mrs. Stanley Martysh, M. K. Binkley, Edgar Lowe, Mrs. Everett Pratt, Mrs. John Nelson, Mrs. Eva Jaeger, Thomas Hawkey, William J. Oliver, Mrs. Ludwig Harjes, Mrs. Edward H. Roehl, Miss Gail McDermott, A. R. Moe, and Miss Mary Zurawski, member of the league's general fair committee. Mrs. Hugh T. Martin is president of the body.

This talk will be given tomorrow evening at Gage park, 55th street and Western avenue; Tuesday evening at Ogden park, 65th street and Racine avenue; and Thursday evening at Hamilton park, 72d street and Normal avenue. The same lecture will be given April 17 at Bessemer park, 89th street and South Chicago avenue; April 18 at Palmer park, 111th street and Indiana avenue, and April 19 at Armour square, 33d street and Shields avenue.

This Week in the Garden

Do you know the safe planting dates for the earliest spring vegetables? Are you a good home forester in the selection and care of choice shrubs and trees? To aid the home gardener, The Chicago Tribune offers six specially prepared booklets on as many garden phases. These include "Favorite Trees of Chicagoland," "Shrubbery for the Homesite," "The Care of City Trees," "Trouble Shooting in the Vegetable Garden," and "The City Man's Vegetable Garden." These may be obtained from The Tribune's public service offices for 11 cents each or three for 26 cents, or you may send 14 cents in stamps for one or 29 cents in stamps for three to the Garden Department, The Chicago Tribune. Another booklet is "Flower Gardening," 11 cents, or by mail, 14 cents.

Monday, April 10.

Seeds of the morning glory Heavenly Blue should be started early. They will germinate more quickly if soaked in water for 24 hours before sowing. The moonflower may also be started. These seeds have a hard coat which should be filed and soaked in water. Keep the seed box in a warm place. Obtain a supply of labels now. For pot use the five inch size is excellent. To preserve them dip the labels in white lead.

Tuesday, April 11.

Watch the seedlings that are growing in seed boxes in the window. If they are weak and spindly they are growing in a too warm and dry place. The hotbed should be properly aired and watered. Give protection by covering with board over the sash. Air on bright days. Many plants in the rock garden will show signs of heaving, these should be pressed firmly into the soil. Order rose bushes while they are still dormant. Get these plants into the ground soon.

Wednesday, April 12.

Continue with the pruning of trees and shrubs. Young trees should be given every attention to see that they are properly trained and have good scaffold branches. Remember that if these young trees are properly cared for in their youth the removal of large branches will be unnecessary when they become old. Sow the seeds of primroses and cyclamen for blooming next winter. It is timely to start the seeds of slow growing annuals now. These are such things as the lobelias, zinnias, marigolds, petunias, asters, heliotrope, ageratum, and salvia, or flowering sage. Sow in pots or boxes.

Thursday, April 13.

Repot house plants. Palms, bracaenas, pandanus, rubber plants, and many others will do best if they are not overpotted. Palms that have shoved themselves upward in their containers may be entirely removed from these containers, the lower part of the root system cut away, and repotted. They do best in a rather heavy soil with one-third decayed plant food. Ferns require a lighter soil.

Friday, April 14.

When growth is starting, ferns can be divided best. The adiantums or maiden hair ferns are easily increased in this way. They should be turned out of their pots and a knife passed right through the ball from top to bottom, dividing it into two or more portions, which may then be potted separately. Equal parts of peat and fibrous loam with a liberal amount of coarse sand suits ferns well.

Saturday, April 15.

The rock garden will have to be looked over soon and additions both of stone and plants made where needed. Certain plants will have to be restricted, others propagated, and a good top dressing put on. The freezing and thawing during the winter pulls some of the plants loose and this top dressing is essential to prevent drying out next summer.

The only thing the George Plumsteads of Oak Forest managed to save from their burning house was a baby buggy. The barking dog roused the sleeping family and they found the house in flames.

Andrew Lucek of Posen had his second fire in two months when his overheated stove set fire to the room in which it stood. But he was luckier —only $20 damage.

Well, why not? How about a snappy little nightly chat on the latest in men's furnishings?

BEVERLY LEISURE INSTITUTE WILL OPEN ON APRIL 17

The opening of the Beverly Community Y. M. C. A. leisure time institute was set for April 17 at a meeting of the organizing committee Tuesday afternoon at 103d street fieldhouse, 1513 West 103d street. Robert Lee, vice chairman, was made chairman of the committee to replace John Oudhoff, who resigned because of an impending European trip.

Julien Barrett of the curriculum committee and Mrs. Walter Heineman of the faculty committee announced that courses in psychology, social problems, speed dictation and typewriting, swimming and life saving, music and art appreciation, handicrafts, interior decorating, literature and dramatics, and public speaking are definitely scheduled for the institute.

Persons enrolled range from 15 to 41 years old. Another committee meeting will be held Tuesday at the same place.

BRYN MAWR P.-T. TO VOTE ON PLAN OF DISBANDING

'Unenthusiastic Support' Raises Question.

The question of disbanding the Bryn Mawr Parent-Teacher association will be put before the membership for a vote at 3 o'clock Tuesday in the school assembly hall, 74th street and Jeffery avenue. The double reason given for considering such a move is economy and "rather unenthusiastic support." The association is scheduled to ballot on officers for next year at this meeting.

Officers were unanimous in characterizing the suggested measure as temporary and in denying that there is any factional rift in the membership.

"It simply is a question of whether or not the district wants to support an association at present," said Mrs. D. W. McFall, president. "We have but 600 members as compared with 2,400 pupils in school. We will discuss the question, but I really see no possibility of disbanding."

Called Economy Move.

Mrs. McFall added her belief that facing the question will either stimulate real interest or reveal the reverse and that this is the best course for the association—to find out where matters stand.

"It is strictly an economy move," said Mrs. Albert L. Green, slated to be elected president of the group for next year, and who is responsible for bringing the question to a vote. "We wonder if we may be asking too much of our members through dues and tickets for benefits."

"I am not, and I am sure none of us would be a bit in favor of giving up the association permanently," she continued. "If there is a disbanding it will be just temporary, for a year or six months to carry through the financial strain now placed on members."

Claim Complete Harmony.

Mrs. Green also expressed the hope that any advance publicity concerning the meeting will "not prove detrimental to a frank discussion, which is so essential."

In stressing the complete harmony existing it was pointed out that Mrs. McFall, the retiring president, is slated to continue as a member of next year's board, which is an unusual procedure.

The program will include a talk on "The Responsibility of the Modern Parent" by Mrs. Charles Holzheimer and an explanation of the Enchanted Island of the World's Fair by a speaker from the Junior league.

PUPILS TO PLANT TREE IN MEMORY OF PRINCIPAL

A tree will be planted in memory of Mrs. Harriette Taylor Treadwell during outdoor arbor day services at 1 o'clock Thursday in the Gompers school yard, 12301 South State street.

Mrs. Treadwell, widely known and loved as Gompers' principal, died last year after a lifetime spent largely in far south side schools. Contributions of pupils have made possible the tree and a memorial hedge.

Arthur Deaver, district superintendent, will speak on Mrs. Treadwell's work in the schools, and Mrs. Henry Hoyt Hilton, president of the Chicago Woman's club during Mrs. Treadwell's active membership, will speak on her Americanization work. The Chicago Outdoor Art league will join in the program, planting rose bushes and sumac along the school terrace.

St. Margaret's Societies to Give Minstrel April 23

The Holy Name society, Immaculata society, and Young Men's club of St. Margaret's church, 99th and Throop streets, will present a minstrel show the afternoon and evening of April 23 at Hackman's hall, 95th and Throop streets. Proceeds go to meet the parish school deficit.

DANCE AID

Proceeds of the dance will be used to replenish the service fund. George Dreblow is general chairman and C. E. Runyan is ticket chairman. Fred E. Bushnell is the post commander.

Martha Ammen tent, No. 20, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, will hold a luncheon Wednesday noon at the McHale clubhouse, 150 West 69th street. Mrs. Bertha M. Buer, department president; Mrs. Bernice Hecht, senior vice president of the department of Indiana, and Mrs. Elsie Goede, president of Lucretia Williams tent, No. 38, will be special guests. Mrs. Glennola Dills will be in the chair on that day, with Mrs. Cecile Salute Jr. as her special guest.

Hyde Park unit, No. 34, American Legion auxiliary, will give a party in compliment to Mrs. Ada Mucklestone, department president, on the evening of April 20. Friends of Hyde Park post and auxiliary are invited.

A series of boxing bouts sponsored by the Society of 40 and 8 for the benefit of ex-service men at the Convalescent center, Orland, was begun Friday night at the Medinah Michigan Avenue club. Friday nights will be devoted to bouts between amateurs in various weights. Beginning April 18 a series of Tuesday night wrestling matches will be held at the club.

Dr. G. G. Fox to Discuss Persecution of Jews

Dr. G. George Fox, rabbi of South Shore temple, will discuss "The Historical Persecution of the Jews in Europe," during an open cultural meeting to be held by the Junior congregation at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the community house, 7215 Jeffery avenue.

"WHOLE TRUTH" IS THREATENED AT TILDEN TECH

School Paper to Issue Its Annual Ballyhoo.

The Tilden Tech Times will go haywire with a bang tomorrow when several of the staff's best minds combine forces to bring out a Ballyhoo issue.

MISS MARY CRAMAR.

The alleged purpose of the issue, as stated by Martin Zitz, editor in chief, is to give the lads a chance to say what they think about their teachers. And Editor Zitz points with pride to the fact that the Ballyhoo number is to appear on the same day as report cards.

"More Than the Truth."

The issue will consist of a double page profusely illustrated with ancient cuts of Tilden celebrities from the Times morgue. Accompanying these pictures will be stories from the more fertile of the staff's brains.

The slogan of the issue, "The whole truth, nothing but the truth—and a little more," will be announced on the editorial page. And below will be listed "Ballyhoo Advocates: 1. Shorter school hours. 2. More time to drink beer. 3. Same as two."

Zitz, who is the regular page 2 editor and business manager of the Times, is getting out the sheet with Assistant Editors Joseph Cole, Patrick McCarthy, and Oregon Kansas Hunter, regular editorial and feature writer on the Times.

Junior Prom and Reunion.

A combined junior prom and reunion of Tilden letter men will be held from 8 o'clock to midnight Saturday evening at the Masonic temple, 67th street and Yale avenue.

James Hickey, president of the Letter Men, is leading a wing of the prom with Miss Mary Cramar. He and James Purks, chairman of the social committee, are in charge of arrangements for the dance. Special committees include William Kerrigan, Victor Brown and Purks, hall; Clarence Cassels, Jack McIlvoy, bids and programs; Bernard McDonough and Harold Wyrick, publicity.

Woodlawn Business Men to Learn About Electric Eye

Members of the Woodlawn Business Men's association will learn more about the "electric eye" at their Tuesday noon luncheon in the Hayes hotel. Roger B. Kellogg of the Commonwealth Edison company, will talk on the photostatic cell, illustrating how light rays, when broken, may operate to open doors, start drinking fountains, or perform other "miracles."

The St. John's cantata is directed by Mrs. Ninon Walden, while the principal soloists will be William Troup, baritone, and Cazmar Cholewa, tenor.

MORGAN CADETS TO CHOOSE MOST POPULAR CO-ED

2d Style Show Will Be Given Friday.

After having shattered all traditions with a successful style show last spring, Morgan Park High school's R. O. T. C. has engaged in another experiment. The cadets are sponsoring a popularity contest to determine the most popular girl in each of the four classes at school.

Balloting is being conducted by division rooms and results will be announced Friday at the cadets' second style show, which will have as its principal feature the modeling of latest fashions by these winning girls and the runners up.

The latest things in masculine attire will share the limelight with feminine raiment, as was done last year, and Sergt. H. E. Parrett, sponsor of the R. O. T. C., is anticipating sufficient popular response to warrant holding two shows, one at 2:30 o'clock Friday and one at 4.

Sergt. Parrett in Charge.

Beauty, popularity, grace, and general appearance have been named as qualifications for which winners of the contest will be chosen. Only paid up members of the student association are being permitted to cast their votes.

Wilfred Young, cadet first lieutenant, is assisting Sergt. Parrett with arrangements for the show. Half the proceeds will go to the student aid fund.

The diorama of a village entered by Morgan Park in the annual flower show of the Garden Club of Illinois carried off a special award. Architectural students of the advanced drawing class had been working on the project since early last fall under the direction of Miss Edna Hotchkiss and Curtis Hunter.

The village was shown in three dimensions, with model houses made from original drawings by the students. A twilight lighting effect was achieved by one group of boys, the landscape planned by another, ground construction and painting by still others.

Take Part in Project.

Engaged on the project were Miss Anita Mense, Roy Swanson, Walter Chinell, Alfred Mannel, Gustav Bornemann, Henry Swanson, Charles Boyer, Allan Colombe, Ralph Faulkner, Dick Ehler, William Sandberg, Robert Bartee, Edward Olmstead, Henry Swanson, and Stig Berggren.

Under Miss Mense's direction a model home with landscaping and living plants was exhibited by the botany class. Willard Verduin, Miss Corinne Mense, Gene Gallwein, and Robert Bartee.

Cadet Major Charles Gardner of the R. O. T. C. recently was awarded the highest honor obtainable in high school R. O. T. C. in receiving a commission as cadet colonel of the Chicago high school brigade staff. This is the highest honor obtained so far by a Morgan Park student. In addition to serving as presiding officer at the cadet officers' court martial, Cadet Colonel Gardner has completed three terms in the citizens' military training camps.

South Side Woman's Club.

The South Side Woman's club of the Marks Nathan Orphans' home will have a board meeting at 1:30 o'clock Thursday at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Minkus, 7522 Yates avenue.

He now is a conductor and is among the first "L" employés to receive a 40 year pin. Mr. Fairbrother, a pioneer south sider, remembers well the crowds of the Columbian exposition and plans to be on the job again to help the 1933 World's Fair crowds.

NEW CONCEPTION OF BIBLICAL ART GIVEN BY ARTIST

Critics Laud Paintings in Little Chicago Church.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

When the modern and scientific spirit struck the field of religious art, earlier conceptions of famous biblical themes lost much of their meaning. There have been but few artists who hitherto have tried to interpret the new understanding of the nature of things in relation to religious tradition and thought. While it is not likely that Michael Angelo's frescoes in the Sistine chapel at Rome will lose any of their glory as immortal works, yet the present day outlook is said to have dulled the religious suggestion of the older masterpieces, although the art remains undimmed.

In the new universe conceived by Eddington, Jeans, Einstein, and Compton such a theme as "The Creation" would require something more than a canvass depicting a scantily dressed Adam with fair Nordic skin; an Eve with equally scanty attire and still fairer skin; the apple dangling from a tree; the serpent with forked tongue, and finally, emerging from the clouds the giant head of the Creator who was just a man, only much larger than the two human beings just created.

Modern Conception of Creation.

The first artist whom critics agree to call "great" who has attempted a "Creation" is Emile Zoir. His conception of that theme now is installed in a Chicago church, "the Little Church at the End of the Road," 3533 North Albany avenue. This little frame church is far too small to allow the canvas to be seen to advantage, but competent critics have not hesitated to mention the Swedish artist's conception in the same breath with the Sistine chapel frescoes.

Adam and Eve are conceived by Zoir as pre-cave dwelling creatures who are resting on the shores of a primeval sea. Adam's lower limbs are still inert. He is a figure who is just beginning to raise himself by infinite struggle to the summit of a savage cliff. The figure of deity is equally startling and far different from the full bearded, irascible and patriarchal figure of traditional art. Instead, there is a subtle suggestion of the face of a scientist immersed in profound thought. It is a struggle for the gazer to discern the face among the sweeping currents of lines and forces radiating from the head.

"Dance of Elements."

"The Dance of the Elements" shows a sweep of wild figures across the sky, representing hurricanes, tornadoes, comets—wild insensate forces, all blind, all raving—the strong wind and battering waves of Zoir's native Swedish coasts; pallid, as if cold and without feeling. This is the most difficult of the creation panels to realize.

The "Spirit of God Brooding on the Face of the Waters" is a panel which represents two figures, male and female, floating in a rosy red light above the vast sea. This is the love element in nature and is quite different from the senseless pallidity of the hurricane. Then comes the Adam, raising himself from the brute world largely by his own efforts; then man and woman; and finally the birth of light, the younger generation and the progress of evolution, shown by a fair haired baby—obviously a Swedish baby—held aloft by his parents.

The permanent home of Zoir's Creation panels will continue to be at "the little church at the end of the road," which has come to be known as a national shrine of poetry, music and art. The Rev. Irving St. John Tucker, pastor of the church, has announced the erection of a permanent shrine for the work of Zoir and other artists and poets has got beyond the conversation stage.

Money to Be Raised.

The Rev. Mr. Tucker has stated that already a large group of Chicago artists have organized to obtain funds for the erection of such a shrine near the site of the little church. Funds will be secured, Mr. Tucker said, by the presentation of a series of art pageants depicting the various periods of the history of art. The pageants will be given during the Century of Progress exposition. With the removal of the canvasses to the new structure, the church will remain as the home of the national order of the Sangrael of which the Rev. Mr. Tucker is the head.

Devotions of Holy week will be featured in the loop with three noon day services each day except Saturday. 6 HIGH SCHOOL DEBATING TEAMS TO OPEN SERIES

Bowen and Calumet Meet Next Tuesday.

Leading "arguers" of six south side high schools this week will open a series of debates which will culminate in the picking of a champion late in May.

Sponsoring the debates is the newly formed Chicago Public High School Forensic league, which has as its members Bowen, Calumet, Englewood, Hyde Park, Parker, Tilden Technical, and Lindblom High schools as members.

Lindblom Not to Participate.

Lindblom, however, will not participate in the present series. Plans contemplate extension of membership to include schools of other sections of the city by next year.

"Resolved: That the Federal Government Should Own and Operate All Public Utilities," is the subject chosen for all debates. All jousts will be dual affairs, with the negative team of a school being host, while the affirmative travels. The three members on each team will be limited to seven minute constructive speeches and four minute rebuttals. Judges will be teachers from neutral schools.

Series to Open Tuesday.

Bowen and Calumet will open the series Tuesday, with the Englewood-Hyde Park clash Thursday as the other meeting this week. The rest of the schedule:

April 18—Parker vs. Tilden.
April 20—Bowen vs. Englewood.
May 2—Calumet vs. Parker.
May 4—Hyde Park vs. Tilden.
May 9—Bowen vs. Hyde Park.
May 11—Englewood vs. Parker.
May 16—Calumet vs. Tilden.
May 18—Bowen vs. Parker.
May 23—Calumet vs. Hyde Park.
May 25—Englewood vs. Tilden.

The two schools scoring highest will meet for the trophy.

Kornfeld Is Chairman.

Jack Kornfeld of Calumet, credited with being the organizer, is chairman of the league. Other officers chosen at the first meeting late in February: Vice chairman, Norman Thompson of Tilden; secretary, Miss Phoebe Salmon of Bowen; treasurer, Miss Irene Abrams of Parker.

DE FRIER URGES LOWER TAXES IN MAYORAL RACE

Running on a platform pledging lower costs of city government, cutting taxes, and working for the extension of Stony Island avenue through to 147th street, Joseph N. De Frier is the Independent candidate for mayor of Calumet City. Mr. De Frier is 57 years old and has lived in Calumet City for 22 years. In addition to being a real estate dealer, he also operates a restaurant and gasoline station. Mr. De Frier is married and has two children, Josephine and Paul. Eight other candidates will oppose Mr. De Frier at the polls on April 18.

JOS. N. DE FRIER.

H. P. Kiwanis Ball Team to Meet All Chicago Unit

The Hyde Park Kiwanis indoor baseball team hopes to wipe out the sting of its recent defeat at the hands of the Englewood club when it answers the challenge of the All-Chicago indoor team in a game to be played at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow evening at the Hamilton club. A. P. Dippold is manager of the Hyde Parkers.

ON HER BIRTHDAY

'THE PASSERS-BY' TO BE GIVEN BY BRYN MAWRITES

Chorus to Aid Players in Church Drama.

"The Passers-By," a religious drama by Penelope Dickerson, will be presented by the Bryn Mawr Players and a chorus at 8 o'clock tonight and Tuesday evening in the Bryn Mawr Community church, 7000 Jeffery avenue. Mrs. George E. Q. Johnson is the director.

Presented so effectively last year, this drama of the spiritual struggle of the soul, as seen in the setting of an early pilgrimage through the hills of Palestine, is being given twice as a holy week feature. It will be staged on a larger scale than before with a chorus of more than 75 supporting the cast of 20 players. The specially made set is a mountain scene.

Special Costuming, Music.

Special lighting, costuming and music also have been arranged.

Mme. Amalia Franz and Miss Florence Hull and Miss Alexandra Hull of the players will be soloists. Miss Dorothy Lustgarten, violinist, and Miss Ida Lustgarten, pianist, will assist with the production.

Headlining the musical groups will be the Cecilian chorus of South Chicago, a Chicagoland Music Festival contestant. This 36 voice chorus is directed by Mrs. Ida Linn Cooley, with Mrs. Evelyn Nelson Russell as accompanist and Mrs. Anna Hultquist as president.

Others making up the chorus include the South Shore Y. M. C. A Boys' Glee club, directed by Andrew Reed Jr., and choruses drawn from the Round Table and Wun clubs of the Community church. Edward Bixby is the director of the latter.

Officers of Players.

BOB ELSON TAKES W-G-N MIKE TO CUBS' PARK TODAY

Report 1st League Game Next Wednesday.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

With Bob Elson at the microphone W-G-N will begin its tenth successive year of baseball broadcasting this week. Preliminary to the opening of the major league season next Wednesday W-G-N will broadcast the game between the White Sox and Cubs at Wrigley field at 2:45 this afternoon.

On Wednesday THE TRIBUNE station will broadcast the opening game of the Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals. The detailed report of the game, which starts at 3, will be preceded at 2:30 by Elson's personal interview of leaders of the contending teams. This feature was inaugurated last year and proved extremely popular. After Wednesday the interviews will be heard at 2:45 p. m.

W-G-N will report all home games of both teams so long as either one appears to have a chance for a pennant. If one should fall behind and the other is definitely out in front Elson will carry the W-G-N microphone wherever that team goes. Elson has just returned from the west coast, where he watched the Cubs, Sox and a half dozen other teams shape up for the season, and he enters his third season as W-G-N's baseball commentator better equipped than ever to give fans the complete baseball picture this summer. During the broadcast of games there will be periodic switchbacks to the studios to give scores of other teams.

This evening at 9 o'clock W-G-N offers an added feature when Bob Elson will interview Manager Charley Grimm of the Cubs. Grimm will give a sort of a preview of the season and interesting data about the team.

Because of the baseball broadcast this afternoon W-G-N will present only the first half of the Philharmonic Symphony broadcast.

Charlie Agnew and his singing orchestra will open a ten day engagement at the Trianon ballroom and will broadcast over W-G-N, starting April 20. Bernie Cummins and his orchestra will move into the Aragon during this time while Wayne King and his boys take their annual vacation. King plans to spend his vacation days loafing at his farm in Wisconsin. Agnew will present his entire musical organization at the Trianon with all of his soloists long featured in radio broadcasts.

This is the McCoy! In 1858 Daniel McCoy, great grandfather of Clyde McCoy, the "Sugar Blues" maestro, and the Hatfield clan had trouble over a razorback hawg down in Big Stone Gap, Kentucky. One man was shot and the feud has been going on ever since, Stanley McCoy, Clyde's grandfather, having inherited it. What's more, the whole story of the feud is preserved in wax in four installments, a Brunswick recording, with genuine mountaineer music and sound effects. Despite the family background, Clyde has no interest in porkers. He leaves hog callin' to Carl Moore.

Husk O'Hare's "wherever-you-may-be" pap is trying.

The X-Sisters gave a provocative demonstration of jazz cubism, or what NBC calls "Back Rhythm," which involves 64th note time, last Sunday evening. The Jazz chamber music has attracted the attention of Reuben Goldmark, George Gershwin, and Bernard Wagenaar, modern musical pioneers. The X-Sisters, like the Boswells, Pickenses, Neills, Morins, and Gaylords, dispense swell harmony, and torrid impressionism in addition. (The Pickens sisters, incidentally, are at the Chicago theater this week.)

It looks as if we were in for Secretary Woodin's compositions as regularly as we used to hear Gen. Dawes' "Melody."

Thanks is due Rudy Vallee for his decision not to sing return of prosperity songs on his broadcasts.

Jack Denny's music becomes easier and easier to take. In fact it is a positive pleasure. And that goes for Ozzie Nelson's also.

The passing of the Sunday Circle concerts, and the Tibbett-Crooks hour fills many a household including this reporter's with lamentation. Spring is here, and then come the summer doldrums!

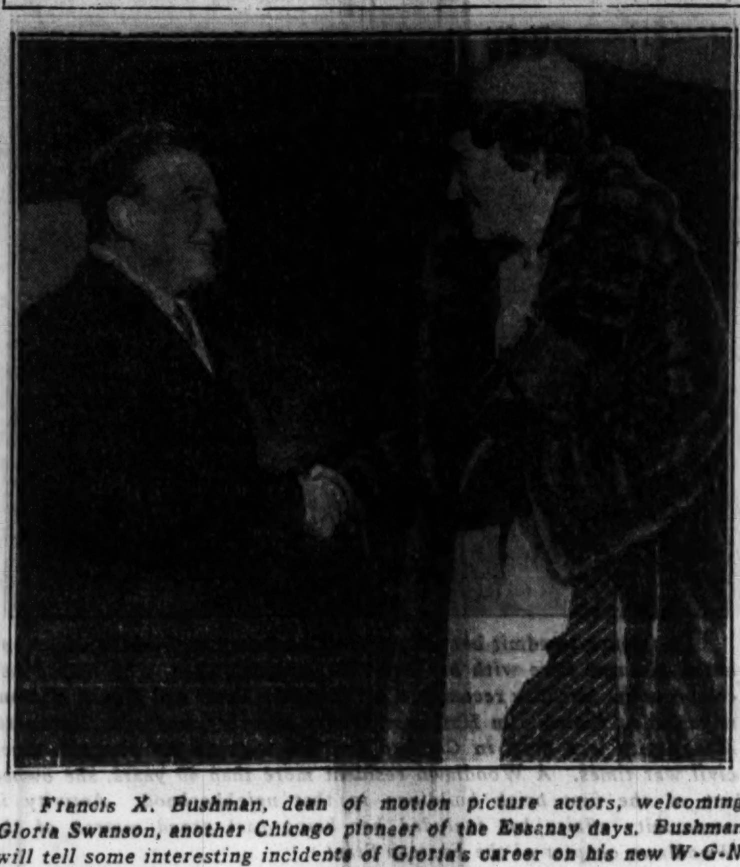
Thanks to NBC, practically every one knows now that Chicago is the city that made a river flow backward.

East & Dumke are better than ever on their new program in which they solve household and human problems. Their stunt of speeding aerially to the homes of their questioners to give first hand aid is unique. They have the real bedside manner!

Irene Castle McLaughlin and Charlie [Slow But Sure] Agnew have been auditioning for a new commercial. . . . Mrs. McLaughlin is scheduled to discuss her "Orphans of the Storm" over NBC at 5:30 p. m., April 17. . . . Harry Sosnik and his orchestra, long featured over W-G-N and "the Parade of Melodies" are on the air from the Congress hotel. . . . The Singing Lady started her third year of stories and song Thursday. . . . The return of beer finds Herr Louie [Hank Moeller] and the Weasel [Hal Gillis], long W-G-N favorites and now featured on the Monday night minstrel show, entertaining at the Granada café with Herbie Mintz' orchestra.

Fifi D'Orsay recorded a half hour song skit—blackout sample program the other day which may reach the kilocycles ultimately. At the close of the program the director asks, "Fifi, wouldn't you like to say one last word to the audience?" "Nertz," replies the Montreal lassie.

W-G-N Narrator and His Topic



Francis X. Bushman, dean of motion picture actors, welcoming Gloria Swanson, another Chicago pioneer of the Essanay days. Bushman will tell some interesting incidents of Gloria's career on his new W-G-N program beginning at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

BEETHOVEN'S 5TH, 6TH TO BE GIVEN BY PHILHARMONIC

Beethoven's two greatest symphonic studies of man and nature, the immortal Fifth and Sixth Symphonies, will be presented by Arturo Toscanini in the third concert of the current Beethoven cycle, to be broadcast over the Columbia system from 2 to 4 o'clock today. Olin Downes, music critic of the New York Times, will be heard as commentator during the intermission.

Toscanini will open the program with the Symphony No. 6 in F major. Subtitled "Pastoral," this composition depicts nature in her varying moods. The first movement, Allegro ma non troppo, bears the caption, "Cheerful Impressions Excited on Arriving in the Country"; the Andante is called "By the Brook"; the Allegro "Peasants' Merrymaking"; the fourth movement, also an Allegro, is termed "Thunderstorm"; and the Finale, an Allegretto, presents "The Shepherd's Song: Glad and Thankful Feelings After the Storm."

The Fifth Symphony in C minor, probably the best known and most admired of the nine, is prefaced by Beethoven himself as the struggle of the individual with fate, his alternations of hope and despair and his final triumph.

BURNING OF DIRIGIBLE WILL BE RETOLD BY RYAN ON 'HEADLINES'

The burning and destruction of the giant dirigible Roma with the loss of 33 lives will be retold from the newspapers of February, 1922, when Quin Ryan presents "Headlines of Other Days" at 9:40 p. m. tonight over W-G-N. An eye-witness story of this disaster will be presented by Robert E. L. Shelton, a Chicagoan and a navy man stationed at Hampton Roads, Va., near where the accident occurred. Mr. Shelton was one of the observers watching the dirigible in its flight when the fire broke out. He gave the alarm and then started with other navy men in pursuit of the airship and was present at the scene of the crash and assisted in the rescue of the survivors.

BUSHMAN OPENS MOVIE SERIES ON W-G-N TOMORROW

Story of Gloria Swanson to Be Told First.

How grand opera was cheated out of a possible great artist when Gloria Swanson decided to cast her lot in with the movies, will be told by Francis X. Bushman, world famous star of the stage and screen, in the first of the "Movieland Personalites" programs over W-G-N at 10 a. m. tomorrow. The movieland programs will be broadcast every morning of the week except Sunday and will feature intimate stories and up to the minute news about famous stars and personalities of the motion picture world.

During Gloria Swanson's stay in Chicago last week Mr. Bushman, a friend of the famous screen star for many years, had some interesting chats with her during the course of which some little known facts about Chicago's own pioneer movie actress came to light. These facts Bushman will pass on to his listeners tomorrow.

First Great Film Star.

Bushman rates as the first great stars of the movie world. He has been featured in 418 pictures, more than any other actor, living or dead. In the casts of his many pictures appear the names of Wallace Beery, Gloria Swanson, Lenore Ulric, Ben Turpin, Beverly Bayne, and many other stars.

Male Soloists' Programs.

Songs of the semi-classical type will be featured by two of W-G-N's popular soloists on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week. Both will perform with the W-G-N Concert orchestra, directed by Delos Owen. On Friday William Miller, tenor, will offer "A Brown Bird Singing," "In the Silence of the Night," and "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," on his regular 9 to 9:15 broadcast period. Saturday evening from 9:15 to 9:30 Lewis White, basso, will sing "Tallyho," "Mother o' Mine," and "Rolling Down to Rio."

JOHN C. THOMAS NEXT WITH HILL ON 'INSIDE STORY'

John Charles Thomas, one of America's foremost baritones, will appear with Edwin C. Hill's on the "Inside Story of Names that Make News" program over W-G-N, 8:30 p. m., Friday. Mr. Thomas will sing several of the songs which have endeared him to countless music lovers both here and abroad. During the broadcast, Mr. Hill will develop the "inside story" of Mr. Thomas' career, and bring out the odd incident that suddenly turned this son of a Methodist minister, slated for the medical profession, to music.

Busy Pianist Pauses a Moment

ALLAN GRANT, W-G-N STAFF PIANIST.

SO MODEST HE FAILS TO TELL PALS HE'S ON AIR

ROBERT K. SCHMITT.

Bobbie is currently featured in "Uncle Quinn's Scalawags" and heard every evening from W-G-N in the rôle of Billy Reefer, the lighthouse keeper's grandson.

Bobbie lives at 4414 Greenwood avenue, and when asked the other day whether his schoolmates listened to him every night replied that he had never told anybody he is now on the radio "because nobody would be interested." Anyway, Bobbie's ambition is not to be a radio celebrity, but a great surgeon, he says.

During the coming week Donny Dreamer, Jean, Billy Reefer, and Wishbone expect to solve the perplexing mystery of Beartooth Rock lighthouse, where an unknown ship has been flashing colored lights on calm night, where a strange musical note has been sounded over the water during storms, and where coils of copper wire and a radiometer have been picked up by the children in the newly discovered cavern under the lighthouse.

BIRD AUTHORITY WILL GIVE W-G-N TALK TOMORROW

Joseph H. Dodson of Kankakee, Ill., known as one of the greatest living authorities on song birds, will start a series of broadcasts over W-G-N tomorrow. For four weeks Mr. Dodson will deliver talks on birds over THE TRIBUNE station from 2 to 2:10 p. m. every Monday.

JOSEPH H. DODSON.

Mr. Dodson is president of the American Audubon association and has devoted his entire life to the study of the birds of the world. His talk tomorrow will be on the subject "How to Attract Songbirds Around Your Home."

Next week he will speak on "The Quail and His Habits."

NOTABLE MEN TO BE HEARD ON MIDDAY SERVICE

The Holy Week program of the W-G-N Midday Service this week will bring before W-G-N microphone an array of leaders and educators in the line of spiritual thinking. Those who will speak are: Monday—President Albert W. Palmer, of the Chicago Theological seminary; Tuesday—President John Timothy Stone, of the Presbyterian Theological seminary; Wednesday — President Sydney B. Snow, of the Meadville Theological seminary; Thursday—Dean Shailer Mathews, of the Divinity school, University of Chicago; Friday—Dean Samuel K. Wilson, of the Post-Graduate department of Loyola university; Saturday—President L. Franklin Gruber, of the Lutheran Theological seminary of Maywood.

Hamburg Conductor Named to Direct German Hour

The Germania broadcast, which for six years has presented the concert hour over WIBO at 1 o'clock Sundays, has engaged Siegfried Vollstedt as its new music maestro. Mr. Vollstedt, a newcomer to Chicago, is the son of the late Hamburg composer Robert Vollstedt, whose waltz "The Jolly Fellow" was chosen by John Philip Sousa to open the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. Mr. Vollstedt conducted the Hamburg opera for many years.

In New Studio

ACE'S VIRGINIANS ARE NATIVES OF OHIO, ILLINOIS

Ace Brigode and his "Virginians," heard over KYW-NBC nightly, probably would have difficulty in scraping up even Virginia cousins, since they hail largely from Ohio. Lew Ashbrook, his 6 year tuba veteran, actually comes from Ashbrook, O. Ace was born in Rock Island, Ill., but early hied himself to Miami, O., where he trained for his future virtuosity on the clarinet as a glass blower. Ace has a corps of slick jacks, including Joe Hart, a very funny man; Jim Probe [seven instruments]; Rudy Kuebeles, marimbaphonist, and Jack Burnett, vocalist. Ace turns out dance rhythm that dancers are keen about, also unusual arrangements that make his broadcasts popular. His version of the largo from Dvorak's "New World Symphony," with choral effects, is great.

OPERA ARTISTS PLAN PROGRAM OF SACRED SONGS

A program of sacred songs will be presented by the artists appearing on the "Opera Miniatures" program during their regular opera period at 1 o'clock Wednesday of this week. Their accompanist will be Leonard Salvo, organist. Helen Ornstein, contralto, will sing "The Holy City"; Virginia Larae, soprano, "Open the Gates of the Temple"; Arthur Oberg, tenor, "The Lost Chord," and Joseph Hassmer, baritone, "God, My Father," from the "Seven Last Words of Christ."

On her program with the Rondoliers at 1:45 Tuesday Miss Larae will sing "Carmina," "Come to the Fair," "Waters of Minnetonka," and "Sweetest Story Ever Told."

WEEMS TO PLAY SPECIAL PROGRAM AT SIX TONIGHT

Ted Weems and his singing orchestra will play a special 15 minute program over W-G-N this evening from the Trianon ballroom, where Weems and Bernie Cummins and his orchestra are supplying music for dancers. Weems and his boys will broadcast over THE TRIBUNE station from 6 to 6:15 p. m. and Ted has selected the following numbers: "I Like Mountain Music," with Elmo Tanner singing; a new novelty tune, "Hi There, Duchess," and "Why Can't This Night Go On Forever," with Andrea Marsh singing the vocal chorus.

Garden Talks on W-G-N Are Shifted to Mondays

The series of talks sponsored and delivered by members of the Garden Club of Illinois and regularly heard at 3:30 p. m. Wednesday afternoons over W-G-N will be broadcast at 1:25 each Monday afternoon starting tomorrow. Authorities on various phases of gardening are heard each week on these programs.

IRISH FARMERS INDUCED TO BACK FIVE YEAR PLAN

Prices Fixed and Subsidies Granted.

BY HUGH CURRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, April 4.—[Special.]—The political atmosphere in the Irish Free State continues difficult to penetrate, but President de Valera has enunciated part of his policy for domestic reforms, and is directing his legislation quietly and persistently to achieve his objects.

He is regarded as doing all that is humanly possible to increase the means of employment, thus finding occupation for the growing population, due in part to restrictions on immigration in the United States. Part of the plan is to found new small industries for the manufacture of requisites which hitherto were imported.

Large numbers of these small establishments have sprung up in the towns and villages, and though the extent of employment is not great nor the wages paid very attractive, they serve the immediate need of giving employment and circulating money.

Farmers Resent Change.

Agriculture is being made to contribute its share towards meeting the general demand for more work. To this end the Free State's agriculture is being steadily directed into a new groove. Grazing, for the production of cattle, is being replaced by tillage for the production of root crops and foodstuffs. This change is resented by many farmers, who are accustomed to the easier methods, but it cannot be said that the resentment is general. President de Valera's policy was already outlined to the electors, who gave it emphatic approval.

A five year plan has been inaugurated, but judging from its dimensions it may not show results for several years. Meanwhile the farmers are getting substantial inducements to co-operate.

The government recognizes that its policy regarding Great Britain has put the export of produce out of the question, and that Ireland must depend on home consumption. Even now there is a large supply of commodities, and produce prices have rarely been so low. The cost of living to townsfolk and wage earners is steadily falling.

Government Fixes Prices.

But will the farmer continue to accept such low recompense for what he has to sell that he cannot pay for his labor? The government has anticipated this, and for several classes of produce a minimum price is fixed, while for others subsidies are to be granted.

Opponents of this scheme assert that the subsidies can only be paid through taxation, and that the consumer pays indirectly in taxes what he gains through low retail food prices.

Banks Sound and Solvent.

While the Free State is reshaping its economy, comparatively few signs of the universal depression can be seen here.

Expert economists claim that it is the banking system more than anything else which has kept the country free of panic. The whole country is served by about eight or ten banks, all of which are soundly managed and solvent beyond any possibility of attack. They are attacked for extreme conservatism, for reluctance to take risks, but not as insecure deposits for money.

Lawson Y.M.C.A. Glee Club to Present Easter Songs

An Easter program will be presented by the Lawson Y. M. C. A. Glee club on W-G-N at 7:45 p. m. Saturday, when they sing "Hallelujah, Christ Is Risen!," "The Lily of the Valley," "Easter Bell Ringers," and "In Joseph's Lovely Garden." The Vagabonds' quartet will sing "Hail Him, Lord and Leader!" Frank Bennett is director of the glee club and Catherine Bennett is accompanist.

Neighborhood Theaters

If you want just to relax and enjoy yourself there are few better ways than by taking in that swell musical show, "42d Street," which is at the Avalon, Tower, and Piccadilly this week. The hit numbers include "Young and Healthy," "You're Getting to Be a Habit with Me," "Shuffle Off to Buffalo," and the title piece. The story has the glamour of backstage atmosphere, with the trials and tribulations prior to going before footlights with a show. This one must make money—or ye producer won't have the cash to take the rest ordered by his doctor. Warner Baxter has the central rôle, with Bebe Daniels as leading lady of the show. George Brent is a vaudevillain who follows her devotedly. Ruby Keeler [Mrs. Jolson], Una Merkel, Ginger Rogers, and Guy Kibbee lend to the A1 cast. Add also some tricky photography of gorgeous ensembles.

* *

"The Keyhole" at Tivoli.

Another honey, one of March's "six best," is "The Keyhole," which is at the Tivoli. The cast is a wow. Kay Francis is the wife whose jealous husband hires a detective to trail her to Cuba. While hubby's suspicions are all wet, the detective [George Brent] upsets things by falling hard—and Kay feels the same way about him. The cast also boasts such stars as Helen Ware, Monroe Owsley, Glenda Farrell, and Allen Jenkins.

Jail Break Thrills.

The filming of Warden Lewis Lawes' book has produced in "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" another for best of the month rating. It is at the Maryland and Grove through Tuesday, and a day less at the Jeffery. The picture is entertainment first of all, with moral values incidental. There are jailbreak thrills and at the same time one sees application of intelligence [as opposed to chain gang methods] to jailing. Spencer Tracy is the hardened criminal, Arthur Byron the warden, and their battle of discipline or not is a peach. Bette Davis is Tracy's gal—and there is a dual loyalty act done around this romance. Acting, needless to say, is tops, in which connection a bouquet also goes to Louis Calhern.

Nancy Carroll's comeback picture, "Child of Manhattan," in which she is a little dance hall hostess with whom a wealthy widower [John Boles] falls in love, is at the Shore and Frolic today and tomorrow and at the Lexington Friday. The Lexington has "Parachute Jumper" today and tomorrow, while the Shore and Frolic draw this plane crash, beer running, dope smuggling film Friday and Saturday. Mae West's "She Done Him Wrong" is at all three in the three middle days of the week. Doug Fairbanks Jr., Bette Davis, Leo Carrillo, Frank McHugh, and Claire Dodd are the actors in "Parachute Jumper."

'PRETZEL PARTY' TO BE GIVEN BY WENDELL HALL

Wendell Hall, radio's red headed music maker, will bow to the principal topic of the day when he presents "The Pretzel Party" as the highlight of his program over W-G-N and Columbia from 1:15 to 1:30 p. m. today.

Included in this Hall-esque medley will be such selections as "Vas Vilst Du Haben," "Pink Elephants," "Under the Anheuser Busch," "Show Me the Way to Go Home," "It's Time to Sing Sweet Adeline Again," and Hall's own composition, "I Want to Help."

"Brothers and Sisters, Get Happy," another Hall composition, will be used as the finale of the program.

Jane Froman to Sing "My Heart Stood Still"

One of Rodgers and Hart's most charming tunes, "My Heart Stood Still," from the "Connecticut Yankee" will be featured by Jane Froman in her 8 p. m. broadcast over W-G-N and Columbia on Tuesday. Accompanied by Leonard Hayton's orchestra, she will also sing "It's Within Your Power" and "Happy Times." The orchestra will be heard in "Huggin' and Kissin' You" and "May I Have This Waltz with You, Madam?"

Troupers Tell Tales of Quake in California

"To Hell with Hollywood," Shrieks a Chorine in "Of Thee I Sing" Cast.

THE "Of Thee I Sing" company, which returns to Chicago tonight for a week at the Auditorium, has had many weird and wild experiences on its western tour, for it was playing in Los Angeles when the recent earthquakes struck southern California. All of the players have exciting stories to tell.

"We, meaning my wife and mother-in-law and a guest," says Oscar Shaw, who is the President in "Of Thee I Sing," were in our suite on the tenth floor of a Hollywood hotel and were just about to eat dinner. The door had opened; a smiling waiter appeared with a large tray heaped with food. Then the floor twitched suddenly. The waiter let out a yell, dropped the tray and started for more distant places. When a couple more twitches came we decided that the waiter knew things, and tried to find him.

"That night I wondered if any one would come to the show. Surprisingly, the house was half full. Part way through the first act there was a rumble and a creak and the stage did tricks. And the audience left. I have had people walk out on me before but it was the first time the whole house ever left in a body. But they came back for the second act."

"I was on the thirteenth floor of the Biltmore hotel when the first shock came," says Donald Meek, who plays Vice President Throttlebottom, "and my dash to the street, without benefit of elevator, is like the one I make from the White House in the play when I learn the senate is in session and I'm supposed to preside.

"There were eight shocks during the performance that night. It was a fair-sized audience at the start, even after the big shake early in the evening. The next important jolt came about nine o'clock—right in the middle of an audience laugh. Most of the audience made for the exits, but a few remained, even after the intermission."

Love's Dream Shattered.

One of the chorus girls had a serious love affair with an assistant movie director in Hollywood, and an engagement of marriage was in prospect, with the idea that she would remain and seek work in one of the studios. The romantic couple had been visiting Long Beach when the ground rocked, buildings fell, and people were buried in the débris. The girl shrieked at her fiancé: "I wouldn't live here for anything in the world—to hell with Hollywood—the marriage is off!"

Minds Her "A's" and "R's"; Lands Good Film Job

HOLLYWOOD. — Margaret Lindsay broadened her "a's" and softened her "r's" and now she's on the way toward Hollywood importance.

She is the girl on the Titanic in "Cavalcade," the only person playing a large rôle in that picture who was not born in England. When its "all English" cast was advertised Margaret was caustically called the girl who was English no more than her home town of Dubuque, Ia.

MARGARET LINDSAY.

Margaret Lindsay was born Margaret Kies. She received her early education in Dubuque, and in a few years, after a course in an eastern dramatic school, she went to London, where she had minor parts in several plays.

When Margaret returned to this country she had an English accent. And that's what got her into trouble and brought her success, too.

She was introduced to a Hollywood producer as the "English" Miss Lindsay. He gave her a contract, used her in bits in several pictures, and finally "sold" her to the producers of "Cavalcade."

Of course, she made an impression, which brought about her discovery.

THE STORY OF PAUL MUNI

PAUL MUNI, who plays the title rôle of "Counsellor-at-Law," has risen to a stellar position on the English speaking stage and in the cinema by way of the Yiddish drama. Not many years ago he was Muni Weisenfriend, an obscure member of the Union of Yiddish Actors who are in constant employment in the east side theaters of New York.

To reach the heights of the acting profession at so early an age—he is still in the lesser half of his thirties—Muni had to hurdle the handicaps of poverty, alien birth and ignorance of English. He now speaks English so perfectly that it seems to be his native tongue.

During his early days on the stage Muni acted every sort of part in dramatic and musical shows. After several seasons in plays by Shakespeare, Ibsen, Tolstoy and Gorki, he had his opportunity to go on the English stage. Manager Sam Harris saw him as the villain in "The Lower Depths." Mr. Harris gave him a minor rôle in "We Americans," in which he scored promptly.

Later he won Broadway recognition in the leading rôle of the gangster in "Four Walls," which brought him a contract to play the lead in "The Dybbuk," in London. There he remained two years and returned to go to Hollywood.

In "pictures" he has had three definite periods. The first includes "The Valiant" and "Seven Faces." The second came just before "Counsellor-at-Law," when he made "Scarface." The third occurred last summer when he went to Hollywood to do "I Am a Fugitive."

Film Players Adopt the Fad of Bicycling

HOLLYWOOD.—The bicycle is returning to favor in Hollywood but not, particularly, as a means of transportation. It is now chiefly a calisthenic device.

The fad may have started when some daring film folk living in a little suburb formed a bicycle club a few months ago. Among these were the Charles Farrells, the Richard Arlens, and the Walter Hustons, who, with their friends, went riding in groups nearly every morning.

Hearing about the club, members of which seemingly were pledged to talk up the merits of exercising on a bike, other players rapidly took it up.

Stage Hands

HERE is another addition to the legend of the union stage hands' requirements that comes cropped from Broadway. There was a plan to bring "Springtime for Henry" back to New York. This play had its run in Gotham some time ago and after that went on tour. Although it had played nowhere lately, it is still in the eyes of the national body of stage hands a "road show." Therefore the organization claimed that three members of the union—a "road crew"—would have to be employed, as well as the usual four for the theater. The plan was dropped. Seven stage hands lost work and five actors.

"We the People"

"WE THE PEOPLE," Elmer Rice's latest play, will have its first acting in Chicago by the Institute Players at the Jewish People's Institute playhouse, 3500 Douglas boulevard, on Saturday night, April 29. Performances will continue until May 4.

This drama, which was recently staged in New York for a brief run, presents a cross-section of American life during the depression, as seen by Mr. Rice's somewhat radical eyes. Charles Freeman, director of the Institute Players, has assembled a special company, recruited from little theater groups and unemployed professionals, for this large scale production.

The Institute Players have given Chicago its first glimpses of the following works by dramatists of importance: "The Great God Brown," by Eugene O'Neill; "The Criminal Code," by Martin Flavin; "The Camel Through the Needle's Eye," by Frantisek Langer, and "That Man Saul," by Sidney Buchman.

Little Theaters

"Loyal Vagabonds," a war comedy in three acts by Joseph V. Gibson, will be staged by the Post Players in the Goodman theater Saturday and Sunday evenings, May 27 and 28. This play was formerly produced by members of the John F. Conley post of the American Legion under the title of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp." The performances at the Goodman will mark its downtown debut.

Drama of Iowa

"THE most picturesque event in the history of the United States since the Boston Tea Party has been the action of the farmers during the recent mortgage foreclosures in Iowa," says Sidney Howard, author of "Alien Corn," in which Katharine Cornell is acting in New York.

Accordingly, Howard has left New York for a visit to Iowa, where he hopes to collect material for a drama. He feels, however, that Willa Cather has so completely interpreted that section of the country she may have left nothing for any one else to say about it.

Film Will Carry Views of Century of Progress to All Parts of World.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Hollywood studios, swift to seize on news events as a basis for screen entertainment, could hardly pass over so dramatic an event as the shooting of Mayor Cermak of Chicago.

The typical rags to riches motif of American life, which was the life story of the martyred mayor, is being used by the Fox company in its story, "The American." Born of immigrant parents, raised in the coal mines of Braidwood, Ill. [where your scribe once taught school], forced to earn his livelihood on the streets of Chicago peddling firewood while still a boy [among his clients were the aristocratic Carter Harrisons, and, strangely enough, Harrison like Cermak met his death by assassination] Cermak's dramatic biography has the studio enthusiastic over its theme of patriotism and success.

In the screen story not only will the life of Cermak be shown, but the sweep of Chicago's dynamic growth from the fire disaster of 1871 to the ambitious Century of Progress. From a midwest point of view the panorama should carry a thrill to many people of the world. This film will be their only chance to see the World's Fair of this year.

The martyred mayor's fight to clear Chicago of the name put upon it by reckless parasites and heedless writers will be pictured. The story is being written by Dudley Nichols and Lamar Trotti, both former newspapermen.

Joan Crawford Talks.

Joan Crawford, at home at last after several days of inaccessibility following the announcement of her separation from Douglas Fairbanks Jr., talked freely on this amusingly modern way of ending an unhappy marriage.

In her charming Brentwood house with its white walls and white beamed ceiling living room filled with urns of Easter lilies, white stock and white roses [Joan has a passion for white flowers] she served tea gracefully while she spoke somewhat heatedly of her feeling about the way people were talking.

"Please say one thing for me, and let me get it off my chest first. Both Doug and I are tired of having people say that he married me and made a lady of me. I think a person either is or is not a lady from the beginning. While my long association with Doug has, of course, given me a great deal in many ways, as it would any one who knows him, I cannot say that it has endowed me with any special quality which I did not myself possess. He is just as sick of hearing it as I am."

Here Joan stopped to shake back a stray lock of hair from her sunburned face. She has been using her retirement to get a nice coat of tan. She recommends the use of mineral oil before the first exposure, "because you brown without burning," and, for the second and following exposures, half mineral oil and half vinegar well shaken.

Self-Dictated Improvement.

Going back to the "lady business," she said: "Of course, I was hey-hey —why not? But I already had made the turn for seriousness and for self-improvement before ever I had met Doug. Instead of being the cause of it, he was just part of it. Then, too, people talk about my being ambitious. If I had been as ambitious as people say, I would have made a more ambitious marriage, wouldn't I?"

Ting-a-ling—the phone—a boy friend was calling Joan. No, she was busy tomorrow, but there was the next night. Yes. Lovely. Call me in the morning. "Doug and I were very unhappy—for over a year. When he went to New York it was at my suggestion—I was working on a picture and could not leave but wanted him to go, see some shows, be away from me for a while, and get a new viewpoint.

"When he came back," Joan said, "after being with Noel Goward, whom he admires tremendously, and with other friends in the east, we talked things over and decided to separate. I helped pack his things. I still see that everything belonging to him is taken care of, his business, his clothes, and I will continue to do this as long as he wants me to. We still share the same secretary.

"Now I am as free as the air. It is wonderful. I see him more now than when we were married." Ting-a-ling—young Doug on the phone. Yes, she would love to go to dinner with him—and the theater.

"Do you know, it's grand going out with him now? I think what I will wear, what he likes. When we were out last Sunday, for the first time in his life with me, I let him order the dinner. I have always tended to those things—but it's good for him to do those things himself now, and we had such a good time."

Joan was very friendly, very cordial, but there was something that said: "Don't ask me why we were unhappy, why we are separating. It's sacred and I can't speak of it. It's our affair." The family relationships are still kept up. Doug's mother sent Joan two lovely presents for her birthday recently; so did her young stepfather-in-law. It's all a mystery to folk who expect primitive passions in a family smashup. "We are intelligent people, I hope," says Joan, "and I hope we can go through this situation like civilized people."

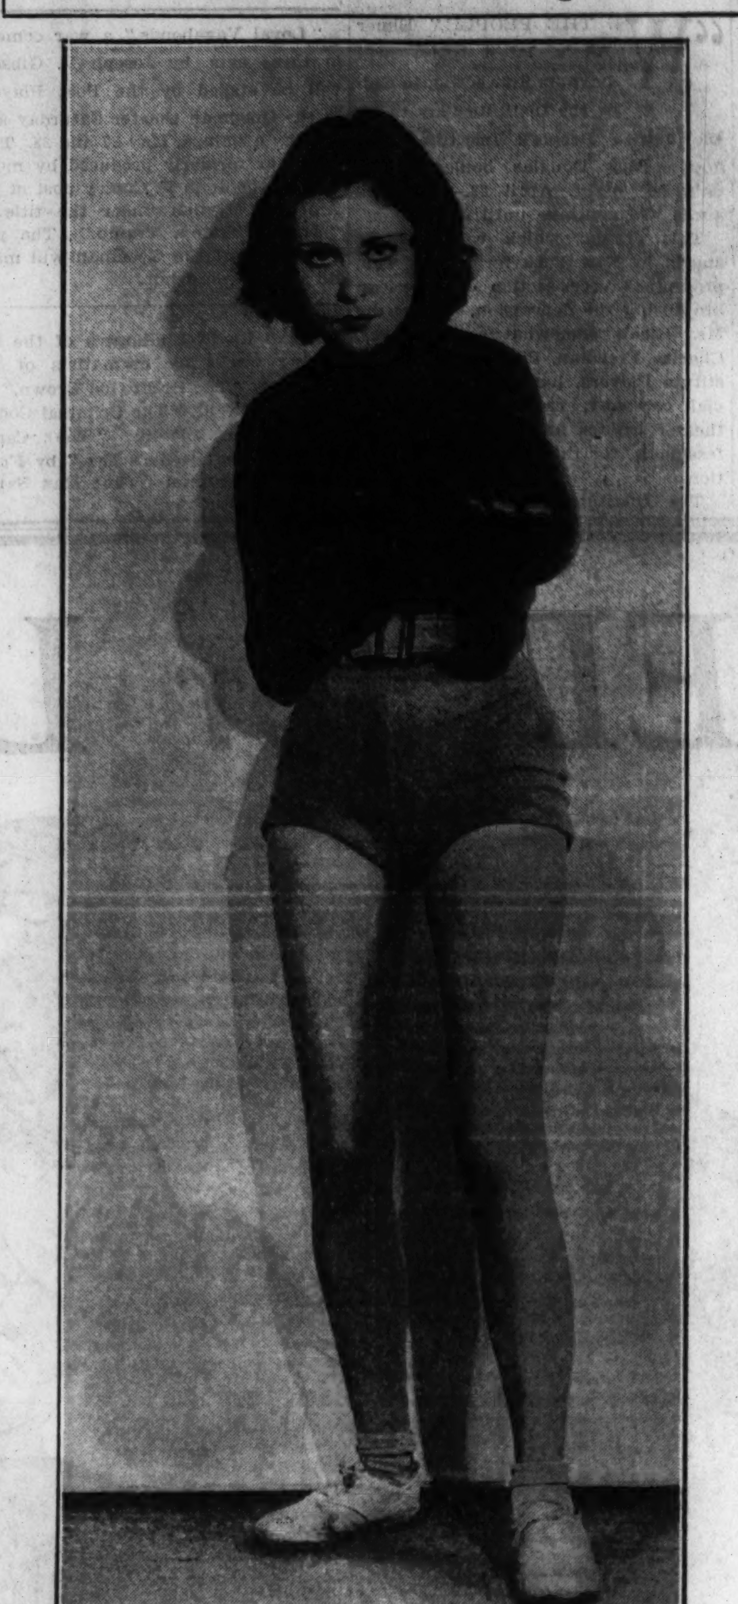
The lovely house that Joan has worked so hard to furnish, which shows evidences of her handiwork on all sides, will not be sold as she first planned. She is redecorating some of it, but she loves it and wants to keep it. On a tour of the house Joan brought us into the nursery. Three tiny folk are living there now. They are the children of Joan's chauffeur. His wife had a nervous breakdown recently; so Joan took them home with her and put a nurse in charge. Somehow it looked quite as it should. One wonders if Joan had had a normal marriage, away from the bright lights, things wouldn't have been different now.

Buddy Rogers is the first of the motion picture folk to take advantage of the local beer inundation to throw a foamy post-prohibition party. Buddy was talking to the salesmanager of a Los Angeles brewery, who was on the set of his new film, "Five Cents a Glass," which he is making for Fox. The manager said the local beer will be the most potent brew ever legally made in Los Angeles; that is, 4 per cent. Previous legal beer, before prohibition, was 3.85 per cent by volume. It costs $2.75 a case for 24 pints and the same for 12 quarts, with a dollar deposit on the cases.

Ibsen Revival.

George H. Brennan's revival of Ibsen's "Ghosts," which he originally planned for earlier this season, is once more in preparation. Hilda Englund, the Swedish-American actress, will return to the stage in the offering after several years' retirement.

Like Father, Like Daughter



Miss Rhoda Cross, now playing minor roles in Hollywood, is a daughter of Leach Cross, once famous lightweight boxer. She's 22, has been in pictures for six years, and is gifted with a knockout punch.

HISTORIETTE

LESLIE HOWARD was born in London, England, one April some forty years ago. He was a bank clerk until the world war in which he took active part. Stage plays in which he won acclaim were "Her Cardboard Lover," "Outward Bound," "The Green Hat," "Emotion," "Reserved for Ladies," "Animal Kingdom," and "Berkeley Square."

LESLIE HOWARD.

Some years ago the movie makers approached him with offers of long term contracts, but he told them he wasn't interested and refused "to be caught up in the machine." Movie fans clamored for him, however, and now Mr. Howard consents graciously and delightfully to grace our screens. You have seen him in "Outward Bound," "Never the Twain Shall Meet," "A Free Soul," "Five and Ten," "Devotion," "Animal Kingdom," and "Smiling Through."

This player lives a quiet life with his British wife and his two children —a daughter, Leslie, and a son, Ronald, now in school in England. He likes to fuss around with the camera, can draw a bit, and plays the piano by ear. His favorite outdoor sports are tennis and swimming.

BURNS, Hollywood makeup man. . . . DOLORES DEL RIO and JOEL M'CREA will be teamed together again, this time in "Modesta," adapted from a G. B. Stern novel. . . . And speaking of G. B. Stern's novels, "The Long Lost Father" will serve as a co-starring vehicle for KATHARINE HEPBURN and JOHN BARRYMORE. . . . GEORGE ARLISS is busily working on "Voltaire" for Warner Brothers. . . . LILIAN HARVEY and HENRY GARAT, who did such charming work in "Congress Dances," are to be co-starred by Fox in a musical production. It is being written for them by Buddy De Sylva and Richard Whiting. Paul Martin, who directed "Congress Dances," will probably be at the megaphone. . . . Said ETHEL BARRYMORE of DIANA WYNYARD, "The finest young actress in Hollywood." . . . JAMES CAGNEY craves advice. WHAT sort of rôles shall he play in future? Any ideas, fans? . . . IRENE DUNNE rides a bicycle between her dressing room and the sound stages. . . . ROBERT WOOLSEY is ill with the flu. . . . Writes a reporter in the London Era: ". . . I have a fantastic dream as to how any given story starts life in Hollywood and finishes in its complete screen form. I can visualize in my dream a very large, oversized, chromium-nickel plated filing cabinet, in which is contained a complete synopsis of every known plot, every known sequence, and every known situation.

"I can see a large number of highly efficient factory departmental heads collected in a vast room, in which this cabinet is located, sitting down at an enormous table, and lighting up nine inch cigars.

"'Gentlemen,' says the president or works manager, 'you want a story with Constance Bennett, George Raft, Jack Barrymore, and Marie Dressler.'

"A sigh of satisfaction floats round the table, and 'Gee! this is going to be great!' is passed from mouth to mouth.

"One large man, speaking from the corner of his mouth, then enunciates: 'But, chief, what kinda story?' Like a shot out of a gun comes the reply:

"A signal is given and the clerk in charge of the filing cabinet dials a species of automatic telephone, in Rom— Cro— Mel— Com. The mechanism revolves and eight distinct plots are shot on the table.

"A discussion might possibly arise as to the respective merits of each plot, but I have a sinking feeling that in actual fact lots are drawn and one is chosen.

"'Situation,' says the big chief, 'calls for a murder in the first reel.'

"'First reel murder' is dialed. "'Situation' neatly typewritten on a card is presented to the president.

"'Sequence,' says the president, 'virtuous girl in danger of losing honor'; 'Alternatives.' 'Alternatives' are dialed, and fall on the table in crowds. Again one is chosen by lot.

"Criticism is made on the tempo—it is slow. 'Accelerating tempo in sequence 842z.'

"And so the story is made. An entirely new, shattering, world inspiring, heart breaking, laughter provoking, exciting, tense, and living picture is ready for production at the studios. . . ."

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Letters to the Voice of the Fan should be written on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope, PLEASE!

From Karol Kay's Mother.

My dear Miss Tinée: I am writing to tell you about the picture, "Second Hand Wife." I have just received a clipping of THE TRIBUNE with your comments. I did enjoy it. We were readers of THE TRIBUNE for fifteen years when we lived in the middle west.

Your name—By Mae Tinée—sort of gave me a homesick thrill. Rather liked it, too. I just can't remember of ever not seeing it in THE TRIBUNE.

I don't blame you for being doubtful as to whether the child violinist is really playing. Karol Kay is my daughter, and her playing her concert in this picture was more pleasure to her than the swimming, riding, or all the other incidentals she had to do.

At present she is studying and is not playing publicly. She is 8 years old and the book or novel called for a child of 11. I am so glad you liked her work. She has a Russian teacher, Julian Brodetsky, and follows the Auer method. I have private school work at home for her and a German teacher, so she speaks, reads, and writes German quite well. I think the violin practicing has made her concentrate. She is ready for fifth grade work.

I have enjoyed your clipping, write-up, and hope you will hear her play some time. Sincerely,

MRS. VERNIE KAY.

Editor's note: I found your letter so interesting that I take the liberty of giving it to the world to read. You don't mind, Mrs. Kay?

Original Interpretations.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have just read your review, "State Fair." A few weeks ago I had the pleasure of seeing the picture.

All you say of it is true, except that I do not believe that the director or the two live stock judges ever saw a judge work in the arena. Why they made this part of the picture a farce I do not know. It certainly wasn't natural.

For the last 16 years I have either judged or exhibited at several of the largest state fairs and I have never seen a judge go through any of the actions that these two fellows did.

Will Rogers and Louise Dresser were great in their parts.

Yours sincerely,
FRED B. KEIFER.

Editor's note: And they learned about live stock judges from Mr. Keifer! Come again.

Yiddish Drama of "Holy Fool" in Old Poland

By Charles Collins.

rabbi whose young wife was the unworldly Yoshe's evil destiny, Maurice Schwartz presides over this high court of clerical wisdom, which finally decides that Yoshe is not a man at all but an evil spirit that haunts cemeteries, brings epidemics of the plague, and causes catastrophes wherever he appears.

* *

"Holy Fool" Here.

So poor Yoshe, standing as a representative of the type of "holy fool," which is frequent in Slavic literature and folk lore, is cast out by his kind and resumes his blind, pathetic wanderings. The author of the novel asserts that the character is founded upon an actual occurrence among the Jews of Poland, and that the real Yoshe died only a few years ago.

The play is almost as populous as a pageant; it is, in fact, a highly colored spectacle of old Yiddish life in its mid-European environment as well as a drama with emotional impact. Its people represent the Polish and Russian forbears of the audiences to which the Yiddish theatrical companies make their racial appeal, and to which they give a copious supply of highly vitalized stage entertainment.

Yiddish is a jargon, or composite of several languages, based on a Low German vocabulary. The Yiddish people, i. e., the Polish and Russian Jews, moved into their habitat early in the middle ages from the Rhineland, by invitation from Poland, to form a trading class between the nobles and the serfs. Their language, cut off from its parent German and always written and printed in Hebrew characters, absorbed words from other sources—Hebrew and Aramaic from the Bible and the Talmud, Russian and Polish from the populations in which these Jews were imbedded.

Yiddish is a folk tongue which has no written grammar and is incapable of strict grammatical analysis. It has a literature rich in folk songs and folk tales, representing legendary material absorbed from various sources; and during the nineteenth century, especially after 1880, it became the medium of expression for a gifted school of novelists, poets, and dramatists. Among the Yiddish authors whose work has won recognition are Spektor, Frug, Dienensohn, I. L. Peretz, and Sholem Aleichem. New York has been the home city and publication site of a number of modern Yiddish writers, including Sholem Asch, A. Reisin, Libin and Peretz Hirschbein.

Rabbi and Holy Fool in Yiddish Drama

CHARACTERS IN "YOSHE KALB"
[Sketch by Ben Cohen.]

The Yiddish Art Theater company, with Maurice Schwartz as its leader, will bring to the Apollo theater, on April 20, its production of "Yoshe Kalb," which has been winning high praise in New York. This drama of a mystic simpleton wandering in expiation of a youthful sin has repeated the history of "The Dybbuk" and "The Golem," and aroused the interest of English speaking playgoers in Yiddish acting. This sketch presents impressions of Mr. Schwartz as a rabbi and of Lazar Freed in the title role.

New in Chicago

"OF THEE I SING" returns to Chicago this evening for an engagement limited to seven nights and two matinées in the Auditorium theater, at popular prices. This is the same company that was seen here earlier in the season with Oscar Shaw, Harriette Lake, Donald Meek, and Cecil Lean as the featured players, and Paul Everton, Al Sexton, John Cherry, William Pringle, Francis Pierlot, Abe Reynolds, and Audrey Christie as their associates. The company returns intact, principals and chorus, the only change being Gaile Darling for Roberta Robinson in the rôle of Diana Devereaux.

This musical comedy, satirizing political life in an extravagant way, has liveliness, clever music, pretty girls, and a generous atmosphere of hilarity. Its tour to the Pacific coast has been enormously successful.

"Counsellor-at-Law," the successful play by Elmer Rice, which Chicagoans applauded for twenty weeks last season, will be seen with Paul Muni in the title rôle at the Apollo theater, for one week, beginning tomorrow evening. It deals with the rise of a Jewish lawyer from impoverished immigrant parentage to the front ranks of his profession. A past professional slip is recalled by a malicious rival in an attempt to disbar him at the height of his career, but his astute wit serves to lift him through his difficulties.

Vaudeville Bills

THE Palace theater announces a "triple bill" of headliners for its current vaudeville program. Aileen Stanley, Herman Timberg and Maria Gambarelli are the leading entertainers. The program consists of:

Carl Shaw—An eccentric dancer.

The Chicago theater's program of vaudeville entertainment for the current week includes: The Dickens Sisters, radio harmony singers; Cass, Mark and Owen, dancing comedy trio; George Prentice, puppeteer, with a marionette show; the Fred Evans ballet in "Phantom Fantasy, and Josef Cherniavsky, guest director for the Chicago theater orchestra.

Irish Player's Last Week; New Piece by Yeats

THE Abbey Theater company of Dublin will begin the seventh and final week of its successful engagement at the Harris theater tomorrow night. On that evening, as curtain raised to "The Playboy of the Western World," the Irish players will give William Butler Yeats' latest play, "The Words on the Window Pane," which is new in Chicago.

In this one act piece Mr. Yeats, cofounder of the Abbey theater and of international reputation as a poet, has dealt with the story of Dean Swift's love affairs with the ladies known as Stella and Vanessa. The scene is laid today in an eighteenth century house in Dublin. A group of people have gathered there for a spiritualist seance with a direct voice medium. Before the seance starts one of the sitters discovers some words cut on the window pane by a diamond; they are lines from one of the rare poems that Swift's Stella wrote, and it transpires that this house has the tradition of being a house in which Stella lived. The seance begins and the medium soon is controlled by the spirits of Swift and Stella. In the cast will be Kate Curling, P. J. Carolan, Arthur Shields, Michael J. Dolan, F. J. McCormick, Ria Mooney, and May Craig.

Theater Guild Activities.

"American Dream," the cycle of three one-act plays by George O'Neil, has closed its New York engagement, after a run of four weeks.

Gallery God's Story of Old Chicago Stage

To the dramatic editor:

CHICAGO, April 4.—I was very much interested in your article about old playbills and feel that I, too, must send you a few lines, as I was also an old gallery god, and am still going strong when there is anything worth seeing. I have several hundred playbills dating from 1879 to the present time and it gives me great pleasure to look them over.

In my young days I was very stage struck and often went on as a super at McVicker's, the Grand, the Columbia, Hooley's and other theaters. When McCullough played his last week, I was at the rehearsal in the morning, but for some reason I did not come at night. I was told McCullough chased his dresser all over the stage with a knife. He was a great actor and I have seen him many times.

Henry Irving and company gave us a real sensation and such wonderful performances by the company. We also had plenty of Shakespeare in those days and we were not coaxed to go, but went in crowds. One week we had three companies playing Shakespeare—Lawrence Barrett, Tom Keene, and McCullough.

Chicago was a real producing center 40 or 50 years ago. McVicker's put on "The Tempest" and "Midsummer Night's Dream," which ran all summer; also engaged a splendid company and put on many of the old English comedies — "The Rivals," "The Poor Gentleman," "Wild Oats," "The School for Scandal," and others. Most of the big stars played at McVicker's, as that was the leading theater—Mary Anderson in "Galatea," "Love," "Daughter of Roland," "Joan"; Modjeska in "Adrienne," and "Mary Stuart" were wonderful. Jefferson, Dion Boucicault, Mrs. Drew, Georgia Drew, Maurice Barrymore, Lotta, Maggie Mitchell, Marie Wainwright, W. J. Florence, and a host of others are among my memories.

I shall always remember the thrill I got when seeing Henry Irving in "The Bells" or "Louis XI." The big gallery of the Columbia theater, seating 1,000 or more, was full every night he played here. He paid us special honor by putting on here for the first time in America "Richelieu," and on the last night of the engagement Ellen Terry christened the theater "The Columbia." It was formerly Haverley's and is now the movie house on Monroe street. I hope you are able to read what I have already written, as my hand is not as steady as it once was.

the motion picture rights were sold to Paramount the other day for the tidy sum of $26,000. Incidentally, Paramount refused to buy the original script of "One Sunday Afternoon" four years ago at any price.

The Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur play, "Twentieth Century," also closed during the recent currency drought, came to life again last Saturday night and, like the other resurrections, has been doing twice the business it did before its closing. It would seem that there are plays that, like artists, have to die to be appreciated.

Plans for Festival.

Robert Henderson, like a young Winthrop Ames come out of the west, was in New York last week completing his plans for this year's dramatic festival in the Lydia Mendelssohn theater at Ann Arbor, Mich. Having had a peek at his schedules, I may tell you that this is going to be an interesting festival. It will continue from May 22 to June 21.

This five weeks of drama in the college town is annually taking on a greater interest and importance. Each year additional hundreds make the pilgrimage to see what Mr. Henderson can find for them in the way of newer and worthier plays, just as they journey in England down to Malvern when Sir Barry Jackson gives his summer festival of historical drama.

For Lovers of Good Plays.

But what Malvern is for students of drama rather than for seekers after entertainment, the Ann Arbor festival is conducted for lovers of the theater and of good plays, and has made fine progress on that basis. Young Mr. Henderson (and young he is past belief, if you count his achievements against his years, which now number 27) is frankly of this generation. It is the new, the modern, the exciting drama of today that interests him. He is willing (and I suspect that this is in part a graceful gesture in the direction of his father, Dean Henderson of the University of Michigan) to include one classical revival, or perhaps two.

It was he, you may recall, who a year ago staged a notable revival of "Electra" with Blanche Yurka and Mrs. Patrick Campbell at the head of its cast. But his own interest is definitely with the theater of today.

Financial Success.

He has just completed his first season as director of the Civic theater in Detroit, which he inherited from the late Jessie Bonstelle, and he is modestly proud of the fact that that institution was this year able to pay all its bills, despite bank moratoriums, Ford closings, and such.

Mr. Henderson's selection of plays for this year's festival indicates his thorough modernity. He has included as bold a choice as Noel Coward's "Design for Living." This he plans to pair with either "Autumn Crocus" or "Another Language," and in either case he will provide a subject for such debates as probably the great middle west has not heard these many seasons.

Other plays will include "Criminal at Large," which ran successfully through half the Broadway season and was counted the most intelligent of the newer mystery plays; Rachel Crothers' "When Ladies Meet," an outstanding success of this year, and "The Silent Woman," this being its first professional presentation in America.

There is a chance, if stage measurements permit, that Mr. Henderson will pick up the production of "Alice in Wonderland," including all the Le Gallienne company, excepting Lady Eva herself, and set them down on the stage of his college theater, which should prove exciting to Ann Arbor.

The Henderson assignment of parts is also interesting. For "Design for Living" he has selected Judith Anderson to play the Lynn Fontanne rôle, Tom Powers to play Lunt's part, and Glenn Anders as a substitute for Mr. Coward. It might work.

In "Criminal at Large" Violet Kemble Cooper will have the part that brought Alexandra Carlisle back to the stage and was later played by Florence Reed. For "Autumn Crocus" he has chosen Edith Barrett for the spinster rôle, played in New York first by Patricia Collinge and later by Dorothy Gish.

"The Party's Over."

The play of the week was a fairly amusing comedy about the hard working son and brother and the parasitical family that swarms upon him. "The Party's Over" is its title, deriving from a scene in which Bruce Blakely, having supported his father and mother, his sister and her husband, his brother and his wife, emulates the hesitant worm and finally turns.

"Get out!" he shouts, meaning all of them except his parents. "Get out, the lot of you! The party's over!"

The incidental comedy and the exceptionally good cast that plays it are the features that save this piece. The family parasites, though they are an irritating lot, are also amusing. Bruce's brother is a full blooded lad at Yale who takes up with a blonde waitress. When she is in trouble he borrows two hundred dollars to help hed get out, marries her to save the two hundred and brings her home to live.

Bruce's sister is enamored of a crooner who is merely marking time until some of the radio program makers discover him. Then he will step in and create the sensation that Bing Crosby and Rudy Vallee have missed. While he is waiting for the job he, too, comes home to live with his wife's folks.

Then there is Bruce's own romance. He is in love with a married woman who is Parisbound for a divorce and expects him to join her. His business crashes about the time his family gets out of hand and he misses that date. But the divorced lady comes back from Paris and frees him from his obligations. It is she who gives him the courage to throw the others out and stand on his own right to happiness.

[White Photo.]

Barry Fitzgerald, leading comedian of the Abbey theater of Dublin, has appeared in so many fantastic characters during the company's run in Chicago that there is curiosity about the way he looks off stage. So here is a picture that shows him without whiskers.

Miss Taylor as Revived Star; Gotham Stage

NEW YORK, April 8.—Harry Moses has completed the casting of "Enchantment," the play in which Laurette Taylor will be starred. Guido Nadzo, Hugh Miller, Julia Hoyt, Dorothea Sadler, Roberta Beatty, and Grant Gordon will have principal parts in the company, which is now in rehearsal under the direction of Robert Edmond Jones. "Enchantment" is scheduled to open at the Plymouth theater, New York, April 18. Mr. Jones is designing the settings.

Milton Aborn will present "The Mikado" at the St. James theater, New York, April 17 and plans to revive several other Gilbert and Sullivan operettas during the spring, several of which have not been heard in New York for many years. William Danforth, Frank Moulan, Vera Ross, Roy Cropper, and Nizi Koyke will be among the players in "The Mikado," which was revived last season by the Civic Light Opera company under Mr. Aborn's direction.

Gilbert Miller has sailed for England to prepare his London presentation of "The Late Christopher Bean." He announces that Cedric Hardwicke, who will appear in the London production, has signed a three year contract to appear in Miller productions, both in London and New York.

"Bed an' Board," a play by H. L. Greene, has been placed in rehearsal under the direction of Edward Clarke Lilleq. Among those expected to appear in the cast are Mildred McCoy, Patricia Calvert, Roy Gordon, Percy Kilbride, Porter Hall, Ruth Chorpening, and Frank Kingdon. The production is listed to open in New York late this month.

Play by Maugham.

Richie Ling has been engaged for an important rôle in "For Services Rendered," the play by Somerset Maugham that Sam H. Harris is producing. The actor will replace H. Reeves-Smith in the cast. The Maugham drama will be offered in New York the week of April 10.

Music Lovers of Chicagoland Are Promised Some Opera Performances During Summer

Lawrence Tibbett Will Be Heard in "Emperor Jones" on May 2 and 5, and Also in "Pagliacci"; "Aida" Planned as Welcome for Flyers.

By Edward Moore.

THERE is one way to resume interest in operatic presentation in Chicago. It is to give some operatic performances. Wherefore, at a time of year when most opera companies have dispersed for the summer Chicago is about to try the experiment.

A few days ago this newspaper announced that "Emperor Jones" would be presented at the Auditorium on the evenings of Tuesday, May 2, and Friday, May 5, and that Lawrence Tibbett would appear in the name part. It now appears that "Emperor Jones" is to be the first of several presentations.

It's Always an Exciting Event.

There is no question that "Emperor Jones" was the most exciting operatic event of several seasons. It had been a famous play for a number of seasons before. Then Louis Gruenberg took it up and set music to Eugene O'Neill's words. Thereby Mr. Tibbett was provided with a full length baritone rôle, and he went on and made the hit of his life. Those who attended the performance in New York, those others who took it at long distance over the radio, all say that it succeeded in fairly well setting the audience aflame. And it did not in the least hurt the popularity of the piece that some people disliked the score intensely. That only added to the excitement.

This best seller of the season will be coupled with another best seller of many seasons. Mr. Tibbett will appear in "Pagliacci" on both the announced evenings, singing the part of Tonio, and so the Chicago opera going public will have an opportunity to hear a notable artist in notable operas of the American and Italian schools.

"Aida" Will Welcome Flyers.

Other operas will come later. A performance of "Aida" is being planned to be part of the welcome to the Italian flyers when they arrive in Chicago; in other words, about the middle of June. This will probably be an open air performance in Soldiers' field. It will be built up with extra spectacular and pageant features, and "Aida" is the one opera of the entire world that lends itself readily to that sort of extension. There may also be a performance of German opera of large dimensions later in the summer, but plans for this are still in the making and little entirely definite has come from the plan makers.

So far only the cast of "Pagliacci" has been made public, but it holds out promise of much enjoyment. In addition to Mr. Tibbett, Mario Chamlee will appear as Canio, Marion Claire as Nedda, Giuseppe Cavadori as Beppe, and Mario Fiorello as Silvio. Isaac Van Grove, Chicagoan, will be the conductor of "Emperor Jones" and "Pagliacci." He is a musical director of force and ability and he brings to every performance some interesting ideas about staging as well as musical performance.

Ordinarily the music department of a newspaper is but little concerned with managements. It is usually enough to take account of performances and to allow managements to stand or fall by the managements they present. But for reasons indicated in the first paragraph of this account, the manager of the coming operas is more than commonly connected with the operatic situation in Chicago.

Miss Denton Steps Out.

This manager is Miss Grace Denton, who has been the cause of some of the most interesting events of the season, and, for that matter, last season. Her Monday night concert series brought some of the most notable artists of the world to Chicago: a lecture series of similar order brought other interesting personalities. She presented Marie Jeritza in "Tosca" a few weeks ago and Lily Pons in concert a few nights ago. Now she is taking up these opera projects.

In other words, she has been stepping out and doing things in a time when many others have been hemming and hawing and finally deciding that the times were not propitious. Of course, the times have been about as unpropitious as any in history, but there were some who believed that even these conditions were not enough to cause total stagnation. It would seem to have been mainly a question of intelligent courage. It is certainly true that, lacking Miss Denton's efforts, the season would have been much duller than it has been.

This department therefore desires to extend her its congratulations and best wishes in her operatic projects. It believes them well worth support and encouragement.

Vladimir Horowitz with the Symphony.

Vladimir Horowitz, that wizard of the piano keyboard, is to be the soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra on both the Tuesday afternoon and Thursday-Friday programs this week. Between him and Mr. Stock a complete Beethoven program has been arranged, although it will be divided between the two datings. On Tuesday Mr. Stock will conduct the third "Leonore" Overture and the "Eroica" Symphony of Beethoven, and Mr. Horowitz will play Rachmaninoff's Third Concerto, with which he created his first riot in Chicago. On Thursday evening and Friday afternoon Mr. Stock will conduct Liadow's "Baba Yaga" and Glière's "Ilia Mourometz" Symphony, and Mr. Horowitz will play Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, which he has not yet played here, though he is about the only pianist in the world who has not.

Incidentally, the popular program on Saturday night shows to what heights a popular program may climb and still be accepted as popular. Mr. Stock schedules the third "Leonore" Overture and the Fifth Symphony by Beethoven, and for the second half the gigantic series from the "Ring of the Nibelung" that he presented on the regular programs a short time ago, consisting of excerpts from "The Rhinegold," "The Valkrie," "Siegfried," and "Twilight of the Gods." It would be interesting, not to say enlightening, to compare this program with those given when the series was started some years ago.

In this connection there should be room here for a letter relayed to this desk Vox Pop. It reads:

"Allow me a few words concerning a topic seldom mentioned here—music. Are you one of those who have unfortunately neglected or do not appreciate one of America's finest musical organizations, the Stock symphony?

"All Chicagoans should value highly their symphony orchestra, but many sadly underestimate or fail to realize the influence of good music in their lives. The fine qualities in classical music, as in the other fine arts, are as truly essential for the maintenance and advancement of high cultural values of mankind.

"Ragtime is ideal for dancing and exercising, but variety and subtlety of form, as in the classics, do not exist in ragtime's perpetual sameness of rhythm and form. No normal person would be satisfied with reading only his nursery rhymes all through life, but craves interesting and profound literature as he matures, and the musical world offers just as much to aspiring mankind.

Emperor Jones

LAWRENCE TIBBETT. [Edwards Photo.]

Here is the famous American baritone in the first scene of the opera, "Emperor Jones," which so greatly added to his fame this season. He will appear in the role at the Auditorium on Tuesday evening, May 2, and on Friday evening, May 5, coupling each appearance with one as the Italian Tonio in "Pagliacci."

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, April 8.—[Special.]—Three premières are promised to Broadway's first-nighters for next week. The productions include a German version of "The Beggar's Opera" and Somerset Maugham's latest play. Here are the announcements:

"The Three-Penny Opera"—Opens Monday night at the Empire theater. A musical comedy from Germany, written by Kurt Weill and Bert Brecht and based on John Gay's "The Beggar's Opera." Steffie Duna, Robert Chisholm, Josephine Huston, and Rex Evans are in the cast.

"For Services Rendered"—Opens Wednesday night at the Booth theater. This is the latest theatrical contribution of Somerset Maugham. According to Mr. Maugham, it is his swan song to the drama. "For Services Rendered" opened in London last November. The players include Fay Bainter, Henry Daniell, Richie Ling, Walter Kingsford, Elizabeth Risdon, Jane Wyatt, and Jean Adair.

"Strange Gods"—Opens Saturday night at the Ritz theater. A play by Jessica Ball which has its setting in Florida. The action revolves about a native and a woman from up north. Vera Allen, Ralph Theadore, Blaine Cordner, Richard Ewell, and Mary Horne are among the participants.

NOTES OF MUSIC

John McCormack will sing his last recital of the season at Orchestra hall this afternoon, and, as was announced here a week ago, his program will be made up of requests. He is waiting until the last moment before deciding on his exact list in order to give every one a chance, but there seems reason to believe that among the numbers will be "Rose of Tralee," "Bless This Home," "O Dry Those Tears," "Just for Today," "To the Children," "A Fairy Story by the Fire," "Little Boy Blue," "The Ballynure Ballad," and "Kathleen Mavourneen."

The final concert of the Woman's Symphony orchestra a week from this afternoon will introduce the Chicago Bach chorus, directed by Edwin Stanley Seder, in an important part of the program. It will sing excerpts from several cantatas and one motet. Ebba Sundstrom, conductor of the orchestra, will direct Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony and Strauss' Serenade for woodwinds and horns.

The Fourth Presbyterian church vespers this afternoon will present George Harold Rigler in Stainer's "My hope is in the everlasting." The anthems will be Tschesnokoff's "The thief on the cross" and Thompson's "Ride on, ride on in majesty." Barrett Spach's postlude recital will be made up of works by the three B's of the organists, Bossi, Barie, and Bach. On Friday evening there will be a choral service presenting two cantatas, Gounod's "Gallia" and Stainer's "The Crucifixion."

Egon Petri is appearing in a piano recital in the ballroom of the Drake hotel this afternoon. It is known as the Chopin Memorial Fund concert and has been arranged by the Polish Arts club of Chicago under the auspices of Dr. Titus Zbyszewski, consul general of Poland, and a committee of Chicago patronesses. The program will be entirely of works by the composer whose name is in the title. It will consist of the Fantasia, the A flat Ballade, the D flat Nocturne, the C sharp Scherzo, the A flat Valse, the B minor Sonata, the twelve Etudes of opus 25, and the A flat Polonaise; in other words, Chopin in his largest and most expansive compositions.

The Chicago Cosmopolitan Opera company will sing Verdi's "Rigoletta" at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium tonight under the direction of Dino Bigalli. Luigi Ruffino, Carlo Formes, Bernice Ripley, Kai de Vermond, and Mari Barova will have the leading rôles. The performance is under the auspices of the Illinois grand lodge of the Sons of Italy in America.

Drama Festival

THE Malvern festival will be held in England this year from July 24 to Aug. 12, as the fifth season of the repertory under the direction of Sir Barry Jackson. Two early English dramas will start the festival, "The Conversion of St. Paul" and "Gammer Gurton's Needle." Other plays to be given will be Heywood's "The Fair Maid of the West," or "A Girl Worth Gold"; John Dryden's "All for Love," or "The World Well Lost"; Sheridan Knowles' "The Love Chase," and Henry Arthur Jones' "The Dancing Girl."

WHEN PAY CHECKS SHRINK

YOU CAN STILL GET THE THINGS YOU WANT

WHY do without the things you want? If you can't buy them, try barter and exchange!

Thrifty wives whose husbands' pay checks have shrunk are reviving this sensible practice.

More than likely you have many articles stored in the attic, basement, or elsewhere that can be exchanged for articles or services you need.

Check these storage places today! A musical instrument of some kind may bring the carpet you need. The nursery equipment you've kept may be traded for clothing. Perhaps the furniture you have stored away will be acceptable in trade for coal, a sewing machine, or a cook stove.

Many people would be glad to trade with you if they knew what you had to offer and what you want in return. You can reach these people quickly by placing a want ad in the Tribune Barter & Exchange column.

Make a list of the things you would like to trade. Then call Superior 0100—Want Ad-Viser. She'll gladly help you word an attractive want ad that will state your offer interestingly to the hundreds of thousands of Tribune readers. Statistics on Decay of Stage in Middle West

Ten Years' Shrinkage in One Night Towns of Illinos from 105 to 1.

TIME was when the answer to stage struck boys and girls inquiring of veteran artists like E. H. Sothern or Otis Skinner how to get on the stage consisted of the simple advice of "Go into 'stock'" or "Join a traveling company."

Today, with the hundreds of stock companies of 1928 and '29 cut down to a paltry twenty-four, a stock company opening for a beginner is almost out of the question. As for the traveling companies, their devastation can only be realized through recourse to statistics.

As late as 1923 the Central States circuit of theaters in Chicago was booking "legitimate" shows into one hundred and five towns in the state of Illinois alone. Eight years later [1931] this office booked theatrical attractions into six Illinois towns [not including Chicago]. Last year the six towns had shrunk to a single town. Peoria alone was open to legitimate bookings.

Illinois's case is no exception to the rule. Ninety-four Iowa towns were open to "legitimate" attractions until the season of 1922-'23. Today only six Iowa towns book the infrequent touring attractions. Seventy Wisconsin towns were open to troupes at the local opera houses in 1922-'23. Today four towns [not including Milwaukee] are prepared to book shows. The map of Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Kansas, Missouri, Minnesota, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming tells the same story.

In 1922-'23 one hundred and twenty shows were booked by the Central States circuit alone. No doubt there were more attractions on tour that year, routed direct from New York. This office, however, habitually booked "dates" in the middle western states for Shubert, Erlanger, and independent producers. In 1930-'31 the Central States circuit booked six attractions in a mere handful of "open" towns. This season it has spasmodically booked one show.

Visit the old Piper Opera house in Virginia City, as it stands falling to ruin today, for a conception of the old time "road." If it is possible to get in, the visitor will be astonished to find Minnie Maddern in a three sheet poster of "Caprice" staring down from the wall above the old bar. "Caprice" was produced in 1884 before Minnie Maddern's marriage to Mr. Fiske and enjoyed a New York "run" about one eighth as long as the runs of successful shows today. The profit for theatrical producers in the eighties and nineties and nineteen hundreds was on "the road." "Caprice," like all New York hits of those days, played the Virginia cities, Keokuks, and Burlingtons, neatly sandwiching the small towns in between the larger ones and thus paring railroad "jumps" down to an inexpensive minimum.

Today when there is no profit for shows on the road and even thinner pickings at their Manhattan source the shrinkage has naturally been drastic. Oldtimers no longer advise stage struck girls and boys to go into a stock company or join a traveling troupe. They must give up their stage strutting dreams or find another way.

For the last three years a group of young men and women have been training for the stage in Chicago at the Goodman Theater School of Acting. They have studied diction, pace, tempo and other canons of the stage arts. Now they are ready to go to New York—or think they are.

Chicagoans will have a chance to pass judgment on them Saturday, April 22 [Midwest Review night], when this batch of home trained actors and actresses appear in Maurice Gnesin's new play, "Leonardo da Vinci."

The next step for these Illinois thespians is steady work at acting, and their outlook is not a cheery one unless there is rebuilt in the middle western towns a circuit of theaters with regular plays to insure steady bookings. Such a plan, as a matter of fact, is in its incipiency.

Drama in Germany

EISENACH, Germany. — Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" will be one of the main offerings of the Wartburg "Forest theater," which will be opened in May under the direction of the Hereditary Prince Reuss. Other plays will include Schiller's "Robbers," and a new Luther drama by Hans Johst, the new dramatic adviser to the director of the Berlin Schauspielhaus.

The program of this open air stage also includes three operas: Humperdinck's "Hänsel and Gretel," Handel's "Rodelinde" and "The Tales of Hoffmann." Crown Princess Cecilie and Frau Winifred Wagner will attend a Richard Wagner memorial celebration conducted by the Bayreuth Association of German Women from June 7 to 10 in Eisenach.

Ethel's Ambition

ETHEL BARRYMORE, when interviewed recently, declared that her greatest ambition, to which she is now working, is to have a repertory company under her own management.

"I would produce four or five, perhaps seven or eight, plays each season," she said. "Some will be Shakespeare, others will be modern plays. We shall play in New York or on the road, just as I always do. Like my rise to stardom, this project has seemed such a long time coming, but I see it ahead. It may not be next year, but it will be soon. And it will be a glorious adventure."

Dwellers in the Arctic Region Enjoy "Tarzan"

By George Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Johnny Weissmuller was a visitor to "The Eskimo" set, where Director W. S. Van Dyke was working with Peter Freuchen.

"Hi," said Van to Johnny, "they like you in the arctic regions. I showed them your film 'Tarzan' up there, but it was without sound, and I had to explain the action to the kids. They thought it was great."

"Swell," said Johnny. "Maybe they'll let you direct me in my next one, and explain it to me as we go along."

Van Dyke, an adventurous gent who now has filmed pictures in the south seas, tropical Africa, and the frozen north—everywhere, in fact, that Merion Cooper and Ernest Schoedsack didn't go—says there are two pictures he will not direct and two places he will not go with a camera troupe. One of them is the stratosphere and the other is in a submarine or a diving bell under the sea. Elsewhere he is at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's call.

* *

Will Wrestle Alligator.

Weissmuller, incidentally, is getting ready to leave for Florida to appear in underwater shots, wrestling an alligator and challenging a shark, for his next "Tarzan" appearance. If long hair is all that is required to make a Samson out of an actor, Weissmuller will be a veritable Tarzan long before he reaches Florida, because Johnny's locks are already at the length where a barber would charge him $4 merely to sharpen his shears.

Bob Armstrong is peeved. His housekeeper, Mrs. Bess Stevens, elderly, motherly, friendly soul from the midwest, wanted a thrill, so she drove all by herself down to Agua Caliente for the big horse race of the season last Sunday. "She picked the winning horse and another of the other first three finishers and bet on them," Armstrong says, "and still she lost $1 betting on the race. What kind of odds do they lay at that race track?"

* *

Submerged Identities.

Al Scott, Colleen Moore's husband, got a kick out of seeing a reference to a match on "Al Scott's tennis court" in the local papers. He said it's the first time he'd been mentioned without a side reference to his wife in some months and frankly he was pleased.

It's difficult, sometimes, for an outsider to estimate how irksome to husbands weighs the constant attention concentrated on movie beauty wives, particularly when friend husband is a young, personable, ambitious, "regular" kind of fellow like Scott. One only needs mention Harry Bannister [Ann Harding's ex], Lydell Peck [Janet Gaynor's], Jack Kirkland [Nancy Carroll's], Jaime Del Rio, Charles Bennett [Boots Mallory's ex], and Charles Greathouse [Josephine Dunn's] as some of the husbands who recently walked the divorce plank out of the busy, exciting, headlined full lives of their wives.

This stunting of a husband's fame and personality while the wife is a picture star has attracted the serious attention of some of the girls. Jeanette MacDonald is one who determined to solve it by refraining from matrimony while she was a star. Her explanation of why no marriage to Bob Ritchie was just that.

Spring Comedy

"WHEN LADIES MEET," a comedy by Rachel Crothers, which was one of the outstanding successes of the New York theatrical season, will be the sixth and final play of the American Theater society's subscription in Chicago. It will open a three weeks' engagement at the Erlanger theater April 24. The play, which had a long run at the Royale theater in New York, will come to Chicago with its original cast, which includes Selena Royle, Spring Byington, Walter Abel, Frieda Inescourt, and Herbert Rawlinson. It was produced by John Golden and rehearsed by Miss Crothers.

The American Theater society also announces the appointment of Rollo Rimboni as its representative in Chicago. He is the business manager of the Erlanger theater.

Palm Sunday Parade Better than Easter's

Gotham Notables Flee Town Next Week, but Are Out in Force Today

By NANCY RANDOLPH

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—This is the day of the little parade and, between us, for several years the little parade has quite outshone its fellow parade of Easter Sunday. Once upon a time, to echo the brothers Grimm, the Easter parade on 5th avenue was the very last word in smartness. Not to be seen on the west side of the avenue in one's newest bonnet and spring furs and with one's escort in full glory of silk topper, cutaway, striped trousers, and ascot tie was to be either out of town or in hiding.

One saw simply every one as the bells tolled and services finished at St. Thomas' and St. Bartholomew's, not to mention St. Patrick's and the Brick Presbyterian. Suave Robert Goelet, the chic Mrs. Jay Gould, impressive Miss Berwind, the younger Tony Biddles, the Gordon Auchinclosses, the James Russell Lowells—in fact, every one of note.

Cameras Kept Busy.

The toppers rose in salute at every second step. Orchids and gardenias bloomed on every shoulder. Photographers scurried hither and yon, clicking

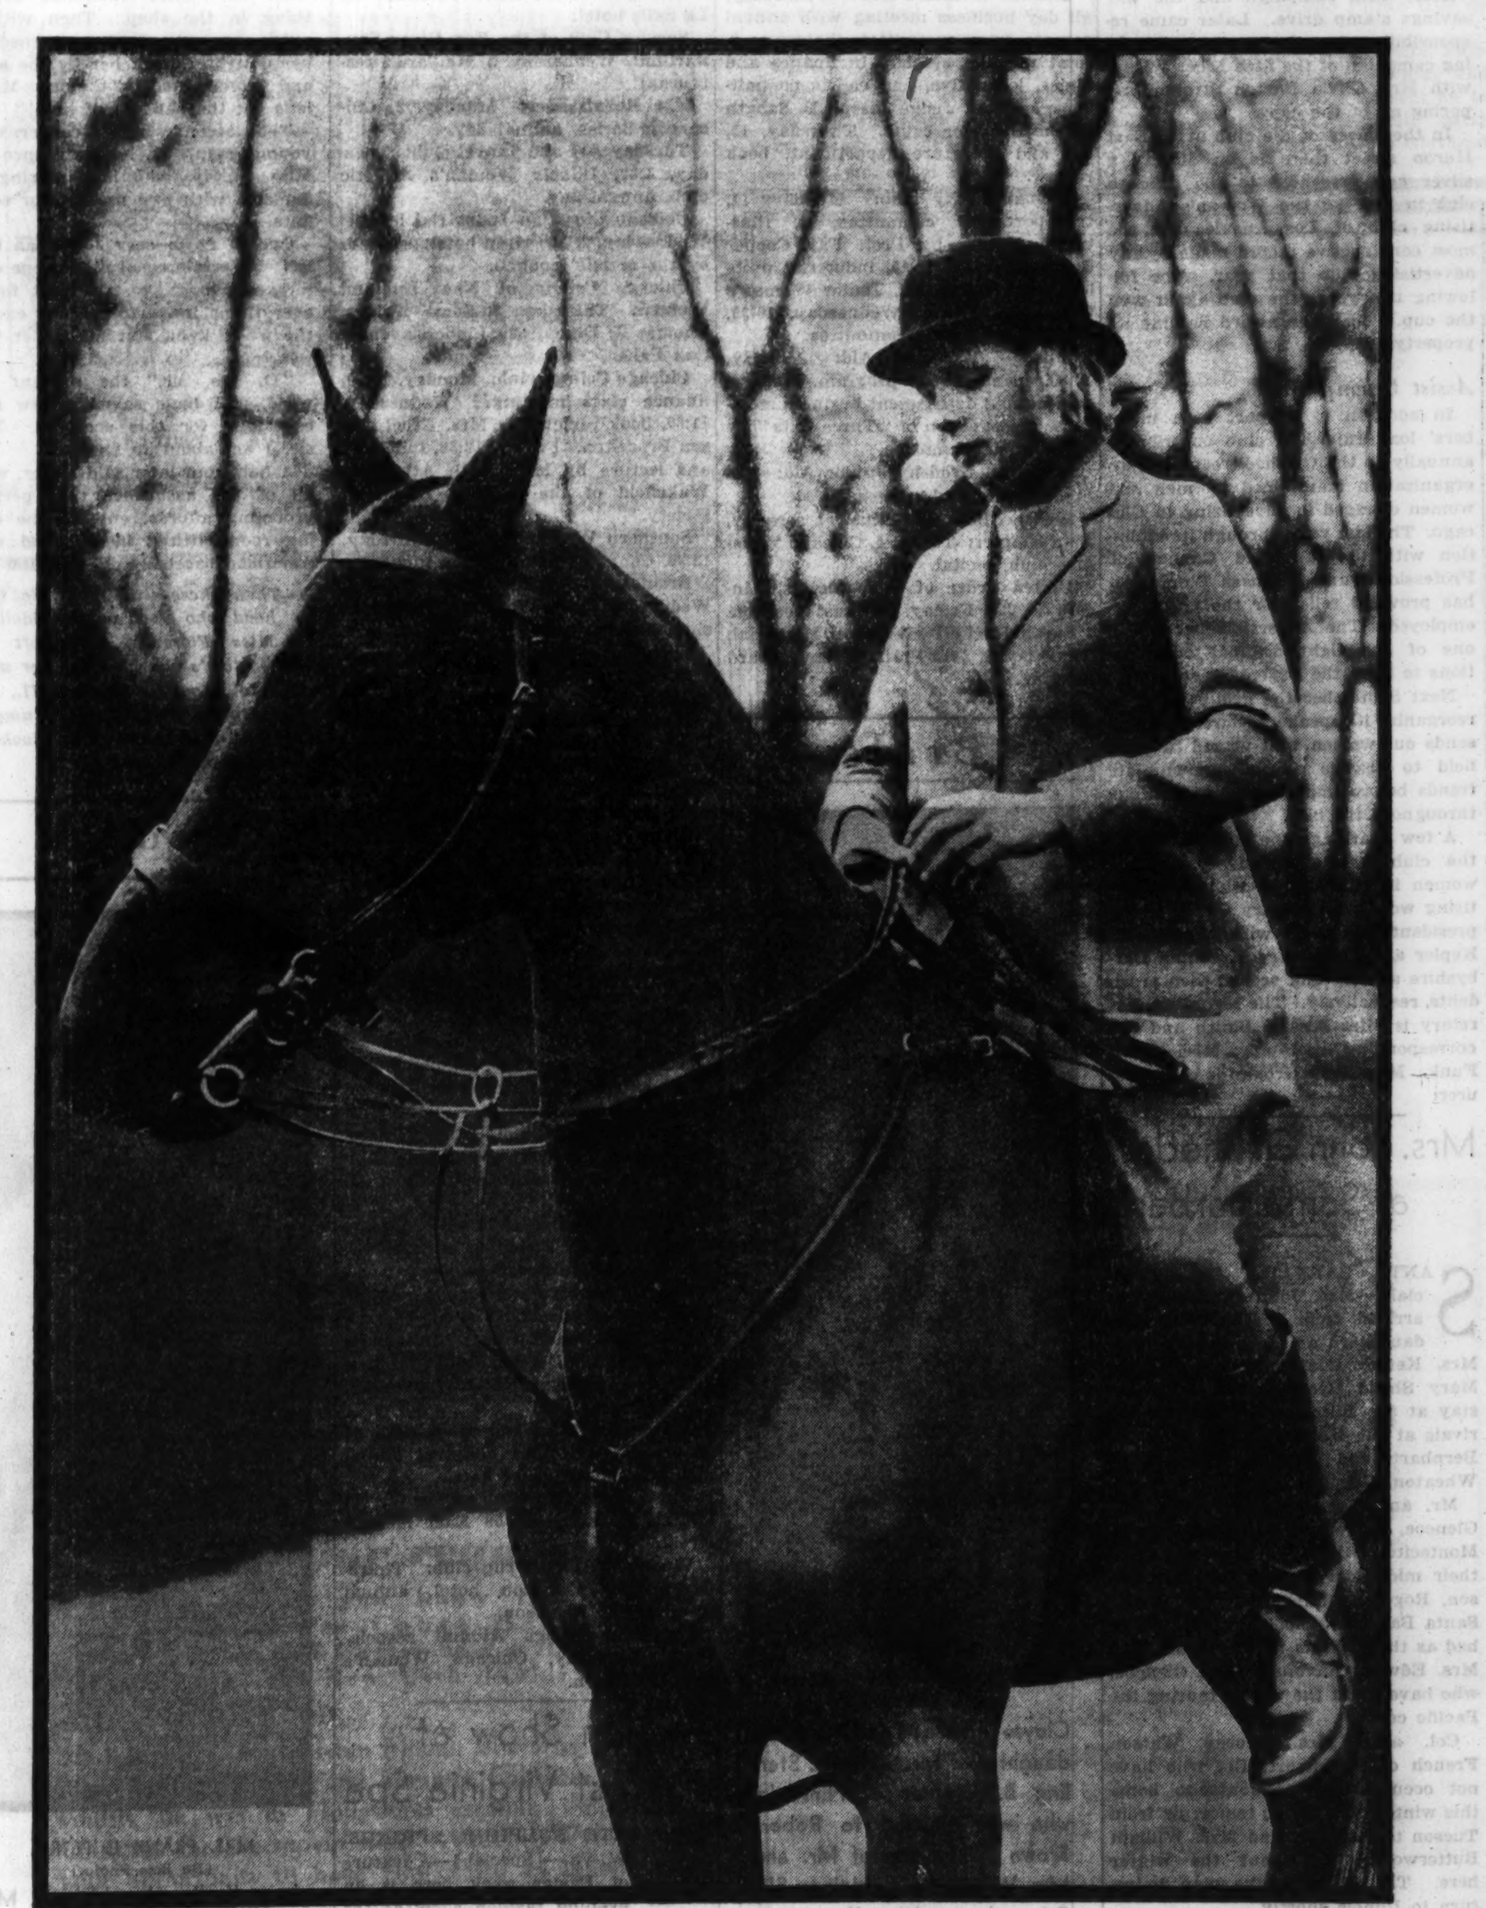
Sally Perry, the younger daughter of the I. Newton Perrys, took the blue ribbon for getting an egg on a spoon safely from one end of the arena to the other at the gymkhana. Sally was maid of honor at the wedding of her sister, Polly, to Harold M. Kneedler last October.



The Wayne Chatfield-Taylors' Adelaide is one of Lake Forest's best younger equestriennes and she sits her horse and handles it like a rider many years older than she. She was the winner in the game of musical chairs at the recent gymkhana.

Polish Envoy to Make First Visit to City

Stanislas Patek's Arrival in May Will Be Occasion for Entertaining.

By COUSIN EVE

TIMES are dullish, but after all it is Lent. And greater events than ever lie ahead. Twice last week one tore about in A Century of Progress and looked at the bare spots on which will rise the Italian building, the Polish, Paris Incorporated, and the Normandy village. Colors are being applied to gray walls and thousands of people are there daily.

The most important foreign event of May is that his excellency, Stanilas Patek, new Polish ambassador to Washington, is coming here on a first visit. A most courtly, brilliant vieux garcon, with upturned mustache, he is a seasoned diplomat of long experience in Tokio and Moscow. A man of great wealth, his Warsaw palace is in the ancient Stare Miasto, a medieval square, where every house is of polychrome or mixture of many vivid colors. His excellency has great collections of ivories, of jewels, of Polish historical relics. The entertainments for him will be notable.

Meeting of Red Cross.

Winter Visitors to Phoenix Prepare to Return Home

PHOENIX, Ariz.—(Special.)—With the exception of the tea given Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Louise de Koven Phelps for Miss Jane Addams, it looks as if the majority of winter visitors in Phoenix were either packing up to return to their homes or taking advantage of the moonlight nights to picnic on the desert. And never was a place so fascinatingly dangerous or full of enchantment as these spring nights on the desert, with a new moon and the warm night air heavy with the scent of orange blossoms.

One night recently the San Marcos guests joined together for a farewell picnic for Judge and Mrs. Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who left Saturday for Chicago, and for former Gov. and Mrs. Frank O. Lowden. On the same night the Charles Pearces gave a picnic supper in the South mountains for their numerous Phoenician friends. Everything was perfect, from the roast turkey to the singing of "Sweet Adeline."

Motor to Roosevelt Dam.

Last Sunday the Pearces motored over the famous Apache trail to Roosevelt dam and back through the Casa Grande ruins.

Monday night Mrs. L. B. Manning invited about twenty-five young people for a picnic supper in Echo Canyon.

SAUCE for the GOOSE

By D—— D——.

THE minister who married the w. k. stock and grain speculator Jesse Livermore and his third bride recently in Geneva believes more than ever in the efficacy of prayer, for the amount of the fee the bridegroom gave him was exactly the amount needed to meet payment on a life insurance premium due that day. The minister and his wife had not known how they were going to meet the payment and for days their prayers had asked for help in this emergency.

- No matter what the emergency or what the question, the young moderns today are saying, " Throw him a fish " and " It's mighty nice if you can get at it."

- Is Texas Guinan " going social in a big way " these days? At the musical at the Francis Neilsons' recently she was very late. In fact, some of the guests were leaving, Mme. Dux having finished her program, but when they saw the golden haired Guinan appearing, back they went into the house. At the Pons concert last Monday night there was La Guinan in a box with three escorts—count 'em, three—and maybe you think all the opera glasses in the house weren't leveled on her more than on the social celebrities in the golden horseshoe.

- Mrs. John Bruner, in town recently for a few days on her way from her home in San Francisco to New York, told this amazing tale and vouched for its authenticity: A San Francisco matron purchased two silver birds in a Roman store, paid for them, and had them shipped to California. They hadn't arrived by the time she reached home and three months later, when they still hadn't come, she decided to do something about it. At a dinner party she mentioned it and one of the guests facetiously suggested that she write Mussolini. She did. Five weeks later she received a letter from the Italian dictator's office apologizing for the delay and

Benefit Planned by Advertising Club of Chicago

Amount Derived Will Be Used to Increase Loan Fund for Members.

By Ruth DeYoung.

THAT live wire organization, the Woman's Advertising club of Chicago, is to celebrate Easter next Saturday with its annual afternoon card party in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel. Miss Ruth Proctor, social chairman of the club, will be the hostess.

MISS RUTH PROCTOR.

The party is a benefit for the members' loan fund which provides for women who have been left financially destitute as the result of this economic upheaval. This is only one of the several philanthropic interests, however, of this sixteen year old club.

It was on Nov. 22, 1917, that a group of twenty-five women met at the Chicago College club, then housed in the Stevens building, and determined to form an organization for the purpose of discussing and studying advertising in all of its phases, also to promote women's interest in this field. Since then its rapid advance has been commensurate with the staccato pace of these last sixteen years. And to prove that the members are domestically as well as professionally capable a birthday cake is made by one of the members every year and cut in a ceremony sacred to the group.

* *

Active During World War.

The first important contribution made by the club was during the world war. With Helen Carter Johnson at the helm and Mrs. Irene Simms, the founder, as one of the active members, the group handled successfully the advertising for the American fund for French wounded during the early part of the war. Then, as the struggle wore on, these women volunteered their services in promoting the woman's department of the Victory loan campaign and the war savings stamp drive. Later came responsibility for the entire advertising campaign of the fifth Liberty loan, with Mrs. Olivia Barton Strohm preparing all of the copy.

In the offices of the club at 15 East Huron street there is on display a silver cup presented to the Chicago club in 1918 by the Woman's Advertising club of Los Angeles for the most constructive record made by any advertising club that year. The following two years the club again won the cup. Then the award became its property.

Assist Unemployed.

In addition to support of a members' loan fund the club contributes annually to the Off-the-Street club, an organization maintained by men and women engaged in advertising in Chicago. The last year, through its affiliation with the Federated Council of Professional and Business Women, it has provided relief for the city's unemployed. The Advertising club was one of the eight original organizations to form the Federated council.

Next September the group plans to reorganize its speakers' bureau, which sends out women well versed in their field to discuss advertising and its trends before important organizations througnout the city.

A few years ago the membership of the club was extended to include women in publicity as well as advertising work. Miss Mary Coffey is the president this year, with Miss Anita Kepler and Mrs. Mary Hutchins Derbyshire as first and second vice presidents, respectively. The recording secretary is Miss Elsa J. Smith and the corresponding secretary Miss Clara Funk. Miss Sadie Grogan is the treasurer.

Mrs. John G. Shedd at Santa Barbara

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Clarke of Glencoe, Ill., who spent the winter in Montecito, will leave next week for their midwestern home, leaving their son, Roger, to finish the term in the Santa Barbara School for Boys. They had as their guests this week Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ravenscroft of Glencoe, who have spent the winter touring the Pacific coast.

Col. and Mrs. George Watson French of Davenport, Ill., who have not occupied their Montecito home this winter, will arrive tomorrow from Tucson to visit Mr. and Mrs. William Butterworth, who spent the winter here. The Butterworths plan to return to Illinois shortly.

stating that the birds had been shipped that day and would she please notify the government when she received them, for the shop had been closed and would remain so until the birds were in her custody.

● From New York comes a note from a young matron, a former Chicago girl, who used to write on expensive crested note paper and now uses a cheaper kind with her name and address printed instead of engraved. "For my new business," she explained, "is writing to my creditors because I have had so many letters from them saying they want to hear from me."

● "Hilda, we're getting you a new mattress, so put the old one with the pile for the Salvation Army," explained an Evanston housewife to her Swedish kitchen maid. "Ya, but not until I get my moneys out," answered Hilda. Evanston housewife explains at length that the neighborhood bank is perfectly safe, much safer than the mattress, in fact, and that Hilda must go with her that very day and deposit her savings in the bank. Hilda did and several months later, when the bank failed, Mrs. Housewife felt a great sense of responsibility and offered to repay Hilda's $700—in installments. Imagine her relief when Hilda said, "I put moneys in bank, but take them out next day and sew them in new mattress."

● Have you had one of Vincent Bendix's nightcaps after a jolly party? It's a dose of milk of magnesia and two aspirin tablets. Guaranteed to kill that "morning after" feeling.

● The latest in boutonnieres, if you haven't noticed, is three carnations (white ones) tightly bunched. Mrs. Nathaniel A. Owings is an enthusiastic exponent of the new fashion.

● Miss Helen Gurley, back only a few weeks from Palm Beach, where she ran the southern sale of the Woman's exchange, is telling two stories that produce a laugh wherever repeated. The first is a commentary on some of the visitors to the fashionable winter resort.

Eying carefully every one who came to the sale, she observed a dowager with her daughter, both wearing the latest in southern apparel, as well as many jewels. She picked them out as good prospects. Fifteen minutes, then a half hour, wore on. They examined everything in the shop. Then with a quick move the dowager turned on her daughter, took her by the arm, and commented: "C'mon, Mary, let's get the hell out of here!"

The second story concerns a young man, an acquaintance of Miss Gurley, who is wintering in Jamaica with two natives for servants.

One of them serves him as butler. Entertaining at dinner one evening not long ago, the host found everything in perfect order except the white linen suit his butler was wearing.

"O, yes, sir," the servant advised. "I have saved a new suit especially for this occasion. Yes, sir, I am about to change."

A half hour later said butler, with all of the assurance that perfect grooming affords, entered the dining room attired in a brand new American baseball suit, cap and all.

● Then there was the little towhead who stood on the sidelines as Miss Florence Carr left St. Chrysostom's church after her marriage to Edgar L. Marston II., her veil gathered about her. "Jumpin' Juniper," said the urchin, "look at all that swell gauze."

English Racing Season Opens to Accompaniment of Wind, Rain

Favorite Horses Are National Figures to Sports Loving British; One Meet Has Been Run Without a Break, Under Certain Rules, Since 1519.

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON.—[Special.]—The flat racing season has opened rather dismally with rain soaked courses and high winds, but every one is hoping for better weather. Certainly popular interest in racing has, apparently, never been keener than it is at present. It would be no exaggeration to say that Brown Jack is a national figure, causing huge amusement. He will be training shortly for the Queen Alexandra stakes at Ascot—the longest flat race run in this country—which he has won four years in succession! He is now nine years old, but he seems to have a bigger following than Mrs. MacDonald.

Lord Derby.

The two favorites for the Derby are Lord Woolavington's Manitoba and Lord Derby's Hyperion. By long odds the most determined owner this season is a young woman with American blood in her veins—Miss Dorothy Paget, the daughter of Lord Queenborough and his first wife, Pauline Whitney of New York. Miss Paget has one horse in the Derby, a colt by Spion Kop and Waffles, for which she paid 6,600 guineas in 1931 when he was a yearling. He was the highest priced yearling sold that year.

Unfortunately he has thus far proved a disappointment, for he ran five times last year without finishing in the first three. But Miss Paget has a long purse and definite ideas, and is being watched with great interest.

* *

Most Grueling Race.

Speaking of races makes me wonder whether you will see in the films pictures of the "oldest, longest, and most grueling race in the annals of the British turf." I refer to that picturesque event, the Kiplongcote stakes, which was run recently over its historic course on the East Yorkshire wolds.

This thoroughly English race is never advertised, but it has been run without a break since 1519, and over the present four mile course since 1664. Many sportsmen travel miles to see it.

Starting in the lordship of South Dalton, near the Kiplongcote station on the York-Hull railroad line, the four mile course covers the old Roman road which runs along the western edge of the wolds, through two parishes and up to a high beacon point in the parish of Middleton-on-the-Wolds. There in the hedgerows along a country lane stands the weather beaten winning post.

* *

Run Under Early Rules.

The simple historic conditions are observed—"for a horse race to be observed and ridden yearly on the third Thursday in March, open to horses of all ages, to carry horsemen, weight 10 stones [140 pounds] exclusive of saddle and bridle, to enter at ye post at 11 o'clock on ye morning of ye race. The race to be run before two."

The veteran clerk of the course informs each rider that "any rider who layeth hold of any other rider or striketh any one of them shall have no prize." Then they are off, a motley crowd, but well cheered.

* *

Private Party at Buckingham.

The king and queen gave a small dinner party recently at Buckingham palace to forty guests, leading figures in the political and social life of the country. As the court circular does not contain the names of the forty guests, the dinner was officially private, and thus all the more flattering to those fortunate ones who had been "commanded."

The dinner took place in the white and gold state dining room on the first floor of the palace. Please notice that the king and queen sat facing each other in the center of the long table, with the guests ranged around both ends, which strikes me as an admirable arrangement!

The Spanish embassy party was an immense success, partly on account of the presence of the prince of Wales, who obviously enjoyed himself, and partly because of the dancing of Teresina, a young Catalonian dancer who in less than a year has made herself famous in Madrid. A medium sized, long waisted lady, with dark hair curling over one eye and marvelous hands which made the castanets subtly expressive, she is now the vanished rage of London. She came over for the one night, but has left everybody talking about her. She danced the segudillas, the tango Andaluz, the farruca, and the jota Arragonesa as London has never seen them danced. The feeling here is that she must be brought back.

The Prince of Wales obviously enjoyed himself.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE SOCIAL SET

Harvey I. Gibson will speak. War-time manager of the National Red Cross, he is now chairman of the New York Emergency Relief. Two parallel jobs. One sees bands of Red Cross nurses, canteeners, captains, and all the good old veterans of Chicago Red Cross from 1914 to 1918 at these lunches.

Mrs. Garfield King and Mrs. Morse Ely have reorganized the Red Cross workrooms which are now at 616 South Michigan avenue. The government wished a million and a half more yards of cotton material upon them recently, and there is most urgent need for volunteer workers to cut and sew. One item alone, 40,000 cotton suits for little boys, must be kept in the reserves.

Dinner at International House.

Another matter, and it sounds excellent. The officers of the Renaissance society, University of Chicago, are dining in honor of Dr. Melville J. Herskovits at International house Monday, April 17, at 7 o'clock. One accepted that invitation and wrote it down in the little book two months ago.

Ritual and art in west African life will be shown in motion pictures and, what seems if anything more intimate, ancestral dancing by "Mr." Kwesi Kuntu and his Ashanti friends. Mr. Kuntu is a descendant of an Ashanti king.

The Renaissance society is preparing for great activity during A Century of Progress. A gorgeous Holbein of Catharine Howard has already arrived at the Art institute, loaned us for the fair by the Toledo museum.

* *

A Marvelous Collection.

Tuesday after the symphony concert people stepped over to the oriental galleries of the Art institute. Quite a walk from the entrance and downstairs one's promenade led by the former magnificent loans of Edith Rockefeller McCormick, the ancient Emperor carpet, now missing from its place, and the gorgeous Napoleon Bonaparte Borghese gold service missing, too. I had heard that all Mrs. McCormick's treasures had been withdrawn as a part of her estate and would return no more.

The several rooms of the Oriental gallery were hung with rugs. At one end a small gayly dressed woman in orchid and vivid blue was lecturing about them in a tired voice. It seems she had been desperately ill and left a hospital to fulfill this engagement. The rugs were hers and part of a famous collection inherited from her father, James F. Ballard of St. Louis.

Mrs. Ballard White is continuing to collect rugs and to exhibit them. In his will Mr. Ballard left a collection of glorious rugs to the Metropolitan museum, New York, which he had shown from time to time at the Art institute. To describe these rugs minutely would take a lifetime—enough to say they glowed with jewel-like colors undimmed by time, were of manifold shapes, sizes, and symbols, and represented years of effort and study as a collection.

Mrs. White said that her father traveled half a million miles on his rug quests and suffered all kinds of dangers and privation to achieve these historical weaves. Those shown were mostly Persians from the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries, Ghiordis rugs, Ladiks, and Koula prayer rugs.

Every One Stayed to Tea.

It was astonishing to see the number and variety of people at this talk. Charles F. Kelley, curator of the oriental department, asked every one to stay for tea. In the far room two small tea tables set with oriental simplicity. At one, Mrs. Potter Palmer; Mrs. Alfred Hamill at the other. Mrs. Walter Wolf, in charge of the day, had set huge bunches of early forsythia in old Ming vases as a tribute to the spring, but otherwise the eye rested on the most ancient and subtle of Chinese antiquities. Screens at the door of indescribable beauty—simple, ineffable. Three strange Buddhas in a row, one with his head in his hand: O, such a headache! His companion with outstretched palm—"Brother, can you spare a dime?" They were saying it in China 2,000 years ago.

Among the many were Mrs. Charles W. Dempster, Mrs. J. M. Patterson, Mrs. Richard Crane, Mrs. Allen Clement, Mrs. Arthur Cutten, Mrs. Robert Hall, Miss Anne Rogers, Miss Sara Walker, Mrs. George Halleck Taylor, Mrs. Martin Schwab, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. John H. Winterbotham, Mrs. Frank Mulford, Mrs. Edward Carry, Mrs. George Langhorne, Mrs. Albert Evans, Mrs. W. O. Goodspeed, Mrs. Philo Otis, and Mrs. Otho Ball.

News of the Germans.

Much excitement on Saturday over Albrecht Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, who spoke at the Foreign Relations luncheon. The grand ballroom was crowded to hear him. But that was difficult; he was so gentle. However, his charming personality went way over. Tall and rather romantic looking, I seemed to hear the strains of the great wedding march as he spoke, tum ti ti ti, tum ti ti ta. His grandfather wrote it. In fact, Dr. Otto Schmidt, chairman for the day because of Graham Aldis' giro to Winter Park, referred to the aura of culture surrounding the visitor, his background of several centuries of culture. Since hearing Dr. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy talk many people have said they got nothing from him, were disappointed in his address.

Certainly the astute German political scientist was on the defensive. Questions were showered upon him after his speech, which was mostly exhortations to watch and wait and believe in Germany. One lady asked him how much if any Jewish blood he had. Dr. Mendelssohn replied that one-quarter of him was Jewish, another quarter French, and the rest Austrian and German. He remarked that he and his family were Lutheran as to religion and that on the whole Germany was Lutheran and not Catholic.

Seated at the luncheon table with him were Dr. and Mrs. Hugo Simon, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lichtenstein, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Blair, Mrs. Graham Aldis, and Ira Nelson Morris. In the audience were Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Fuller, Mrs. Bruce Borland, Mrs. Arthur Bevan, Mrs. Ernst Freund, Samuel Harper, and many from the universities.

Rents Home for Fair.

Mrs. Wilhelm Ludwig Baum gave a dinner for Dr. Mendelssohn Saturday night, which was not only a farewell to this delightful, charming man but a farewell in a sense to the grand old Winston house at 1508 North State parkway. Built by Frederick H. Winston, head of the eminent law firm, and lived in ever since by members of his family, it has a handsome red sandstone façade draped in vines and many lace-hung windows. A cheerful interior, too; an immensely long living room library, and on a higher level a dining room, and finally a large ballroom—scene of many fashionable balls and large dinners.

This has been leased for the period of the World's Fair by the Imperial Japanese commission, the head of which is a princely personage. It was the only house in town which suited the ideals of the Japanese visitors.

So, on April 15, Mrs. Baum moves out of her family domicile and into the Fortnightly club. From there in June she goes to her Michigan farm, a lovely old place on Lake Michigan, of large acreage. (Nobody has an estate any more: it has to be a farm for grand chic.)

At this last formal wind-up in the great house of Winston, this dinner for Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, were Prof. and Mrs. William Nitze, Mrs. Ernest Freund, Dr. and Mrs. Hugo Simon, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lichtenstein, Maurice Sachs, and Dr. Sollett of Northwestern—I think that was the roster. Later the guest of honor played his granddaddy's wedding march and other compositions of his.

* *

A Charming Luncheon.

The Mendelssohn Wedding March was also the music by which guests walked out to lunch at Mrs. Freund's party for the departing political scientist on Monday. Rudolph Reuter played it a la moderne with dissonances, which was excruciating. Later, also, he played from memory a Mendelssohn thing that was grand, very smashing, original.

This luncheon was unique; there were fourteen men, to be accurate, and about half as many women. On the reverse of every man's place-card was the name of the man with whom he was to change seats after the entrée. Thus, each lady got two new deals, keeping everybody busy.

Thornton Wilder appeared for the first time since his year's vacation on Broadway and in Mexico. He seems to have an unwritten book and possibly a play or two behind his gray eyes. He said apropos of "Lucrece" that both he and Katharine Cornell felt it was better to have done that play and lost than not to have done it at all—which, after all, is true contentment—to do things whether one wins or loses.

Tornton Veelder is what Germans call Mr. Wilder and they are mad about our author and translate him and devour his books. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Hutchins were also lunching, and others of university and social circles.

Concert of Modern Music.

On Sunday afternoon the Contemporary Music society had its annual meet. What I got out of it was Rudolph Ganz leading before a very nice audience of highbrows at the Blackstone theater.

Rudolph Reuter played, also Grace Nelson, and Mary Ann Brown sopranoed. Otherwise it was men from the Chicago Symphony giving Honegger, Sanjuan, Copland, Goosens. Also Hindemith, "writer of abstract music and outstanding man in linear counterpoint."

I have really nothing against modernistic music except that it leaves me very sad. Everybody who plays or sings modern music looks anguished, tortured. And I am sorry for everybody from the composer down, including myself, who has to listen to it, and Arthur Bissell, who feels it his duty to produce it at a fashionable spring concert.

The whole Bissell family was there in a box and I met Anita Blair, the Edwin Ryersons, Mrs. Callahan, Mrs. Wahl Pierce, Lady Hastings, John Palmer, and Dr. Stock, who skipped merrily away when I did.

Giving this concert were Mr. and Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Rudolph Ganz, Charles H. Hamill, Augustus Peabody, Wesley La Violette, Mrs. Charles H. Swift. Honorary chairman, Dr. Frederick Stock.

I remember somebody telling me that night at the Arts club that after hearing the entire concert of contemporary music he or she went home and drank deeply of strong drinks of illegal alcoholic content: that such unlawful beverages were passed on to others equally prostrated, etc., and that the modern music alone was responsible for such breakage of the law.

A Party for Miss Hoffman.

But others went along to a lovely high-up apartment in North State parkway wherein Mr. and Mrs. Garfield King were to be found dispensing hospitality in honor of Malvina Hoffman. We went straight in to the white paneled dining room where was all the excitement and Mrs. Charles Dempster and Mrs. George Langhorne doing the honors at a beautiful table. Lovely as this setting was and handsome as was the hostess in a frock of palest reseda crêpe, every one kept straying to the windows to look out over the lake in the late afternoon, a study in grays and blacks with a violet haze.

Miss Hoffman, an exquisite, serene person, was the center of admiring groups. She calls Chicago her new home, loves our town, and enchants all her new acquaintances with subtle flatteries. Among the callers were Mrs. William Chalmers, Mrs. J. M. Patterson, Mrs. Richard T. Crane, Lady Hastings, George Langhorne, Mrs. William Bush, Mr. and Mrs. Field, William B. McCluer.

It was not such a very large supper party at the Arts club before the Nathan Milstein concert. Tables were set out and brave men brought provender for their women from the buffet. The Polish consul had a party, his guests including Mrs. Helen Walker Sczukalska and the new vice consul, Mr. Kuhlikowski. Mrs. Baur had a large party for Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, and Ruth Page Fisher and Thomas Fisher, her husband, had a long table for a dozen or so of young Fairbanks, Paepckes, Fields.

* *

Many Supper Parties.

Mrs. Gustavus Swift was there with a group of tall young Swifts and Mrs. James Ward Thorne, lovely in high black velvet, jewelless, had the Morris Johnstons, Mrs. E. W. Cramer. The Raymond Redheffers brought Mrs. Baum, Robert Hall McCormick. Mr. and Mrs. Barney Goodspeed, coming in late, had a big party, including the Robert M. Hutchins, James H. Mitchells, Rostislavs, Lily Pons (who went home early), Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan Spalding, George Veovodsky, Leeds Mitchell, Thornton Wilder, and others.

This group went home later with the Goodspeeds and supped with young Milstein till 4 in the morning. One of the gallants who danced long and vociferously said that the Russian violinist did a wonderful stunt of parody in which he took off with perfect mimicry every great violinist of our day.

But returning to our mutton, which was Milstein's recital before the Arts club: While it was an expensive and exceedingly costly entertainment for the times in which we are navigating, it was worth it. Greater violin playing has never been heard in this country.

* *

A Wizard in Music.

Karleton Hackett introduced the artist, saying that he was almost the greatest worker in the field of music, an inveterate worker. In came the stocky, round faced youth modestly to perform his miracles of sound. Without flourish and pretension he did technical wizardry that left us speechless.

Milstein subordinates his own personality to his art. All the wilder is the acclaim. The narrow gallery of the Arts club was submerged with the floods of gorgeous melodic sounds, with vivid arch fragments where the violin seemed to laugh with its extraordinary master.

Many of the young trooped in late from somewhere. Milstein was their man. The next party at the Arts club is on April 23, an evening of plays staged by Helen Walton. That will be, probably, a capacity house, a gay, sardinelike evening. But they do these things well at this club.

A farewell word to Lily Pons and her brilliant concert at the Auditorium on Monday night. A very fine audience assembled to hear this evening of coloratura, diversified by a flute.

Against a background of gray in dashed the vivid French diva, idol of New York. In stiffened white muslin, trailing, flounced, and epauletted, her handkerchief a yard square, ever en main, her diamonds winking, her emeralds blinking, she was animated, gay. Her black eyes sparkled, her short black coiffure bobbed, and one saw such an array of handsome blue-white teeth as to remind one of the old song "Teeth for Two." Everybody was there.

Charity Is Benefited.

The women of Northwestern Medical school had taken the event with Miss Denton's management for their charity, the Montgomery Ward Medical clinic, and nobody present had in our time ever heard so many high E's and one that seemed to be an F.

That same day at noon Japan's foreign policy was discussed by Matsuoka, en route to Tokio, having walked out on the league of nations at Geneva. A large luncheon of the Foreign Relations with Quincy Wright presiding, there were again many of the young, avid for information on Asia. Mr. Matsuoka, amiable and smiling, was jauntiness and charm itself, knowing full well that more flies are caught by honey than with acetic acid.

His one reproach was that we as a nation are inclined to be dotty about the Chinese for no particularly good reason. He stressed the importance of doing something about China, where in the case of one merchant doing business half a dozen men have to be bodyguards to protect him from racketeer bandits. Very much as it is in Chicago, where the same thing goes on daily.

Other cards are arriving for other Foreign Relation luncheons! My word, but we shall be erudite!

Wherein a Washingtonian Has Her Most Embarrassing Moment

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 8.—(Special.)—The roster of Roosevelt anecdotes grows daily.

The other Sunday afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt decided she'd like to see the year old youngster of a friend of hers. Did she get Tommy [Mrs. Scheider to you], her secretary, to call the child's mother and summon them both to the White House? She did not. She herself took up the phone, got the mother, and asked if she might drive out and see the baby.

Along about the time for the call a friend dropped in to see the baby's parents. Mother did not want to say, "I've got to dress up baby, for Mrs. Roosevelt's coming." That sounded too important and self-conscious. So quietly she slipped away with the child, dressed her all up in her best dress, and returned to the living room.

The bell rang. She went to the window, saw the White House car, turned to her visitor and remarked: "It's Mrs. Roosevelt."

"O, yeah?" shouted the guest, who was determined not to be taken in. "Is the prince of Wales with her?"

Just as this wisecrack was being emitted, in walked a tall lady in Eleanor blue. The guest turned pink; tried to climb into the fireplace.

● And there's this echo from that children's party given for 6 year old Sistie Dall, the President's grandchild.

One of the young guests was accompanied by a most correct nurse, who handed over her cloak to the usher but kept on her hat. In the east room she sat down with several other nursemaids, all hatless.

"Why don't you take off your hat?" they queried.

"Because," very regally, "one never removes her hat in front of royalty."

And what a scramble there was for the cloakroom! Everybody was hatted, they tell me, by the time Mrs. Roosevelt appeared. She never knew why.

● Remember Harry Lauder's famous "Breakfast in Bed on Sunday Morning"? It's a picture of "Cactus Jack" Garner on Sunday mornings these days. Mrs. Garner's to blame—if you have to blame any one for making you stay in bed, and read the papers, and smoke, and be generally lazy. She makes him stay in bed until noon; tries to insist that he loaf the rest of the day.

● Speaking of Vice Presidents, I dropped into a teashop for lunch today and saw Charlie Curtis eating steak and fried potatoes.

He seemed to be enjoying himself in a mild sort of way. Not so many months ago when I interviewed him on "Eating Habits of a Vice President" he grinned and said he ate what his hostess set before him, but that he was mighty homesick for some Kansas chicken and corn.

● You can violate the rules of precedence with a pencil, it seems.

The wife of a cabinet officer was asked for an interview the other day. Now she's an awfully nice woman, sensible, real. But she said she couldn't grant an interview until the reporter had first interviewed Mrs. Hull, who, as wife of the secretary of state, ranks the group.

That seems to be carrying things pretty far. Suppose the men did that. If you wanted to ask Secretary of Commerce Roper how many new goldfish he'd bought for the aquarium in the Commerce building basement you'd have to quiz Secretary Hull on foreign relations, chat with Secretary Woodin about money, have a visit with Secretary Swanson on board a battleship, and so on. You'd never make the newspaper deadline.

● A few weeks ago Ruth Bryan Owen said she could never afford to go as minister to Denmark; it would cost too much money. Then came talk of an undersecretaryship for her in the state department. And now comes the revived story of the Danish appointment. Washington wonders what caused Mrs. Owen to change her mind.

One version which grapevined its way from the state department is that when she was first considered for the post she went to state department officials and asked them to make her an estimate of the costs. They did. She shook her head; said it was impossible.

Then came the talk of the job here in Washington, in the department. Now the boys over there are ever so gallant to ladies in a drawing room, but they're not so crazy about having a woman on the job here.

So the story goes that these gentlemen got out their pencils, looked over the original expenditure list, were "perfectly amazed" to discover that they had placed the first figures much too high. They'd make a mistake. The new estimates, it is said, were far more pleasing to Mrs. Owen.

The state department, it would seem clear, did not want a woman representing them in a high place, but if it had to be they'd rather have the woman in Denmark than as a ranking officer here.

● Wonder what Mrs. Josephus Daniels will do for diplomacy down in Mexico, whither her husband goes as ambassador.

When her spouse was secretary of the navy in the Wilson administration it was part of her duty to entertain the boys from the Naval academy at Annapolis. These boys love dress parade and they always look forward to a deal of ceremony and gold braid at these parties.

The day before the reception Mrs. Daniels sent word to the academy: "You boys just come in any old uniform you please. It's not a party at all—just as informal as possible."

Washington wonders what caused her to change her mind.

Chicagoans at Mi-Careme Tea in Paris

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Opinions seem to differ as to the zest with which mid-Lent is still observed in Paris. We ourselves rather got the impression that, as far as the afternoon gayety was concerned, except for a few children, some midinettes, students in the Latin quarter, the public took little part in throwing confetti and streamers, or putting on fancy costumes, and in general contributing to the fun, which had until within quite recent years much of the carnival spirit. There was said to have been quite an outburst of gayety in the evening, but this had little reflection in the more patrician haunts.

If there was no throwing of confetti, or dancing of sarabands, conversation did not flag at the bright Mi-Carême tea which Mrs. Livingston Fairbank gave at her new apartment in the Rue de Grenelle. It so happened that most of the guests, like the hostess, hailed from Chicago.

* *

In Honor of Lady Burney.

As Lady Burney, the former Gladys High of Chicago, was to be in Paris over the mid-Lent holiday, Mrs. Fairbank brought together a number of Chicagoans, among them Mrs. Herman Gade, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Raffalovich, Mrs. Rogers, and Comte Louis de Danne and his wife, formerly Elizabeth Stone of Chicago.

It will be remembered that Lady Burney's husband, Sir Dennistoun Burney, is known for his inventions and especially for his pioneer work in creating dirigibles in Britain, in one of which he crossed the Atlantic a few years ago. Lady Burney herself is an ardent flyer; and when it was noticed that she was late for the party some of her friends remarked that she would probably tell on coming in of having just arrived from across the Mediterranean. While in Paris she is the house guest of Mrs. Melville Hall.

Jean Dupuy Present.

One of Mrs. Fairbank's guests, who has recently been in Chicago, was M. Jean Dupuy, son of Mme. Paul Dupuy, the former Helen Browne of Chicago, who took over, after the death of her husband, Sénateur Paul Dupuy, the direction of some of his extensive newspaper interests. She directs the Excelsior and gives much attention to the Petit Parisien. She recently created a new magazine and, during her absence this winter in America, turned it over to her daughter, Gladys, the Princess de Polignac, who married about three years ago Prince Guy de Polignac.

Some of the guests from Mrs. Fairbank's tea, including M. Dupuy and Mr. and Mrs. Raffalovich, went on to another Mi-Carême cocktail party given by Conte and Contessa Giovanni Cardelli.

Palm Sunday Parade Better than Easter's

Gotham Notables Flee Town Next Week, but Are Out in Force Today.

their shutters, and the breakfast lunch at the Ritz at about 1 in the afternoon was the gathering of the clans.

In those days Palm Sunday was of little importance. One saw folk going to church, but the parade was nothing to consider. And then, some time in the '20s, the outlying districts of Gotham having heard all about the famous Easter parade, began to flock in numbers to 5th avenue on Easter Sunday.

Actresses in search of cameras to snap them, Mr. Zero and his friends in battered toppers and cutaways, a few communists, and the greater part seemingly of the Bronx and Brooklyn invaded the quiet precincts of the avenue and before long society was conspicuous by its absence and we scribblers took our camera men over to Park avenue to catch the few notables stretching their legs after the prandial sermon.

* *

Very Few Notables.

So for the last five or six years Easter Sunday finds the belles and beaux of Prospect avenue in the Bronx and of Ocean parkway in Brooklyn sauntering up and down 5th avenue in a crush that moves at the rate of a mile an hour, goggling at one another, and thrilling at the thought of rubbing elbows with society. And society, of course, has either leaped into its cars as soon as services were over and gone places or else has quietly been in residence at Gerenwich or on Long island for the week-end and listened to the local rector in some small Bethseda or St. John's.

But the avenue has not quite lost its parade. Instead of society sauntering on Easter Sunday it saunters on Palm Sunday, quite unmolested by the visiting hordes, for 5th avenue on Sundays is as quiet and unpopulated a street as one may find in town, with the exception of the deserted canyons of the financial district. There are always more motors on 5th avenue on Sundays than people—in actual numbers.

* *

Today's the Day.

Therefore today will find the fashionables taking their stroll in the warmth of spring unless, unhappily, it rains. But tradition has rain coming on Easter Sunday, not on Palm Sunday, which almost always is bright and sunny, and the week altogether has been springlike indeed.

Tons of people are in town. Of a certainty St. Thomas' will see the noted Morgan twins, Mrs. R. C. Vanderbilt and Viscountess Furness, in their modish semi-mourning: Mrs. Charles C. Auchincloss, Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry II., the ubiquitous Cobina Wright, Mrs. George De Forest Lord, Edward Berwind and his sister, Julia; the Frederic R. Couderts, Mrs. Duke Biddle, Mrs. James Duke and her heiress daughter, Doris; the still fetching Mrs. Allen Gouveneur Wellman, Mrs. Bradford Norman Jr., Mrs. Robert H. McAdoo, one of our best dressed women; Mrs. Frederick Frelinghuysen, Louise Iselin, Mrs. F. Bartholomay Jelke, and scores of others, while from St. Bart's on Park avenue will come the junior John D. Rockefellers and the myriad members of their clan.

Program of the Day.

Bright bits of palm will be visible on all sides. The notables will have their quiet stroll and go home to dine or to motor out to the suburbs, the Ritz and St. Regis, Pierre's, and the dear old Plaza will have their family parties, and Palm Sunday will pass as a day belonging to New York's smart set.

And next week on Easter Sunday the other boroughs will pour their curious, who will look for society and see only reflections of themselves, in all probability, more colorfully dressed than the members of society can afford to be these days.

Chicago Art Represented in Contemporary Group of Paintings for Century of Progress

Institute Will House a Large Exhibition of Canvases; Local Work to Be Among Them.

By Eleanor Jewett.

PROSPECTS seem bright for a fair representation of Chicago art in the contemporary group of paintings to be shown at the Art institute in the official Century of Progress Art exhibit. Director Robert B. Harshe assures us that Rifka Angel will be represented with a water color and that Ivan Le Lorraine Albright will be represented by "The Linesman."

Friends of Flora Schofield report that she has been requested to reserve a picture for the exhibit. One can scarcely doubt that Francis Chapin, Davenport Griffen, Jean Crawford Adams, Louis Ritman, William S. Schwartz, Theodore Johnson, Frances Foy, Gustaf Dalstrom, Emil Armin, David McCosh, Increase Robinson, Beatrice Levy, Laura Van Pappelendam, Constantin Pougralis, and other artists closely allied with them in the practice of paint will, in part or as a united group, be invited to exhibit.

Among those painters who profess a different type of art Director Harshe cannot be quoted except to the effect that he is on the track of one of four paintings by Pauline Palmer, which are in various private collections in Chicago.

* *

No Jurying of Pictures.

There will be no jurying of the Chicago or any other contingent of pictures. The canvases are selected and invited by the director of the museum and submitted for confirmation to the committee on painting and sculpture whose names are familiar to all of us.

A tentative list of conservative possibilities but one that carries no official significance includes Ralph Clarkson, dean of Chicago portrait painters; Adam Emory Albright, whose children's paintings have been loved for forty years; Pauline Palmer, Frederic M. Grant, John F. Stacey, Anna Lee Stacey, Rudolph F. Ingerle, Wellington J. Reynolds, Kath Plath, Oskar Gross, Edward T. Grigware, Frederick Tellander, Gerald Frank, Walter Krawiec, Charles Killgore, Othmar Hoffler, Joseph Allworthy, Charles Wiliamovsky, Paul Trebilcock, Claude Buck, Frank V. Dudley, John A. Spelman, Karl Buehr, Abram Poole, James Topping, and F. V. Peyraud.

This is as incomplete a list, probably more incomplete, than the list which precedes it in mention. Imperfect as they are, the two lists taken in conjunction testify to the virility of art in Chicago.

No Place for Etchings.

The Chicago Society of Etchers sounds a melancholy note in the following paragraph in an open letter to its members: "For 1933 it was hoped there could be an exhibition of our society in the Fair grounds. Owing to an agreement with the Art institute, the Century of Progress must confine all its exhibitions to the Art institute. The only building to which such an agreement would not apply would be the Illinois State building. Upon investigation we find no space is available in this building for our exhibition, as it is taken up entirely with historical exhibits. The exhibition of etchings in the Fair grounds is, therefore, impossible."

Coming back to the present, the Palette and Chisel club, 1012 North Dearborn street, has hung this week an interesting and important group of paintings. Because of the depression, taxes and mortgage the club is in dangerous straits. It needs a rallying of all available financial support so that it may not be submerged before better times stop peeking around the corner and stalk boldly out into the streets. It needs support now, today.

* *

Members Do Their Part.

Various members of the club are doing their part. The exhibit is witness to that. These members, among them James Topping, Oskar Gross, Frank V. Dudley, Othmar Hoffler, J. Jeffrey Grant, Arnold E. Turtle, Oscar Erickson, Leo Marzolo, Holger W. Jensen, John A. Spelman, Karl C. Brandner and Glen Sheffer, have given paintings valued at from $200 to $500 to be sold for the benefit of the club at $100. The paintings are characteristic in each case of the painter's ability. They are good examples of their finest work. This seems to be a case when women's clubs and the Public School Art society and private collectors of representative Chicago art might rally around to good effect.

One could not go far wrong in acquiring "Still Life with Peaches," by Leo Marzolo; "Covered Bridge," by James Topping; "Boats," by Othmar Hoffler; "Winter Woods," by Frank V. Dudley, or "New Mexico Landscape," by Jensen. The exhibition will remain open through the month and is well worth seeing.

News of Art and Artists.

The Allerton gallery, under the management of Miss Marjorie Hamilton, offers an attractive program for the next weeks. Yesterday a one-man show of recent paintings of Gregory Orloff opened, to continue through the month. Charles Turzak will follow the first two weeks in May with a showing of water colors and oils. His sparkling exhibit of water colors, held last spring in the same gallery, is still fresh in our minds.

Following Charles Turzak, Miss Hamilton has invited a Chicago painter who will prove an unknown quantity to most of us, though she has shown with distinction in the Pennsylvania academy, Miss Helen King. For next fall the attractive prospect is held out that Eleanor Duke and Dick Richard [Mr. and Mrs. Richard] will share the gallery.

Paul Trebilcock, A. N. A., Chicago portrait painter, has been invited by Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts at the Carnegie institute, Pittsburgh, to exhibit one of his paintings in the 31st International Exhibition of Paintings to be held from Oct. 19 to Dec. 10, 1933, at the Carnegie. Of the 350 paintings which will be exhibited only 125 will come from the United States and all of them on invitation.

Forty years ago this month the Art institute building was rapidly nearing completion. The World's Fair of 1893 had made a substantial contribution toward the erection of the present structure and for this reason the exposition was to take it over on May 1 and use it throughout the duration of the Fair. Two great halls were built for temporary use, one where Ryerson library now stands and the other where Fullerton hall is located. One of these was named the Hall of Columbus and the other the Hall of Washington. Each seated 5,000 visitors and were used by the World's Congress of Religions, bringing together Jew, Mohammedan, Brahmin, Confucian, Buddhist and Christian in one great conclave.

Today, forty years later, art, not religion, is the main theme of the same great building. A survey of the art of the ages is the tremendous program outlined by the Art institute. From Botticelli to Gauguin is a long step. The official exhibit will bridge it brilliantly, using for stepping stones the finest examples of the world's great masters that America's private collections and museums afford.

An exhibition of the work of the art pupils from Gads Hill Settlement is current in the Tudor gallery, Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street.

"Canoeists' Breakfast," by Auguste Renoir, from the Phillips Memorial gallery, Washington, D. C. This brilliant example of the luminist will be seen in the Art Institute Official Art exhibition next summer.

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, April 12, 1882.

DEAR JULIA: I was much interested in your account of the marriage at Grace church of D. Ogden Mills Jr. to Miss Ruth Livingston. I am sure Dr. Potter must have performed the ceremony in his best manner. He seemed so delightful when we met him at your dinner table last year in New York.

I am glad you wrote so fully of the bride's dress, for we must be deciding soon on Martha's wedding garment. Please remember me to Miss Emily Post. I was interested to know you had sat in the same pew with her at the wedding. It must have been a pretty sight to see the coachmen in the bridal party wearing boutonnieres of lily of the valley. I think we must adopt that little wrinkle at "our wedding."

Do you think "Nature" is Longfellow's finest sonnet? I saw it so reckoned in the literary column of a daily paper. It is lovely, I think.

As a fond mother, when the day is o'er,
Leads by the hand her little child to bed,
Half-willing, half-reluctant to be led,
And leaves his broken playthings on the floor,
Still gazing at them; through the open door,
Nor wholly reassured and comforted
By promises of others in their stead,
Which, though more splendid, may not please him more,
So nature deals with us, and takes away
Our playthings, one by one, and by the hand,
Leads us to rest so gently that we go
Scarce knowing if we wish to go or stay;
Being too full of sleep to understand
How far the unknown transcends the what we know.

I have been calling this afternoon on my sweet friend, Mrs. Daniel Schuyler, who lives on Indiana avenue near 18th street. While I was there her father, Dr. William H. Byford, came in and we had a good visit. He brought my little Martha into the world, and now she is herself to be married it is a comfort to me that he is still here to help her if the stork should visit her. But there! Perhaps you will think that remark indelicate. However, I believe people are beginning to speak a little more freely of the probability of the arrival of an infant in the homes of married people.

I don't know how many Chicagoans Dr. Byford has ushered into this vale of tears. Hundreds, I suppose, if not thousands. He has prospered financially, and I heard the other day his annual income is more than $25,000 from his practice. No one could begrudge him this, for his skill is so well worth paying for.

He has been for years a professor in Rush Medical college, and Sandy says all the students in his classes simply hang on his words. He helped to establish the woman's hospital, was a founder of the woman's medical college, and has given freely to these institutions, for he is an advocate of medical education for women.

Mrs. Daniel Schuyler, daughter of the beloved physician, Dr. William H. Byford, was awarded a beauty prize at the age of 17. She is a figure in "When Chicago Was Young."

His daughter, Mrs. Schuyler, is a handsome woman, wife of one of our successful lawyers. I remember that at seventeen she was selected by Commodore Nutt—Barnum's little star—as the most beautiful girl in Chicago. He presented her with a silver cake basket. At the same time he chose Silas B. Cobb as the homeliest man in the room, and gave him a silver goblet. It amused Mr. Cobb very much.

Well, time is flying and I must dress for dinner.

Lovingly,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

D. Ogden and Ruth (Livingston) Mills were parents of Ogden Livingston Mills, ex secretary of the treasury. Bishop Henry C. Potter was a grand-uncle of Mrs. Fowler McCormick.

Dr. William H. Byford, one of Chicago's most beloved physicians, was the father of Dr. Henry T. Byford of Chicago, and grandfather of Dr. William H. Byford of Blue Island. Other grandchildren of this pioneer doctor are: Daniel Schuyler Jr. of Chicago and the Baroness de Reutter of Paris, Heath T. Byford of Highland Park and Mrs. Charles S. Roberts of Western Springs. His daughter, Mrs. Daniel Schuyler, adjudged at 17 the most beautiful girl in Chicago, lives at 1400 Lake Shore drive, still lovely in the sunset years of life.

Prof. James Taft Hatfield of Northwestern university writes us that Longfellow was not the author of "Mr. Finney and His Turnip." We were about to write a scathing rebuke to the professor who undermines faith in a cherished belief, but knowing that Prof. Hatfield has written a book called "New Light on Longfellow," to be published in the autumn, we decided to look into the matter further. We find, to our mortification, that Samuel Longfellow, brother of the poet, long ago exploded the myth of "Mr. Finney." So we apologize in our most handsome manner and trust we shall be forgiven. Our mistake got us a dinner invitation to the Hatfields and a sight of their good looking young people anyway.

But Longfellow did write a nonsense verse we all know. Guess what it is. Or do you know? Send replies to Herma Clark, CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

Chicago Guests Enjoy Informal Life in Florida

Spring Colony in Palm Beach Goes In for Bathing, Simpler Pleasures.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—[Special.]—The spring colony in Palm Beach includes many Chicagoans of prominence who are thoroughly enjoying the bathing and informal social life which now prevails. Many of them attended the dinner dance at the Sailfish club of Florida last week, where prizes were awarded for the winners in the annual winter fishing contest held annually from Dec. 15 to March 31. The top prize was a beautiful silver platter donated by Col. Edward R. Bradley.

Miss Althea Tevander and her schoolmate, Miss Erna Hurlbert, concluded their stay here with Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Nelson Tevander and returned to Briarcliff, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Tevander, who are remaining here until May 1 at their new villa on Barton avenue, will not open their town house in Chicago, but proceed from Palm Beach directly to their country place at Lake Geneva, Wis. Mrs. Earl Hastings Deakin of Chicago also remains here at Moonbeam Villa, and goes directly to her summer home in the Wisconsin lake country.

Mrs. Harry L. Thomas, who has been absent in Chicago for a few days, expects to return this week, bringing a friend to visit her through Easter. At the farmers' costume barn dance, held Thursday at the Everglades club, Mr. Thomas as a typical reuben captured the first prize, an active young razor back pig, who answers to the name of Adolph and will be made a family pet.

Guest at Luncheon Party.

Mrs. Roy Brodhead Meredith of Chicago, who will be here until June on account of her little son's accident, was among luncheon guests of Mrs. Frank Quigley of Cleveland, who entertained at the Everglades club on Thursday with a bridge and contract party.

Mrs. MacKay Le Roy, who spent the season at the Breakers, was winner of one of the four silver cups awarded as season trophies in the Hotel Breakers duplicate contract tournament held there recently.

Charles M. Hayes is playing much golf at the Everglades club and Palm Beach Golf club, where several members of the Old Guard's Chicago golfers still are playing regularly.

Mrs. Olaf N. Tevander entertained at a luncheon for twelve at the Beach club this week. She also had a group of young people for the farmers' dance, in honor of Miss Althea Tevander. She also gave a tea for fifty guests at her villa last Saturday.

Chicagoans in Pasadena Spend an Active Week

PASADENA, Cal.—[Special.]—The last week set a record for new additions to the Chicago colonies at the resort hotels here and resulted in unusual social activity.

Dr. Franklin M. Martin, director general of the American College of Surgeons, and Mrs. Martin of Chicago arrived at the Huntington after motoring across country, while prominent among new arrivals at the Vista Del Arroyo were Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Perkins of Chicago, and Mrs. Charles H. Barry and Mrs. E. W. Coburn, both of Evanston. Mr. and Mrs. Alex R. Carqueville of Highland Park are new guests at the Huntington.

Many luncheons and dinner parties featured the week, among the Chicagoans acting as hosts and hostesses being Mr. and Mrs. Frank Low, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Brown, and Mrs. Bernard A. Eckhart.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Brown, who passed the winter at the Huntington, gave an informal luncheon Monday as a farewell to friends before returning to Chicago. Mrs. John Barber, who is rejoining her husband in Chicago this week, was the honored guest at a luncheon Wednesday given by Mr. James R. Brehm.
